Spain's Honorary Mayor From Chapel Hill

Reprinted, with permission, from The Chapel Hill Weekly, Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Zalamea de la Serena goes back to Roman times, three centuries or more before Christ. Some people believe that it was founded by the Greeks before that. It has a pair of Roman towers, unlike any others in Spain. One of the important battles of the First Punic War was fought nearby. It has a Moorish castle that was captured by the Christians in 1188. Zalamea was made famous in the world of letters by one of the most notable of Spanish plays, The Mayor of Zalamea by Calderon de la Barca.

And yet, this interesting city of some 9,000 inhabitants in the Province of Badajoz in Southwestern Spain (Extremadura) is seldom, if ever, visited by tourists. Why? It is not on any railroad line, or on any main highway. You can't find it on the map, unless the map is a big one, and you have a magnifying glass to make out the fine lettering. But the city is there, all right, as this article can testify.

But first, a little background. Back in 1959 the students in my class became enthusiastic over an interpretation of Calderon's play and they wrote to the Mayor of Zalamea. The letter must have been pretty well written, for the City Council (Ayuntamiento), in full sessions, elected me — this is hard to believe — Perpetual Honorary Mayor. In due time a beautiful hand-lettered parchment was received making known the election, and with it the staff of office (vara) of the mayor himself. The election could not have been more official.

It was not possible to go to Zalamea and "take office" until this year. The proper time for the Honorary Mayor to make this appearance, so the real Mayor said, was from September 13 to September 21, when fiestas and ferias would be held. These date back over three hundred and fifty years.

Getting there would have been something of a problem, had it not been for my colleague, Bill McKnight, who had been traveling all over Spain in a sort of bus, known by the familiar name of Volkswagen. By the time of our departure from Madrid, his family had gone back to North Carolina and he acted as guide, chauffeur, adviser, and astronomical navigator over what is perhaps the greatest variety of roads known to man.

We stopped for the night at a little town called Don Benito, where we received cordial greeting from the Mayor, who had been informed of our arrival by the Mayor of Zalamea, Don Nicasio Fernandez-Blanco.

We had been instructed to meet Don Nicasio at a cross-road five kilometers from Zalamea. Since we did not know how long it would take, over uncertain roads, we made an early start and arrived a half hour early. We had hardly alighted when Don Nicasio and his cousin, Don Anselmo Fernandez-Blanco, arrived. Don Anselmo had been Mayor of Zalamea when the election of the Honorary Mayor took place. Cordial greetings and abrazos (embraces).

We told Don Nicasio that it had been our intention to come in two Cadillacs, so as to make the proper impression, but that, unfortunately, the Cadillacs had not arrived from the factory. Consequently, so we said, we were forced to come in a "truck." This joke, bad as it was, broke the ice. There wasn't much ice at this steaming point in the road on one of the hottest days of the year. And in the Province of Badajoz in Extremadura, the land of the conquistadores, the temperature really goes up in summer.

The Honorary Mayor was invested with the Key to the City, which hung around his neck with a golden tasseled cord. Don Nicasio had brought his own staff of office for me to carry, but I explained that I already had one, that I had brought mine all the way from Chapel Hill. This was the Real McCoy, because now the Mayor and the Honorary Mayor could each appear officially and with the proper dignity.

When the procession of two cars arrived at the principal square, appropriately named for Calderon de la Barca, the townspeople were waiting for us by the City Hall, with big banners saying BIENVENIDO (Welcome) held up by young enthusiasts. Prolonged clapping of hands, and shouts of Vitor (Victor).

We made our way through the crowd with no little difficulty into the Session Hall, which filled up right away, with people standing wherever they could. The Honorary Mayor's place on the platform was an ancient oak and leather chair, between the Mayor and the parish priest. Mayors from adjoining towns sat at the side, or in front. When some semblance of order prevailed, the real Mayor rose to speak (applause); then he presented the Honorary Mayor (more applause); then the Honorary Mayor spoke, greatly moved by so much attention (still more applause).

The Honorary Mayor and the Mayor of Zalamea de la Serena.

The session closed with the presentation of a recording of the play The Mayor of Zalamea and a beautiful leather case, with the history of the town and pictures, inscribed "Al Ilustrísimo Senor Don Sturgis E. Leavitt Alcalde Perpetuo Honorio de Zalamea de la Serena (Badajoz), 1964."

After this was over, we made our way down the aisle, shaking hands all along the way. The next act was a vinio, where the Honorary Mayor sat between Don Nicasio and the priest. In front of us was a table loaded with refreshments — cakes, ham, cheese, sausages, nuts, and drinks of all kinds.

As we ate, groups of boys and girls, dressed in sixteenth-century costumes, serenaded us with traditional music. All the time, more refreshments, literally forced upon the two guests. It was hard to keep count. Then, flash bulbs and pictures, with the two Americans surrounded by pretty girls.

After this more shaking hands, and out to the square for fireworks and dancing. It was reported in the paper that the Honorary Mayor "honored" the city by dancing with the girls. It was the other way around.

We left the dancing in full swing, early, that is, at 11:30, and proceeded up the street with the Mayor and his friends, shaking hands all the way, and escorted by members of the police force. Dinner at a magnificent private home lasted until 1:30.

The next morning the Honorary Mayor attended a special religious service and sat with the Mayor at a place of honor beside the high altar. Then came a tour of the city, an elaborate lunch at another private home, visits to a nearby irrigation project and housing development. Then a dinner, before which the Honorary Mayor made a speech to the fifteen guests present, and presented the real Mayor with a gavel made from the Davie Poplar and a scroll with greetings to the City Council from Chancellor Aycok and President Friday.

More attentions followed on the next day, and finally many fond good-byes. Don Nicasio accompanied us to the Provincial Capital, Badajoz, where he introduced us to the Governor and other high officials. Don Nicasio had to stay at Badajoz for a meeting of alcaldes of the province, and we went back to the hotel to pay our bill. Just as had happened in Zalamea when we tried to pay for anything, the clerk refused to take our money. The bill had already been paid.

Needless to say, Zalamea de la Serena will not be forgotten by the two Chapel Hillians who were there in 1964. Maybe, though, this did not happen after all. It must have been a dream.

The Youthful Department of Psychology

Bowdoin's three-man Department of Psychology consists of Assistant Professors L. Dodge Fernald, Jr. (who is 35 years old), Alfred H. Fuchs (who is 32), and Haratune H. Mikaelian (who is 31). Professor Fernald, Chairman of the Department since 1963, is a 1952 graduate of Amherst College, with a master of education degree from Harvard and his Ph.D. from Cornell. He came to Bowdoin in 1961 and is President of the Maine Psychological Association. Some of his fields of interest are the Rorschach Tests (ink blot tests), tests for brain injuries, and programmed materials for teaching machines. He has coached the soccer, skiing, and lacrosse teams at the College.

Professor Fuchs was graduated from Rutgers in 1954 and received his master of arts degree from Ohio University and his Ph.D. from Ohio State. He came to Bowdoin in 1962. His main fields of interest within his general area of study are verbal learning and short-term memory, motivation, perceptual-motor skills, and theories (schools) of psychology.

Professor Mikaelian is a native of Syria, where he received a junior college diploma in science from Aleppo College. A 1958 graduate of Boston College and a Ph.D. candidate at Brandeis, he came to Bowdoin in 1961. One of his main fields of interest concerns the human ability to coordinate vision and motion. He is conducting experiments which seek to demonstrate that visual motor coordination — the ability which we possess to respond almost automatically with hand or other body motion to what we sense — is an acquired characteristic, not one with which we are born.

PHILIP C. BEAM, Henry Johnson Professor of Art and Archaeology

THE purpose of this Seminar is to explore a special aspect of the history of art — the role of the artist as a social commentator and critic, as distinct from his role as landscapist, still-life painter, religious symbolist, or abstractionist. The term "social" is meant to focus attention upon the illustration and interpretation of the emotional attitudes exhibited by human beings in their behavior toward each other, as these have appeared in works of art. The expressions "commentator" and "critic" have been adopted to indicate the responses of artists to this behavior.

The historical time span covered will be from the fourteenth century to the present day, when artists obtained for the first time the individual freedom of expression which is necessary for social comment and criticism on any widespread basis. At the same time the Western world was torn by almost universal social upheavals — the Reformation, the period of revolutions, and the World Wars of our own century. Yet the dislocations and disruptions which they created inspired the greatest period of critical evaluation in the history of art.

Listed below are examples of the works of art to be studied:

1. Brueghel: "Parable of the Blind," "Road to Calvary," "Slaughter of the Innocents," "Dance Under the Gallows," "Justicia."
2. Hogarth: "Rake's Progress," "Harlot's Progress," "Marriage à la Mode," "Election Series."
3. Goya: "Execution of the Madrilenos," "Disasters of War," "Los Caprichos."
4. Daumier: "The Uprising," "Three Lawyers."
5. Toulouse-Lautrec: "Salon dans la Rue des Moulins," "Au Moulin Rouge," "A La Mie."

A Humanities Seminar, open to all students except Art majors.

Richard Wagner

ROBERT K. BECKWITH, Associate Professor of Music
FRITZ C. A. KOELLN, George Taylor Files Professor of Modern Languages

IN this Seminar, offered jointly by the Departments of Music and German, Wagner's work will be studied as the climax of the German Romantic Movement and as a fulfillment of its ideal of "Gesamtkunstwerk." Primary emphasis will be placed on the Wagnerian music, dramatic form, and philosophy. The poetry, the mythological sources, the sociological significance of the Wagner movement, and its political implications will also be considered.

During the introductory period the students will be expected to become familiar with Wagner's biography, the librettos of the operas, the music of selected operas, and the philosophical conceptions of Schopenhauer and Nietzsche.

The basic conceptions of the Romantic Movement will be presented by the instructors.

Topics for independent study will include the following:

1. Richard Wagner's Philosophy: Between Feuerbach and Schopenhauer.
2. Richard Wagner and Friedrich Nietzsche: Admirer and Enemy.
3. The Political World of Richard Wagner: the Revolutionary and the King's Friend.
4. The Heir of the Romantic School: "Gesamtkunstwerk" and the Mythological Past.
5. Richard Wagner's Source Material.
6. Richard Wagner as a Pagan and as a Christian: Wagnerianism as a Problem in Sociology.
7. Chromaticism in Richard Wagner's Music: the Breakdown of the Classical Harmonic System.
8. Wagner and Beethoven.
9. Tristan und Isolde: an Operatic Potboiler?
10. Wagner's Conception of Opera and Drama.
11. Wagner's Use of the Leitmotif.
12. Wagner and Absolute Music: Wagner vs. Brahms and Hanslick.
13. Wagner and Liszt.
14. Bayreuth.
15. The Development of the Wagnerian Leading Woman: a Study of Senta, Elisabeth, Elsa, and Brünnhilde.

A Humanities Seminar, open to all students.

LOUIS O. COXE, Pierce Professor of English

THE purpose of this Seminar is to acquaint students with some of the more significant forms and techniques of poetry in English. On the assumption that poetry is an art for the ear as well as the eye, the attempt will be made to educate students to hear poetry and to learn how and why certain principles of versification work while others do not, why and how experiment becomes necessary and fruitful, how language changes and poetry with it or in advance of it. Although the approach, initially, will be historical, it is expected that by the end of the independent period students will be able to consider the contemporary with the past from an objectively technical view. To that end, a great deal of poetry must be read, and read aloud, as well as silently. Standard scansion, free verse, syllabics, and "prose poetry" will be considered and judged. The more experimental poets of recent years will be

Seminar Regulations

1. Each Senior must take two Seminars, one in each Semester.
2. The Seminars must be outside the major field, and at least one of them must be (and both of them may be) outside the division in which the major lies. For guidance as to eligibility, see the statement at the end of each Seminar description.
3. Seminars are limited to fifteen students.
4. Seminar grades will be "pass," "fail," or "distinction."
5. There are no formal prerequisites for Seminars. Some of the Seminars, however, presuppose a certain level of competence or background knowledge. If the descriptions do not make clear whether a student can manage a certain Seminar, he should consult the instructor for advice before registering for that Seminar.

considered, and an attempt made to assess the validity of the experiments and the potential or actual artistry of the results.

Topics for independent study:

1. A group of poems written by the student, with an accompanying essay on the technical problems met and the kinds of metric or prosodic rationale behind the poems.

2. Music and the composition of verse. A study of the work of such Elizabethan and seventeenth-century poets as Campion and Ben Jonson, to see what effects can be borrowed directly from musical notation.

3. Modern syllabics.

4. William Carlos Williams and the poetry of speech-rhythms.

5. Ezra Pound as experimenter and traditionalist.

6. The war of the anthologies: Classics versus Beats.

ATHERN P. DAGGETT, William Nelson Cromwell
Professor of Constitutional and International Law and Government

THE First Amendment to the Constitution provides that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. . . ." This provision has been described as creating a "wall of separation between Church and State." The Fourteenth Amendment forbids any state to "deprive any person of . . . liberty . . . without due process of law. . . ." Religious liberty, it is generally agreed, is included in the liberty so protected. The purpose of the Seminar is to discover how these provisions have been developed and applied by the Supreme Court.

As a prelude to the investigation of the actual cases themselves, it is well to pause to look at America in the days of the First Congress, which submitted the amendment to the states, at the relation of Church and State in the Colonial and Federal periods, and at the movement for religious freedom in which Thomas Jefferson played so important a part. Important also is the later period when, in defining the meaning of the "liberty" of the Fourteenth Amendment, the Court came to accept the idea that it "incorporated" the detailed freedoms of the First Amendment.

Suggested topics for independent study:

1. Origins of the Amendment: Its Contemporary Meaning.
2. Thomas Jefferson and Religious Liberty.
3. The Established Church in America.
4. The Fourteenth Amendment Takes Over the First.
5. Religious Practices vs. the Law.
6. The State and Intrachurch Disputes.
7. Conscientious Objectors.
8. Symbols and Idols: the Flag Salute Controversy.
9. Instruction in Religious Beliefs.
10. Government Aid to Church-Supported Education.
11. The Blue Laws and Sunday Closing.
12. The Parochial Schools and Compulsory Education.

A Social Studies Seminar, open to all students except Government majors.

Greek Mythology and Living Literature

NATHAN DANE, II, Winkley Professor of the Latin Language and Literature

THE purpose of the Seminar is to explore the origins of Greek myths and their transmission as a vital force in the literatures of both the past and the present. A common background will be acquired from an initial introduction based on a thorough investigation of Hesiod and familiarization with the whole range of Greek myths of antiquity. Particular attention will be paid to the legends of the Golden Fleece, Heracles, Thebes, and Troy. Ancient treatments of mythological themes will be examined as they appear in the Homeric Hymns, Homer, Pindar, and the tragic poets. The Metamorphoses of Ovid will serve to bridge the gap between the world of the ancient Greeks and the eras of modern literatures. Required reading will extend beyond the standard popular works of Bulfinch or Edith Hamilton and will include Lattimore's translation of Hesiod, Humphries' translation of Ovid, and a close understanding of Graves' The Greek Myths.

During the period of independent research each student will concentrate his attention either on the later development of a single myth or on a single author's handling of mythological material. Topics might include, for example, O'Neill and the theme of the Oresteia, Gide as a Neo-Hellenic, Schiller's The Gods of Greece, Mary Renault and the Theseus myth, or any of a host of myths or authors, ancient or modern. Abundant background material for such studies is available in such works as Highet's Classical Tradition, Nilsson's History of Greek Religion, Rose's Handbook, works on Classical backgrounds by J. A. K. Thomson, the prodigious volumes of Sir J. G. Frazer's The Golden Bough, Pausanias, Ovid's Fasti, and Apollodorus. The results of these studies will be presented orally from written manuscripts for seminar discussion and critique during the final four weeks of the course.

The final examination will assume a familiarity with not only the results of the student's own project but also of the material contributed by other members of the Seminar.

No. 6

JOHN L. HOWLAND, Assistant Professor of Biology

THIS Seminar will be concerned with events in the recent history of biology having to do with the analogy between information theory and biological order. It will begin with a fairly descriptive (non-mathematical) discussion of information and information storage, as exemplified by high-speed numerical computers, and will extend to a consideration of problems of control and programming in the biological realm. Specific areas to be included are (1) the meaning of biological order, (2) the genetic encoding problem, (3) biological feedback networks, (4) programs for biological periodicity ("biological clocks"), and (5) the analogy between the digital computer and the central nervous system.

It is hoped that the student will not only gain insight into the relation between order and information but also come to see the relevance of information theory to several topics of general interest, including the theory of heredity, the nature of viruses, cancer (essentially an escape from order), and the structure of the human nervous system.

Possible topics for independent study include the following:

1. The genetic code.
2. The necessity of genetic "mistakes" (mutations).
3. Viruses and biological order.
4. Non-destructive viruses.
5. Cancer: biological disorder.
6. Information and biological specificity.
7. Control of cellular processes.
8. Control of animal populations.
9. Cybernetics and human society.
10. Logical networks and animal behavior.

11. Logical networks and abnormal neurology.
12. Biological clocks.

A Science-Mathematics Division Seminar, open to all students except Biology majors.

No. 7

The Special Theory of Relativity

NOEL C. LITTLE, Professor of Physics, and Josiah Little Professor of Natural Science

THIS year is the quadricentennial anniversary of the birth of Galileo Galilei, and also finds Albert Einstein's special theory of relativity approaching three score years and ten. Nevertheless, there is a current rebirth of interest in the basic ideas of motion in space and time, which these two names epitomize. Laymen, or as C. P. Snow would say, those of the other culture, have the impression that new advances in science throw into discard past achievements. This is not so. Nearly every text on relativity starts with a specification of an inertial system, a Galilean frame of reference. The underlying purpose of this Seminar is to give a "grass roots" explanation of the interrelations of space and time insofar as special relativity can present them.

In the period devoted to independent study, the particular topic to which a participant in the Seminar is assigned will depend upon both his interests and his technical background. The following topics are of great interest and could form the basis of individual study. Topics (7) and (8) are among the possibilities for those without any mathematical or scientific background.

1. The twin paradox.
2. The experimental basis for the theory of relativity.
3. The way in which Bridgeman's operational definition fits the problem.
4. Some of the more general philosophical implications.
5. The geometrical representation for special relativity.
6. A criticism of the translation of some of the fundamental papers on the theory.
7. The effect of relativity on social theory or in literature.
8. An investigation of the recent claim that Lawrence Durrell's novels have a relativistic background.
9. A controversy between Dingle and Poor.

A Science-Mathematics Division Seminar, open to all students except Physics majors.

No. 8

Historical Geography

RICHARD B. LYMAN, JR., Instructor in History

THE aim of this Seminar is to examine the relationship between history and geography by focusing attention on concrete historical cases. Topics will be drawn from the history of Western civilization in the medieval and modern periods, although the territorial and chronological limits may be waived in special cases. Not only political events but also economic, sociological, and cultural subjects make valid and fruitful topics. Geographical factors and influences will be closely correlated with historical occurrences in terms of the principles of human geography, i.e., the interconnection between the physical setting and human activity. Underlying much of the work of the Seminar is the question "Does historical geography provide qualitatively different insights into the cause and nature of historical events than traditional approaches?" Wherever practicable, extensive use will be made of cartographic materials, but technical and artistic abilities are not needed. Written as well as oral presentations are required at the end of the Seminar.

1. The partition of Germany seen as historical geography.
2. Polish access to the Baltic: geography vs. history.
3. The idea of natural frontiers in France.
4. The influence of fiords and leads on Norwegian history.
5. The growth of an English city during the Industrial Revolution.
6. Geographical lore and intellectual history in the early Renaissance.
7. The historical geography of the rise of monasticism.
8. Pilgrim routes in the Middle Ages.
9. The invasion and settlement of barbarian tribes, 400-550.
10. Continuity of communications: Roman roads to railroads in Britain.

A Social Studies Seminar, open to all students except History majors.

No. 9

The Person and the Mind-Body Problem

EDWARD POLS, Professor of Philosophy

THE problem of the nature of man can be focused on in many different ways. It is the central problem of this Seminar, but our focus makes prominent the question of the person and his unity or lack of it. Is the person merely a physical complex, developing in interaction with a physical environment in accordance with physical laws, or is he a persistent entity whose unity is of a deeper and more important sort? When, as in the past, this deeper unity has been affirmed and identified with a soul or mind, its relation to the physical complex called the body has been an immediate problem. Does mind interact with body, and if so how? Does it make use of the body? Or is it merely encumbered by the body? But the problem is just as acute when this supposed deeper unity is denied. How does the physical complex called the brain give rise to functional levels of behavior that common sense recognizes as conscious mind? Can the unity of a conscious personality in action be captured in terms of the unity of a physical complex?

Some possible topics for independent study:

1. The nature of the person in existential thought.
2. The evidence of biology. What can we learn about our central problems from current scientific investigation of brain structure and function?
3. The nature and significance of analogies between the central nervous system and computers.
4. The evidence of language: what, if anything, can analysis of the language we use in talking about "persons," "selves," "minds," "bodies," "consciousness," and so forth tell us about the central problems we are concerned with?
5. The evidence of consciousness: the approach to the problem of person, mind, and body by way of direct introspective experience. (Phenomenology and allied approaches.)
6. Rational (metaphysical) knowledge of the self.
7. The evidence of epistemology: what can investigation of the nature of knowledge tell us about person, body, and mind?
8. The evidence of religion and morality.

WILLIAM C. ROOT, Charles Weston Pickard Professor of Chemistry

THE Mayas developed a civilization in Guatemala and southern Mexico that reached its peak about 800-900 and then declined until the Spanish Conquest in 1525, although survivals are still to be found in the remoter areas. Their civilization provides an excellent example of the growth and decline of a culture isolated from Asiatic and European influences. The Seminar will include the history of the Mayas, the daily life of the people, their religion and government, and their arts and sciences. The anthropology of the present-day Maya Indians will be examined in regard to survivals of the older culture and their reactions to modern civilization.

Since the Mayas had no written language, information about the earlier phases of their civilization can be obtained only from the ruins of their cities and from artifacts and inscriptions found in archaeological excavations. Most of the archaeological reports are in English. Some papers of interest are in Spanish, but a knowledge of this language, while desirable, is not necessary.

Examples of suitable topics are as follows:

1. The origin of the Mayas and the beginning of civilization.
2. A city of the "Old Empire" (Copan, Quirigua, Tikal, and so forth).
3. The Mexican "occupation" of the northern Maya area and its cultural effects.
4. A city of the "New Empire" (Chichen-Itza, Uxmal, Mayapan, and so forth).
5. The life cycle of a Mayan man.
6. The daily life of a Mayan family—costume, food, education, medicine.
7. Government.
8. Religion and the gods.
9. Mayan science—the calendar, astronomy, hieroglyphics.
10. Mayan art—sculpture, painting, pottery, metal work.
11. The Mayan Indians today.
12. Comparison of the development of the Mayan civilization with that of Egypt, Babylonia, or Greece.

A Social Studies Seminar, open to all students.

WILLIAM D. SHIPMAN, Assistant Professor of Economics

THIS Seminar will study the expansion of the American railroad network in the nineteenth century and the contraction of the industry in recent years in terms of both the historical-institutional setting and the economic position, then and now, of the carriers. The subject matter combines the fields of economic history and economic analysis. A primary aim of the Seminar will be to determine how much of the deterioration in rail service has been inevitable in terms of economics and technology and how much is the result of public policies which value special group interests more highly than economic efficiency.

Seminar topics suitable for independent study might include the following:

1. Competition between a specific canal and railroad; for example, the Erie Canal and the (later) New York Central.
2. Politics and economics of land grants to the western railroads.
3. Colonization activities of one or more railroads.
4. Attitudes of railroad promoters toward competition and the public (based, for example, on Cochran's study of nineteenth century railroad leaders).

5. Role of the railroad in promoting general economic development, especially the recent reappraisals of that role by Cootner and Fogel.

6. Legislative history of railroad regulation leading up to the Transportation Act of 1920.

7. Economic effects of some recent and prospective railroad mergers.

8. Unequal incidence in the taxation of transport media.

9. Real vs. money costs of highway transportation.

10. Background of the present work-rules dispute.

11. Subsidization of air passenger transport and its effect on the railroads.

12. Railroads and the metropolitan transport question—study of one or more specific cities.

A Social Studies Seminar, open to all students except Economics majors.

Social Darwinism

WILLIAM B. WHITESIDE, Associate Professor of History

THE impact of Darwinian evolutionary theory upon social thought in the period from 1859 to the present will concern the members of this Seminar. The excitement generated by Darwin and his co-workers and popularizers was not restricted to biology and related sciences. It touched virtually every field of thought. Whether the derivations from evolutionary theory, boldly applied to human society, were valid or not, they appeared in profusion for at least a half-century after the appearance of The Origin of Species.

This was more than a passing fad. Urbanization, industrialization, technological innovations, a widening gap between wealth and poverty, and other fundamental changes in the social conditions of Europe and America were intensely studied and hotly debated by the Social Darwinians and their critics. This Seminar will attempt to develop a deeper understanding of these conditions as well as the response to them.

As the members of this Seminar consider the relationship between science and ideas about society, they will compare the impact of Darwinian ideas with the reception of such scientific developments as the Copernican revolution, Newtonian physics, and relativity during other eras. If the interest in discussing this larger question is keen, one or more optional joint meetings with the members of Seminar No. 7 will be arranged.

Examples of topics for independent study:

1. Conservative Social Darwinism and the Resistance to Reform.
2. The "Survival of the Fittest" and the Reformers: the Rejection of Conservative Social Darwinism.
3. Comparison of a European and an American Social Darwinian.
4. Social Darwinism and Imperialism.
5. Religious Implications: the Social Gospel, Modernism, Fundamentalism.
6. Social Darwinism as a Theme in a Major European or American Writer.
7. Social Darwinism and the Origins of Modern Sociology.
8. Evolutionary Thought and Pragmatism.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Because of the limitations of space, the descriptions of most of these twelve Senior Seminars had to be condensed from the form in which they appeared in a special catalogue published last spring for the benefit of the Class of 1965. The Editor hopes that faculty members and their Seminars have been done no injustice in this process.

The list of Seminars for the spring semester will appear in a future issue of the ALUMNUS.

Campaign An Outstanding Success

"Welcome to one of Bowdoin's finest hours!"

Those were the happy opening words with which Overseer Vincent B. Welch '38 greeted Bowdoin men gathered at the campus on October 16 for a Recognition Banquet honoring all Campaign volunteer workers for their successful efforts in the most comprehensive fund drive in the history of the College. In appreciation, each worker received a framed personalized copy of the Bowdoin Coat of Arms, signed by President Coles.

Mr. Welch, who served as Alumni Chairman for the nation-wide Campaign, began the brief speaking program by introducing Professor Nathaniel C. Kendrick, Dean of the College; Sumner T. Pike '13, President of the Board of Overseers; William D. Ireland '16, Vice President of the Board of Trustees; and Roy A. Foulke '19, Vice President of the Board of Overseers.

Trustee Sanford B. Cousins '20, who served first as Vice Chairman and later as Chairman of the Campaign, was the next speaker. He announced for the record what everyone gathered in the main dining room of the Senior Center already knew — that proud Bowdoin alumni had helped write another bright page in the history of the College and American higher education.

As of that moment, Mr. Cousins reported, the Campaign, which had an original goal of $10 million, had reached a total of $10,230,000. Equally as important, Mr. Cousins noted, was the fact that 42 per cent of Bowdoin alumni participated in the Campaign. He also noted that 85 per cent of the funds raised came from the alumni body.

Mr. Cousins then paid tribute to the Campaign Areas which had exceeded their original quotas. He went on to introduce Robert Duncan of Kersting, Brown, and Co., the College's fund raising counsel, and to give well deserved recognition to Wolcott A. Hokanson, Jr. '50, the College's Executive Secretary and National Campaign Director; and C. Warren Ring, Development Officer of the College.

The next speaker was Trustee Charles A. Cary '10, the original Campaign Chairman, under whose leadership the fund drive was launched. Mr. Cary joined Mr. Cousins and Mr. Welch in expressing gratitude to the hundreds of Bowdoin men whose efforts have made the College's vital goal of leadership in excellence a reality.

"Thank you all," said Mr. Cary, "but don't forget — we've still got a job to do!"

Before introducing President Coles, Mr. Welch paid tribute to the President's leadership and hard work throughout the Campaign.

Expressing his own thanks, President Coles declared, "You have made it possible for Bowdoin to move forward and to pioneer and to be one of the leaders in undergraduate residential education for men. In the words of President Sills, 'The greatest years for Bowdoin are the years that lie ahead.'"

The following day, as they walked beneath the Pines, Bowdoin men and their families could turn in almost any direction and see impressive signs of their College's vitality and progress.

The pioneering Senior Center, once just a dream, was now a magnificent reality. A new library was being erected beside the old one. The steel skeleton of a new gymnasium was taking shape. An addition to the Moulton Union was under way. The interior of Winthrop Hall, where Henry Wadsworth Longfellow lived, was being renovated, and plans for similar renovations to other old dormitories were well under way. Not as visible, but just as real, was the increased endowment for instruction and student aid.

All of these things, which will enable Bowdoin to keep its academic program dynamic in the critical years ahead, have been made possible by the success of the Capital Campaign.

In addition to the heartening support from generous alumni, the College's academic program and plans for the future received the tangible endorsement of some of the nation's leading philanthropic foundations. There have been, to cite a few examples, a $2.5 million matching grant from the Ford Foundation, a $300,000 grant from the James Foundation, $100,000 from the Carnegie Corporation of New York, $75,000 from the Avalon Foundation, and $50,000 from the George F. Baker Trust.

The Ford Foundation Grant

One of the highlights of the Recognition Banquet was the announcement by Campaign Chairman Sanford B. Cousins '20 that barring unforeseen events the College would definitely meet the terms set down by the Ford Foundation to qualify for the full $2.5 million matching grant by the June 30, 1966, deadline.

Mr. Cousins pointed out that approximately $5 million in gifts eligible for matching is already on hand and that an additional $2.6 million has been subscribed. The total of $7.6 million given and pledged is $100,000 more than is required under the terms of the Ford Foundation grant.

However, the College will not receive the full grant from the Foundation until payment is actually made on outstanding subscriptions, and such payment must be on or before June 30, 1966.

New and additional gifts and subscriptions are still needed to provide a reasonable hedge against some inevitable shrinkage or delays in payment of outstanding subscriptions.

Solicitation Ends — Books Remain Open

Although active solicitation for the Capital Campaign came to a close on Alumni Day, October 17, Chairman Sanford B. Cousins '20 pointed out at the Recognition Banquet that the books for the Campaign will remain open through the end of the calendar year, December 31, 1964. The names of all alumni and friends of the College whose subscriptions or gifts are received by that date will be included in the "Honor Roll" which will be a part of the final Campaign Report. Payments on subscriptions may be made at a later date either in lump sum or in installments. Whenever possible, the final payment should be scheduled not later than June 30, 1966, which is the deadline for matching under the Ford Foundation grant.

Senior Center Dedication

by Joseph D. Kamin, Director of News Services

THE COLLEGE'S NEW SENIOR CENTER was dedicated with an impressive program that began Sunday evening, October 18, and continued into Monday evening, October 19.

The ceremonies were opened with a chamber music concert in the main lounge of the Senior Center Sunday evening. The musicians were a quartet made up of members of the Concert Arts Chamber Players, who have given summer chamber music concerts on the Bowdoin campus in the past. The highlight of the concert was the world première of "Divertissement," a work by the distinguished American composer and teacher Ross Lee Finney, who was commissioned to compose it for the dedication. "Divertissement," a modern work in one movement, was played by pianist William Doppmann; his wife, Camilla, a cellist; clarinetist Richard Waller; and Ling Tung, a violinist. Dr. Finney, currently Professor of Music at the University of Michigan, was the guest of honor at an informal reception after the concert.

Dedication day, Monday, began at 10 a.m. with a special trumpet fanfare signaling the start of the formal outdoor exercises in the court of the Senior Center. The fanfare was written for the occasion by Instructor John E. Rogers of the Music Department. With Mr. Rogers himself conducting, the fanfare was played by the Bowdoin Brass Ensemble, including Elmer L. Beal, Jr. '65, first trumpet; Carl D. Hopkins '66, second trumpet; David E. Brewster '66, first trombone; and Charles J. Blumenthal '67, second trombone.

The program was opened by William D. Ireland '16, Vice President of the Board of Trustees, who served as Marshal for the entire dedicatory program. The invocation was given by the Reverend Joseph C. MacDonald '15, D.D., an Overseer of the College and Minister of the Union Church, Waban, Mass. President Coles welcomed the guests, who included official delegates from many of the nation's leading colleges and universities. He said that the Senior Center is a graphic demonstration of Bowdoin's primary concern — "the welfare and development of the individual student."

"This has been the Bowdoin philosophy from the day the first student entered in 1802, and the commitment which we today make assures that it will continue to be the Bowdoin philosophy," the President declared.

Calling attention to the dedicated efforts of the many individuals and groups who changed the Senior Center from a dream to a reality, he continued, "In my own experience, I am aware of no other enterprise which has been so truly and so completely a cooperative venture of Faculty, Governing Boards, alumni, and students. . . . I would mention, in particular, the committees of the Governing Boards and of the Faculty, under the chairmanships of Mr. Charles A. Cary of the Class of 1910 and Professor Athern P. Daggett of the Class of 1925, within which the program was conceived and planned, and the requirements for the facilities outlined."

"No (college) . . . can fulfill its mission by simply repeating its own past; or duplicating the features of the others.

Each college is called upon to do its share of costly experimentation for the common good."

Bowdoin, President Coles declared, "is accepting this command."

The next speaker was Widgery Thomas '22, a Trustee and chairman of the building committee for the Senior Center, who said that Bowdoin's new educational program will foster warm relationships vital to student needs and contributing to self-discipline. He said that the buildings are dedicated to the Class of 1965 and "responsible students who will be here in the future, coming from all parts of the world, who will be the leaders in their chosen fields of endeavor." Describing the new facility as a "beautiful and practical set of buildings," Mr. Thomas noted that they were designed by Hugh Stubbins and Associates, Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., and built by the George A. Fuller Company of Boston and New York and many sub-contractors. He also paid tribute to Robert W. Gleason of Yarmouth, an engineer who has assisted Bowdoin on all new campus construction since World War II.

"These buildings and the concept for their use," Mr. Thomas said, "represent the final result of inspired hard work and close cooperation of President Coles, who originated and directed the project; faculty, administration, and staff; members of the Governing Boards; all who took part in the capital fund drive; alumni; the students; and the many friends of Bowdoin College who have contributed so generously. The purpose of all this effort is to continue to expand the educational policy and traditions of Bowdoin College."

In turning the buildings over to President Coles, Mr. Thomas also cited his associates on the Governing Boards building committee: Trustees William D. Ireland '16 and Charles A. Cary '10 and Overseers Paul K. Niven '16, Louis Bernstein '22, Gerald W. Blakeley, Jr. '43, and Everett P. Pope '41; Professor William B. Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center; Donovan D. Lancaster '27, Director of the Moulton Union; and John F. Brush, Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings.

The President of the Class of 1965, Gerald T. Giesler, responded in behalf of the student body. He pledged the best efforts of his class to make the new program successful and expressed the hope that "this tower will stand as a monument to the spirit and ideals for which it was built."

Professor Whiteside acknowledged that the new Bowdoin program of integrated study and environment has yet to be proved successful. "This experiment may succeed or it may fail," he said, "but we take pride in our rejection of complacency." Discussing the Senior Center Program and its emphasis on extended visits by guest lecturers, Professor Whiteside said, "We invite controversy here. No speaker will be regarded as successful who does not stir the students who hear him."

President Coles introduced the Senior Center architect, Hugh Stubbins, who was applauded for his work, which, in the President's words, "so well reflects the spirit of the educational philosophy underlying the whole concept."

Governor John H. Reed of Maine extended the official congratulations of the State and his personal greetings in a telegram to President Coles, saying, "This historic day will long be remembered in the annals of Maine higher education, and I know that the Bowdoin Senior Center will provide increased opportunities to the students for many years to come."

A telegram was also received from U. S. Representative Clifford G. McIntire H'64, who said that the Senior Center is "widely recognized as one of our country's firsts in education."

WITH THE BAND LEADING THE WAY, the academic procession formed in the courtyard of the Senior Center and made its way to the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall for the academic convocation, which was opened by Mr. Ireland. After an invocation by Mr. MacDonald the Bowdoin Chapel Choir, conducted by Professor Robert K. Beckwith, sang the world première of an anthem entitled "Though I Speak With the Tongues of Men and of Angels," written for the occasion by Professor Elliott S. Schwartz of the Music Department. The Chapel Choir also offered a special Choral Amen, written for the exercises by Edward R. Greene '65.

Professor Whiteside introduced the principal speaker, Dr. Michael Polanyi, Professor Emeritus of Social Studies at Victoria University in Manchester, England. Dr. Polanyi, an internationally known chemist, philosopher, and author, challenged mankind in his address to turn from a belief in only tangible things to a search for truth, justice, and moral integrity. He said that thought should be recognized as "an independent, self-governing force" within the modern mind.

Speaking on the topic "The Modern Mind — Its Structure and Prospects," Professor Polanyi scoffed at those who refuse to recognize and experience "the higher intangible levels of existence." He said, "The modern mind distrusts intangible things and looks behind them for tangible matters, on which it relies for understanding the world. We are a tough-minded generation." But, Dr. Polanyi added, "In spite of our tough theories, our society is more humane than any that has existed before."

The Faculty Marshal for the impressive exercises was Professor George H. Quinby '23. Dean of the College Nathaniel C. Kendrick and Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason, Jr. led the faculty. Professor Burton W. Taylor was Marshal of

After the singing of "Rise, Sons of Bowdoin," the guests made their way back to the Senior Center for a luncheon. Professor Daggett presided, and Professor Paul V. Hazelton '42 introduced the speaker, United States Senator Edmund S. Muskie H'57 of Maine, who told the audience that education is a continuing responsibility of all levels of government. He outlined what he described as "the crisis in American education," declaring that by 1970 public school enrollment will have jumped from the current level of 37 million to 45 million, and the nation will need 1.7 million additional qualified teachers.

Senator Muskie said that Bowdoin, with its pioneering Senior Center Program, is demonstrating "that true conservatism combines the best of the past with a willingness to strike out boldly into the future." Recalling the Bowdoin days of Nathaniel Hawthorne, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, and Kenneth C. M. Sills, and referring to the ever-present Bowdoin Pines, Senator Muskie said, "You have not abandoned the past, but neither have you turned away from the future."

There was an Open House for invited guests in the Senior Center after the luncheon, and at 3 p.m. Professor Whiteside and Mr. Stubbins led an informal panel discussion of the program and physical facilities involved in Bowdoin's educational plan for the senior year. This discussion took place in the main lounge of the Center.

A second performance of the Dedicatory Concert was given in the lounge at 4 p.m., followed by a late afternoon reception.

The closing event was a dedicatory banquet, at which President Coles presided. The principal speaker was Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze, who said that the Senior Center will help Bowdoin continue to produce leaders and "men of general wisdom who . . . make a wholly disproportionate contribution in the world of affairs."

Mr. Nitze noted that the Senior Center "is an attempt to provide one answer to the question of the role which the small liberal arts college can most effectively play in these days of the growth of great state and private universities." He said, "I feel strongly that there is such a role to be played. You and other small but excellent schools are admirably equipped to provide the nation's young men with what I regard as the most important sort of educational experience — a deep background in the humanities and the general sciences, coupled with the toughness of mind necessary to deal responsibly with particulars."

Mr. Nitze continued, "The ideal of education as a part of one's total environment, as a background for his daily life, rather than as a matter to be addressed solely at morning lectures and during evening study hours, is to me particularly valid. A graduate of the Bowdoin Senior Center is likely to recognize that his education must not terminate when he leaves this College, or even when he completes his graduate training in whatever university he may choose. If he is to make a significant contribution in today's complex society, his education must continue to be a part of his overall environment throughout his life."

FOOTBALL ALUMNI WEEKEND

A Football Alumni Weekend was held at the College on Friday and Saturday, September 4 and 5, with alumni from throughout the East invited to return. The schedule on Friday included a reception at the Alumni House, followed by highlight movies of the 1963 season. Breakfast with the squad at the Moulton Union at 7 o'clock Saturday morning preceded a practice session at Pickard Field. After lunch at the Union, alumni met with Head Coach Nels Corey '39 and his staff to discuss Bowdoin's personnel and prospects, its opponents, and its offense and defense. In the afternoon there was another practice session, this time at Whittier Field, followed by dinner at the Union at 6:30.

It is hoped that the Football Alumni Weekend will become an annual event at Bowdoin.

On The Campus

Fall Sports

Bowdoin's 1964 football team had another successful year while the soccer and cross country squads were experiencing building seasons. Coach Nels Corey's gridiron squad compiled a record of 5 wins and 3 losses. The soccer team, coached by Professor Dodge Fernald in the temporary absence of Coach Charlie Butt, won 2 games and lost 7. Coach Frank Sabasteanski's cross country team won 1 meet and lost 5.

The football team, outweighed and outmanned throughout the season, opened with a 38-13 victory over new opponent Worcester Polytech. Bowdoin then whipped Tufts 18-7 and Wesleyan 14-0 before bowing to Amherst 19-18 and Williams 36-6. The Polar Bears defeated Colby 32-6 and Bates 13-6, closing their season with a 22-0 loss to Maine in the last football game between the two schools. The victories over Colby and Bates gave Bowdoin second place in the Maine State Series.

Bowdoin players established four individual and two team records during the season. Paul Soule '66, a halfback, set a new Bowdoin single-season rushing record of 670 yards, with an average of 5.9 yards per carry. Paul, hampered during the latter part of the season by injuries, is virtually certain to break the Bowdoin career rushing record of 1,134 yards sometime next season. His 414 yards gained in 1963, when he was a sophomore, and his 670 during 1964 give him a two-year total of 1,084.

Quarterback and Co-Captain Bob Harrington '65 set a new Bowdoin career record for the most touchdown passes with 16 scoring aials in his three seasons on the team.

Co-Captain Steve Ingram '65, an end, set two new kicking marks. His 40 punts were the most ever made in a single Bowdoin season by one player, and his 1,343 yards kicked set a new record for the highest punting yardage in a single season.

The other two records involved passing. Harrington, quarterback Maurie Viens '67, and Soule combined their talents to post a record 51.2% completion percentage, and Bowdoin's opponents intercepted only 5 Polar Bear passes, a record low.

Although he was injured and unable to play in Bowdoin's last three games, halfback Bill Matthews '65 finished second to Soule in the individual rushing department with 183 yards gained and an average of 3.7 yards per rush. Fullback Bruce Alemian '66 gained 151 yards for a 4.2-yard average. Harrington and halfback Tom Allen '67 both netted 106 yards, and Viens gained 84 yards.

Harrington completed 39 of his 78 passes for a net gain of 480 yards, including 6 touchdowns. Viens completed 21 of 38 passes for 249 yards, including 1 touchdown.

In the pass receiving department, end Jim MacAllen '66 caught 27 for 405 yards and a touchdown. Soule paced the punt and kickoff return departments, running back 14 punts for 202 yards and returning 6 kickoffs for 131 yards. He also led the individual scorers, with 7 touchdowns and 42 points.

Bowdoin outscored its combined opponents 139 to 109 and piled up 120 first downs to 99. The Polar Bear total yardage was 2,216, compared with 1,869 for the opponents.

The soccer squad opened its season with a 3-1 loss to Wesleyan and then suffered defeats at the hands of Springfield 5-1 and Maine 3-1. The team found the range against Lowell Tech, posting a 4-2 victory. Then it lost to Bates 3-2, Colby 4-1, Bates 4-0, and Colby 3-2 in a double overtime. The season ended on a winning note with a victory over Maine 4-1.

Ed Fitzgerald '66 and Charlie Rosenberg '66 shared the individual soccer scoring honors with 5 goals each. Co-Captain Gerry Giesler '65 and Hugh Hardcastle '65 both had 2 goals. The team's other two goals were scored by Noel Leishman '66 and John Doig '65. The assists came largely from wingmen Cy Allen '66, Rosenberg, and Hardcastle. The team, which lost all three of its fullbacks from last year's squad, suffered from lack of scoring punch down the middle but got a lot of valuable experience during the season. Eleven of the 16 goals were scored by underclassmen, offering hope for the future.

The cross country team opened with a 39-45 loss at St. Anselm's, followed by defeats at the hands of Amherst 15-42 and Williams 21-34. The Polar Bear harriers then defeated Colby 24-33 and closed their season with losses to Bates 17-41 and Vermont 17-45.

Bert Babcock '65, serving as cross country captain for the second year, finished first against St. Anselm's in a losing cause. Others who ran well for Bowdoin were sophomores Cary Rea and Stan Cutter.

Nels Corey Resigns

C. Nelson (Nels) Corey '39, head football coach at Bowdoin since 1959, has resigned effective next July 1. He is also coach of Bowdoin's varsity lacrosse team. A member of the coaching staff since 1955, Nels said, "I have decided to give up college coaching for the present. I plan to enter some other field, preferably in education."

Director of Athletics Malcolm E. Mor-

Phi Delta Psi won first place in the interfraternity football display contest as part of the Alumni Weekend activities on October 16 and 17. At the right is shown the new Phi Delta Psi House, formerly the home of Professor Charles T. Burnett. It is located on Maine Street, between the Alpha Delta Phi House and the Mustard House.

rell '24 said, "I am sorry that Nels is leaving Bowdoin. I have always considered him one of the outstanding football coaches in the country."

President Coles said, "Coach Corey has done an outstanding job during the ten years he has been on the athletic staff at Bowdoin, not only in football but also in lacrosse, and earlier with freshman and varsity hockey and freshman baseball. We regret his decision to resign. He is an extremely fine man."

The resignation came at the conclusion of another successful football season, during which Bowdoin won five games, lost three, and finished second in the Maine State Series. In his six seasons as head football coach, his teams won 22 games, lost 20, and tied 1. In 1960 and again in 1963 they won the State Series. The 1963 squad had a 6-1 season's record, a mark unequalled since 1938, when Nels himself was the captain. This success brought him several nominations for New England small college coach-of-the-year honors.

A native of Lynn, Mass., Nels prepared for college at Governor Dummer Academy in South Byfield, Mass. A member of the Class of 1939 at Bowdoin, he was selected for All-Maine honors two of the three years he starred at tackle on the football team. He was also named to the All-New England hockey team as a goalie and played first base on the baseball squad.

Upon his graduation as a mathematics major, he had earned nine varsity letters in these three major sports. In addition, he was President of his class and of Delta Upsilon Fraternity and for three years was a member of the Student Council.

From 1939 to 1942 Nels coached football, baseball, and basketball and taught at the Pomfret School in Connecticut. He then entered the Navy for three years, serving for 25 months as a Lieutenant on Admiral Halsey's staff in the South Pacific. Upon his discharge he coached and taught during the 1946-47 year at Governor Dummer and then joined the faculty of Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield. He was at M.C.I. from 1947 to 1949 and again from 1952 to 1954 after serving as a coach at Colby from 1949 to 1952. During his years at M.C.I., where he also taught mathematics and served as Dean of Boys and head coach of hockey, his football teams never lost to a Maine preparatory school.

When he went to Colby in 1949, Nels became head hockey coach and football line coach. He was appointed head football coach in 1951. During 1954-55 he coached freshman football and hockey at Williams College, where his football team won the Little Three championship and his hockey squad was undefeated.

HAROLD HITZ BURTON 1888-1964

Harold H. Burton '09, an Overseer of the College since 1936 and a retired Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, died in Washington, D. C., on October 28, 1964. Many tributes have been written about him and about his influence upon the life of his fellow citizens, but perhaps the best tribute can be found in his own words. When he accepted the Bowdoin Prize on September 25, 1958, he referred to a lesson which he had learned at the College from the faculty and his fellow students: "This lesson was to use my time and capacities so as best to serve the interests of all humanity. That lifted me out of myself. Even though my part might be ever so small, I gained the inspiration of feeling that I was doing the most I could to advance the best interests of mankind. The horizon was infinitely great."

He also told of picking out, while he was at Bowdoin, five examples of honesty — George Washington, John Marshall, Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Edison, and Theodore Roosevelt. He praised Lincoln for his ability to express the depth of feeling of Americans and to express himself simply, and quoted Lincoln as saying, "As I would not be a slave, so I would not be a master. This expresses my idea of democracy — whatever differs from this, to the extent of the difference, is no democracy."

"In that statement," Justice Burton said, "lies the answer to the totalitarian form of government. The totalitarian does not want to be a slave but is willing to be a master of somebody else who shall be his slave. Until people wish to be neither slaves nor masters, they have not learned the lesson of democracy as Lincoln taught it."

His associates on the Supreme Court wrote of him, just before his retirement, "Justice Burton has regarded his position on the Court as a trusteeship, and has dedicated himself to it wholly and without stint. His indefatigable energies and keen analysis have earned the respect of those who serve with him, and his gentle, understanding, and undemanding nature has earned their deep affection and esteem."

"We can say today of Justice Burton what he once wrote in looking back upon the career of Chief Justice John Marshall: 'As a lawyer and a judge he was pre-eminent for his power of analysis. As a private citizen he was beloved for his simplicity of character.'"

And so we say "Hail and farewell" to Harold Burton, using the words of the citation which President Sills read at Commencement in 1937, when he received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from his alma mater — ". . . honest as the sunlight and brave as they make them. . . ."

ey and baseball coach. Two years later he was named varsity hockey coach and varsity lacrosse coach. In 1959 he was appointed head football coach.

He holds a master of education degree from Boston University. He and Mrs. Corey, the former Kathleen Ann Monaghan of Gardiner, have two sons, Charles and Jeffrey.

Another Year

Bowdoin's 163rd academic year began officially at 11:30 on the morning of September 23, when President Coles presided at the opening convocation in the First Parish Church. But the campus had been a busy place for many days before that. Members of the football and soccer teams returned at the beginning of September; some 25 seniors spent six days guiding more than 10,000 alumni, faculty and staff members, and friends of the College through the Senior Center buildings; other upperclassmen arrived early to prepare for 49 hours of rushing activities.

The Class of 1968 numbers more than 240 men, about 20% larger than the usual entering class, as Bowdoin begins a gradual increase to an enrollment of 925. The freshmen arrived on campus on a Friday morning, most of them accompanied by their parents. At 12 noon President Coles, Dean Kendrick, and Dean Greason welcomed them. At 1:15 they ate lobster stew with the faculty at the Senior Center. From 3 to 4 they took part in a freshman forum with members of the faculty. From 5 o'clock Friday afternoon until 6 Sunday evening they learned at first hand about the fraternity rushing and pledging process. At 7 Sunday night they attended an Honor System assembly, an innovation on the Bowdoin scene. As they registered, they signed a pledge stating, "I understand and agree to abide by the Honor System."

The freshmen started off the next day, Monday, with foreign language placement exams at 8 in the morning, and they kept pretty busy throughout the day. Tuesday was busy too, building up to another innovation at 5:30 p.m. — a chicken barbecue on the Brunswick High School grounds tendered by the people of Brunswick — and a Freshman Smoker at 8 o'clock in the Union.

Wednesday, after the opening convocation, they met with Bursar Tom Libby, College Physician Dan Hanley '39, Director of Athletics Mal Morrell '24, Dean of Students Roy Greason, and Brunswick Town Manager John Bibber. They received their class schedules at the end of the meeting. That night they met with faculty advisers in the fraternity houses to discuss four books which they had read during the summer — Letters and Papers from Prison by Dietrich Bonhoeffer, The Plague by Albert Camus, Six Non-Lectures by E. E. Cummings, and The Human Use of Human Beings by Norbert Wiener.

It may just be that the weary freshmen were eager to start classes — even at 8 o'clock on Thursday morning!

Room and Board Increase

In a letter sent to students and their parents last August, President Coles wrote as follows, "It is the policy of the College to announce any changes in fees as far in advance as possible, so that students and parents may make their own necessary plans.

"Effective with the academic year beginning in September 1965 (one year hence), the rate for room rent will be $187.50 per semester, and for board, $275.00 per semester. The total increase of $40.00 a semester in these two items is necessary not only for the College, but also for the several fraternities, which have found difficulty in meeting their own operating costs at the present level of charges.

Bowdoin's Sea-Going Biologist

WORKING AT THE EDGE of a slippery deck in mid-ocean with angry waves swirling around his feet is an unlikely setting for a college professor — unless he's a marine biologist such as Bowdoin's Dr. James M. Moulton, one of 15 scientists who early this fall completed a 5,000-mile voyage in quest of more knowledge from the sea. The group, working under the direction of chief scientist Richard H. Backus of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, sailed out of Woods Hole on September 1 aboard the new ship "Atlantis II," designed especially for ocean research.

With a 28-man crew in charge of the ship, the scientists worked in shifts around the clock throughout the 35-day trip, taking tests and samples continuously. Their work was interrupted only once, while the ship slipped to the south to avoid the center of Hurricane Ethel.

The main purpose of the cruise was to define the "faunal zones," areas of dense animal life, in the North Atlantic on the basis of current understanding of Gulf Stream circulations. The results of the study will not be known until a good deal of evaluative work has been completed.

To study animal populations the scientists took samples by "midwater trawling," dragging nets at varying depths between the surface and the bottom of the ocean. They also collected the tiny floating plants and animals called plankton at varied levels by smaller nets let out by hand and winch. Water temperature and bottom contours were recorded constantly throughout the trip.

The project was begun near the site of the Thresher submarine disaster, where the crew collected samples of deep water creatures to confirm identifications made from photographs taken by searchers last year. From that area they sailed in an easterly direction beyond the Grand Bank, then north and east, and later turned to the south after following roughly the 10 degree Centigrade line at a depth of 200 meters. The ship refueled late in September at Ponta Delgada in the Azores.

Although each member of the scientific crew had a special field of interest they worked as a team, each doing his share in the principal research.

"Occasionally we encountered schools of whales or porpoises," Professor Moulton said, "and we would follow them, recording their sounds and observing their behavior." When porpoises circled the ship, the scientists watched them through portholes below the surface and could hear them call to each other through the hull.

"At night many tiny organisms in the sea give off 'cold light,' much like the familiar firefly, especially when they are disturbed, and playful porpoises would set them all aglitter. Through the underwater portholes the 'porpoise trails' resembled beautiful showers of stars."

Professor Moulton's own concern is more with the sounds made by fishes and invertebrates than with those made by aquatic mammals. He has studied the "language" of fish for many years and is especially interested in the possibility of controlling the movements of fish schools to make the harvesting of seafoods more efficient.

Dr. Moulton has been a member of the faculty since 1952. He began studying the biological importance of marine animal sounds as a student and became deeply interested in the acoustic biology of fish and crustaceans. In addition to his work in Brunswick waters, he has conducted experiments in the Bahamas, Bermuda, and Australia and has also done considerable work in the Woods Hole area of Massachusetts.

"The new room charge will include provision of laundry service, which will supply each student weekly with fresh bed linen and towels. In the past, most students have subscribed to this service personally by arrangement with a local firm, at a cost of $14.00 per semester. The actual increase in cost, therefore, will be $26.00 per semester."

1965 Football Schedule

Bowdoin has filled an open football date on September 25, 1965, with a game against Tufts, to be played at Medford, Mass. This will enable the continuation of our oldest football rivalry without a break. The complete 1965 schedule is as follows: September 18, Worcester Polytechnic Institute; September 25, at Tufts; October 2, Wesleyan; October 9, at Amherst; October 16, at Williams; October 23, Colby; October 30, Bates; and November 6, Union.

In both 1966 and 1967 Bowdoin will play, in order, Worcester, Wesleyan, Amherst, Williams, Colby, Bates, and Tufts.

Cornell Exhibit

From October 9 through November 22 nearly 50 portraits by Professor Thomas B. Cornell, a member of the faculty since 1962, were on display at the Museum of Art. Last May he received one of the highest awards of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, an award which Director of the Museum Marvin S. Sadik calls "one of the most significant and coveted an American can win."

A graduate of Amherst, Professor Cornell also attended the Yale University School of Art and Architecture. His work is included in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art in New York City, the Princeton University Library (Panofsky Collection), and the Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection. Preferring not to work in landscape or still-life, he deals mainly with portraiture. He is inspired in his work, he says, by a concern for social philosophy.

New Concert Series

Contralto Florence Kopleff was the first guest artist in Bowdoin's new subscription concert series when she sang at the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall on October 21. On November 23 the Curtis String Quartet presented the second concert. The other four will be given on January 12 by the American Brass Quintet, on February 7 by the Camerata of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, on March 25 by the New York Pro Musica, and on May 7 by the Aeolian Chamber Players.

These six concerts compose the Curtis-Zimbalist Concert Series. There will also be four Area-Artist Concerts, the first of which was given on November 6 by organist Malcolm W. Cass '37. The other three will be presented by violinist Andrew Galos on December 13, by soprano Judith Cornell on March 12, and by pianist Richard Roberts on April 15.

This subscription series presents a greatly expanded program of concerts. The variety of offerings is large and the range of musical styles great — from as far back as the 14th century up to the current avant-garde, both vocal and instrumental.

In addition to attending the concerts, subscribers to the entire series are invited to be guests of the College at receptions for the artists, held immediately after each concert. They are also invited to attend a group of lectures on the concerts by members of the Department of Music, informal seminars conducted by the composers of a number of the new works to be performed, open rehearsals whenever possible, and several special events which will be announced from time to time during the season.

In addition to the six Curtis-Zimbalist concerts and the four Area-Artist concerts, there will be three Bowdoin Music Club and two Glee Club programs and eight other musical events during the year. A subscription for the entire series of fifteen concerts, lectures, seminars, and other special events is $17.50 per person. Checks should be made payable to Bowdoin College and be mailed to the Office of the Executive Secretary, Getchell House, 5 Bath Street, Brunswick.

Summer musical activities at Bowdoin will also be expanded and broadened in scope. The concert series by the Aeolian Chamber Players will be associated with a new Summer School of Music, which will begin next July. A chamber orchestra drawn from participants in the school will supplement the regular concerts. As a special feature, the entire program will be climaxed by a one-week festival which will include a number of world premières.

The Summer School of Music will provide training for string and woodwind players in its first year. The curriculum is designed to develop the maturity of young pre-professional instrumental students. There will be private lessons, master classes, and chamber ensemble coaching. The emphasis will be on chamber music, and the works studied will be drawn from a wide variety of styles and periods. The School will be in session for seven weeks during July and August.

Concurrently there will be six weekly concerts by the Aeolian Chamber Players, with the addition of a chamber orchestra for one or more concerts. The seventh week will be devoted to a series of three concerts, each of which will include the première of a new composition.

Further information about the summer program may be obtained from the Department of Music at Gibson Hall.

Other Musical Matters

Present and former members of the Meddiebempsters held their sixth biennial reunion in Brunswick on Alumni Day, October 17, following the Bowdoin-Williams football game. After a smorgasbord dinner at the Stowe House, the current Meddies gave a concert and all the Meddies took part in a traditional "sing-along."

During the month of October the Bowdoin Glee Club was featured on the "Choruses of New England" program carried by the CRB Radio Network. The hour-long Monday night programs included high fidelity tape recordings made during some of the 1963-64 Glee Club concerts.

The Glee Club began its 1964-65 schedule on November 8 with a joint concert in Boston with Simmons College. On November 14 and 15 it sang with Wheaton College, first in Brunswick and then in Norton, Mass. Other concerts scheduled through February are at Camden on December 12, at Thayer Academy in Massachusetts on February 26, with Skidmore College at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., on February 27, in Brunswick with Westbrook Junior College on March 6, and at Hebron Academy on March 8.

The spring tour, to take place from March 26 through March 31, will include concerts in Springfield, Mass., Hartford, Conn., Long Island, N.Y., Brooklyn, N.Y., Philadelphia, and probably somewhere in New Jersey.

Two Tablecloths

Mrs. Kenneth C. M. Sills H'52 of Portland has given the College two damask tablecloths containing the autographs of nearly 200 distinguished men and women. The older of the two belonged originally to author Kate Douglas Wiggin (Mrs. George C. Riggs), who received an honorary degree from the College in 1904 and served as the first President of the Society of Bowdoin Women. Her sister gave the cloth to Mrs. Sills in the 1920's. Mrs. Riggs used to invite her many famous dinner guests to sign their names in pencil on the tablecloth. The names were later embroidered to preserve the signatures as faithfully as possible. The 109 names on this cloth include those of Rudyard Kipling, Richard Harding Davis, and Mark Twain. For many years President and Mrs. Sills used it during Bowdoin dinners which they gave at 85 Federal Street.

In 1930 Mrs. Sills received a second damask tablecloth as a Christmas gift from Mrs. Henry Hill Pierce of New York City, who received a Bowdoin honorary degree in 1933 and whose son, William C. Pierce '28, is currently an Overseer of the College and President of the Bowdoin Club of New York. Two days later Mrs. Sills started a second autograph collection — at a dinner in honor of Randolph Churchill, the son of Winston Churchill. Other names on the cloth include those of actress Maude Adams, novelist A. J. Cronin, poets John Masefield, T. S. Eliot, and Robert Frost, film director John Ford, Ambassador Joseph Grew, Admiral Ernest J. King, Admiral Donald B. MacMillan '98, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, playwright Elmer Rice, Supreme Court Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone, and General Maxwell D. Taylor.

David Schoenbrun Speaks

On October 17 radio and television commentator David Schoenbrun, speaking at Bowdoin on "As America Goes," said that claims by President Johnson and Senator Goldwater have worried foreigners. "According to Senator Goldwater, the American Government was guilty of stirring up the Cuban crisis in the fall of 1962 in order to gain Congressional seats in the election of that year," and "President Johnson and the Democratic spokesmen have accused Goldwater of being an irresponsible warmonger whose policies would push the world over the brink of atomic holocaust."

"The tragedy is," he continued, "that this injury to America's image comes at a moment when our nation has never been stronger, when it has the best record for responsibility in difficult moments of crisis, when our opportunities for prestige — of such importance to the strength of our alliances — are a rich source of hope for peace and have never been greater."

James Bowdoin Day

On Friday, October 9, the College paid tribute to 42 outstanding students at the annual James Bowdoin Day exercises, at which Professor I. A. Richards of Harvard University spoke on "Conduct in Speech." Joe Pierce '65 of Portland — of College Bowl fame — gave the student response.

James Bowdoin Day was part of the Parents' Weekend program, which also included class visits, campus tours, the annual meeting of the Bowdoin Fathers' Association, the football game with Amherst, and a reception at the Senior Center for parents and faculty members. At a special Chapel service on Saturday morning, Professor Ernst Helmreich spoke on the general theme "Stehe auf und sei ein Mann" — "Stand up and Be a Man." He said, in part, "When a son goes to college, he is far more on his own than ever before, and this is as it should be. If the training has been right, he has been prepared for this, but there always remains the delicate question of how much help, support, and direction he should continue to receive. It is not an easy problem to solve, but certainly too rapid a withdrawal of counseling and direction can lead to difficulties, just as easily as can over-coercion and the refusal to let a young man live his own life. The Freshman at the end of the year will return home quite a different young man from when he left. He has not grown away from his home; he has only grown to be a bit more himself."

Professor Helmreich continued, "Independence, honesty, forthrightness, not doing things underhandedly or behind a person's back, not trying always to carry water on both shoulders, willingness to assume responsibility — above all, being true to oneself — all these seem to me important qualities if a person is to 'Stand up and Be a Man.'"

Academic Achievements

Alpha Rho Upsilon Fraternity has won both the Student Council Cup and the Peucinian Cup. The former is awarded at the end of each semester to the fraternity group attaining the highest academic standing. ARU's 51 members had an average of 2.602, followed by the Independents at 2.575. Phi Delta Psi at 2.556, Theta Delta Chi at 2.444, Beta Theta Pi at 2.439, Sigma Nu at 2.414, and Alpha Delta Phi at 2.359.

The Peucinian Cup is awarded to the fraternity whose freshman members compile the highest average. The ARU delegation in the Class of 1967 had an average of 2.720. Beta Theta Pi was second with 2.474, followed by Theta Delta Chi with 2.344, the Independents with 2.333, Psi Upsilon with 2.281, Zeta Psi with 2.139, and Delta Sigma with 2.083.

Psi Upsilon has received the Harvey Dow Gibson Memorial Trophy for having made the greatest improvement in its scholastic standing during the previous academic year. It raised its average above the averages of eight other fraternities which had been ahead of it last year.

Thomas H. Allen '67 has won the Orren Chalmer Hormell Cup for combining an outstanding scholastic record as a freshman with an outstanding athletic record. A halfback on the 1964 varsity football team, he was a member of the freshman football and track teams last year. He is the son of Charles W. Allen '34.

Addition to Crowell Collection

Mrs. H. Augustus Huse of Bath has given to the Masque and Gown 81 prompt scripts used by her late husband, who was for several years a director for the dramatic club, as well as for the Bath Thespians and the Brunswick Dramatic Club. The scripts contain scene plots and director's notes, and 29 of them have individual 'parts' or "sides" for actors. Included is Pudd'nhead Wilson by Mark Twain, in which Mr. Huse played for an uninterrupted run of three years in theaters from coast to coast.

These manuscripts have been added to the Crowell Collection of plays and theatrical memorabilia, which was started as a memorial to Cedric R. Crowell '13 by his friends. The Collection, which has more than 1,000 items, is located in the basement of the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall. Mr. Crowell was President of the Masque and Gown as an undergraduate and was active in community drama for many years in New York while an executive of the publishing firm of Doubleday and Company. In 1958 Mrs. Crowell and their children provided special bookcases for the collection.

Moulton Union Addition

On August 26 ground was broken for a $500,000 addition to the Moulton Union. The expansion project, scheduled for completion by next September, includes construction of some 16,000 square feet of new space. Designed by Steinmann, Cain, and White, which also designed the new Library, the addition is being built by Consolidated Constructors and Builders, Inc., of Portland, which was also the successful bidder on the library and gym projects. The plans provide for a two-story wing, 30 feet deep, running completely across the rear of the existing Union and extending an additional 45 feet to the south, toward College Street and the Zeta Psi House, as well as a recessed two-story wing on the south side. The traditional Colonial style of architecture will be retained, and the familiar front and north side of the Union will remain substantially the same. An open flagstone terrace will be built beside the main lounge on the first floor above the basement addition.

There will be increased facilities for lectures and conferences, a modern cafeteria and separate snack bar, a new kitchen and pantry, additional game facilities, television rooms, a general student activities work room, a campus information center, improved facilities for the Union Bookstore, a college guide service, offices for a variety of student groups, and the all-college telephone switchboard.

Bill Shaw Receives Alumni Award

At the Alumni Day Luncheon in the Sargent Gymnasium on October 17, Director of Admissions Hubert S. Shaw '36 received the second annual Alumni Award for Faculty and Staff. Alumni Council President John Cartland '39 read a citation saying, in part, "Since 1947 you have pursued with energy and devotion the rewarding task of finding, interviewing, and admitting to Bowdoin thousands of young men — as well as the heartbreaking task of rejecting those who could not be admitted. . . . We, your fellow Alumni, salute you for doing so well, with integrity and good humor, an almost impossible job."

The Alumni Award carries with it a special Bowdoin clock and a framed citation. The first recipient, in 1963, was Athern Daggett '25.

Books With A Bowdoin Flavor

KEVIN HERBERT, Ancient Art in Bowdoin College: A Descriptive Catalogue of the Warren and Other Collections; Harvard University Press, 1964; pp. xv and 212; plates xlviii; $6.95.

When Edward Warren wrote that his donations of select items of classical art to the Walker Art Building were in part for "one or two people not yet born," he seemed well aware of the similar line in the College Hymn. Kevin Herbert, with an eye on Thucydides' concept of his own work as a "possession forever," adopts a similar attitude toward the classical collections at Bowdoin. He has produced a descriptive catalogue which should prove a boon to scholars and transient visitors alike. In addition, he so rightly conceives as a third purpose of his publication the needs of students — those who may be supplementing knowledge gained elsewhere and those coming for the first time into contact with the richness of the artifacts of classical and other ancient cultures.

Catalogues by their very nature evoke an image of tediously gathered, dry bits of pertinent data, conveniently arranged, hopefully accurate, but hardly calculated to compete in the higher realms of the imaginative or the aesthetic. To be sure, modern concepts of photographic adornment have done much to enliven such works, a technique not overlooked in the present work, but a catalogue remains a practical tool nonetheless. A review, therefore, should probably primarily reflect the degree of gratitude for the usefulness of a catalogue as a measure of its true value, and Professor Herbert's book indeed merits that gratitude from all three classes of his constituent readers. For the scholar his painstaking method supplies all known information, including measurements, dates, provenience, history, and bibliography, for every item presented. For casual transients he supplies quick and easy reference material and convenient numberings to assist the hurried "museum hopper" on his way. And finally, for students he has enriched the various sections of the work with brisk introductions to the various classifications into which he divides his presentation. These make up significant capsule chapters on Mesopotamia, Egypt, sculpture, pottery, terracottas, bronzes, gems, coins, inscriptions, and so forth, each of which precedes the standard catalogue listing of the objects themselves. Herbert is thorough, genuinely interested in his material, and very serious in these essays, but never dull. He cannot resist, for example, when describing the Cyprian statuettes on page 85, pointing out that "there can be no mistaking their sexual and fertility functions."

The introductory chapter to the whole volume is delightful. In it Dr. Herbert presents a history of Bowdoin's classical collections. It is filled with interesting information about the galleries, the developing policies of the museum, and fascinating vignettes of the personalities of those involved as donors and recipients over the hundred or so years since the familiar huge Assyrian slabs inaugurated Bowdoin's entry into the field of ancient classical art. The Walkers and Messrs. Hammond, Estes, Johnson, and, of course, Edward Ferry Warren become very much alive to the reader.

Inevitably the reader, especially the one away from Brunswick, wishes for more illustrations, despite the forty-eight fine photographic plates in the back of the book. This is sheer wishful insatiability on the reader's part, and to have included more would have been financially prohibitive. As it is, Harvard has again demonstrated excellent workmanship in a handsome volume which will serve many excellent purposes, both on the spot and in the study.

JOHN A. CARPENTER, Sword and Olive Branch: Oliver Otis Howard; University of Pittsburgh Press, 1964; pp. x and 379; $6.00.

Sword and Olive Branch is a full and thorough factual study of General Oliver Otis Howard of the Class of 1850. In it John A. Carpenter, professor of history at Washington and Jefferson College, has produced a compact biography of a man whose career overflowed from distinguishment as a Civil War hero into a career as a Federal administrator and back again to a third career as a peacetime general and Indian fighter.

Howard's early fame came as a controversial figure in the first day of fighting at the Battle of Gettysburg. By some he was blamed for heavy Union losses there, but his placement of his troops in the early stages of that battle was important in achieving Federal victory and he was ultimately formally thanked by Congress for his part at Gettysburg. Transferred to the western theater of war, Howard became General William T. Sherman's chief lieutenant in the campaigns of 1864 and 1865 in Georgia and the Carolinas.

Immediately after the war was over, Howard was appointed by President Andrew Johnson (presumably as the result of an intention expressed by President Abraham Lincoln prior to his assassination) as Commissioner of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands. This Freedmen's Bureau was the chief instrument of the government in helping the freed slaves establish themselves in the early days of Reconstruction. Howard's work for the Bureau and his additional work in furthering the cause of Negro education are the chief reasons for his very considerable historical importance.

As Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau Howard fought for equality with as much vigor as he had fought from 1861 to 1865 to preserve the Union. He had not been a pre-war abolitionist, but from 1865 to 1868 he was the most powerful single force in protecting the rights of the Negroes and in creating educational opportunities for them. He fought for an effective enforcement of the Civil Rights Act of 1866 against both Southern and Northern opposition. His liberal interpretation of the functions of the Bureau were at least partly responsible for the charges of graft that were eventually brought against it. Howard was sometimes inept as an administrator, unrealistic in dealing in money matters, and ineffective among politicians; but he was, above all, honest, and he accomplished much in an almost impossible job.

His old commander had written Howard when he accepted the post as Commissioner in May, 1865:

"I hardly know whether to congratulate you or not, but of one thing you may rest assured, that you possess my entire confidence, and I cannot imagine that matters, that may involve the future of four millions of souls, could be put in more charitable or conscientious hands. So far as man can do, I believe you will, but I fear you have Hercules' task. God has limited the power of man, and though in the kindness of your heart you would alleviate all the ills of humanity it is not in your power. Nor is it in your power to fulfill one-tenth part of the expectations of those who framed the bureau for freedmen, refugees, and abandoned estates. It is simply impracticable. Yet you can and will do all the good one man may, and that is all you are called on as a man and Christian to do. . . ."

Howard himself wrote in a letter to a friend twenty-one years later:

"My glory, if I ever have any, consists in results attained; and the results in the case of the Freedmen's Bureau are, for me, more marked than those of the war. . . . It is a pleasure to know that Institutions of learning like Howard University, Hampton Institute, Atlanta University and others in whose incipency I bore a part, are now constantly increasing in power and influence, and will continue their good work long after I am gone."

As devoted as Howard was to the cause of education, he was even more devoted to the cause of equality for the Negro. He did not believe in segregation or in "separate but equal" and precipitated a crisis in the Congregationalist church which he had helped to found in Washington by insisting on the right of Negroes to full membership. Not only do the institutions he helped to found stand as monuments to his memory; the whole progress of the American Negroes is a tribute to him as well as to themselves.

Howard's great work proceeded from his deep and sincere religious strength. Even in his undergraduate days he described himself as "very pious." In the war he earned a reputation as "the Christian soldier." Later he was widely known as a lay preacher and as a lecturer on religious topics.

On leaving the Freedmen's Bureau, Howard returned to active army life. He was instrumental in bringing about a treaty with the Apache chief Cochise and led the war against the Nez Percé Indians in the Northwest. Late in his career he served a short term as Superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point. He was promoted to the permanent rank of major general in 1886. He was an Overseer of the College from 1866 to 1874 and a Trustee from 1892 until his death in 1909.

Mr. Carpenter's biography of General Howard is based largely on the magnificently full collection of the General's papers in the Bowdoin College Library. The author has done an excellent job in compressing the facts of a long and widely active life into relatively short compass. (The biographical narrative itself is only 299 pages long.) In achieving this brevity, however, Mr. Carpenter has scamped details of Howard's youth and his days at Bowdoin. He has presented almost a bare-bones narrative of the General's Indian fighting, and he has allowed all too little of the old soldier's personality to creep into the narrative. Sword and Olive Branch bears still too many marks of the doctoral dissertation on which it is based, but it is an important Bowdoin book because it is the best available account of one of the College's greatest alumni.

ARTHUR STRATTON, The Great Red Island; Charles Scribner's Sons. New York, 1964; pp. 368; $7.50.

Arthur Stratton has written a fascinating account of his travels in Madagascar in which he combines personal experience and reflection with a vast, sympathetic knowledge of life on the world's fourth largest island. Despite its size, Madagascar is not a land well known to most Americans, and, as the story unfolds, the armchair traveler is exposed to a tremendous collection of information. Great diversity, the unexpected, and the unpredictable are to be found in every realm, from contorted landscapes, peculiar vegetation, and curious animal life to the sometimes chaotic and stormy history of a mixed population.

The Malagasy people are predominately of Malay-Polynesian-Melanesian descent and culture, their ancestors having migrated thousands of years ago across the Southern Seas. There are eighteen distinct tribes with descriptive names — for example, the People Who Do Not Cut Their Hair, the People of the Highlands Where the View Is Wide. Some of the peoples in the coastal areas have African blood; other are descendants of the Arabs. One tribe is primitive, another is noted for its artists and dancers, another in the highlands is skillful at managing terraced rice fields. Members of the Merina tribe, also from the Highlands, are considered the most advanced; they are the former rulers and comprise a quarter of the total population.

Only three per cent of the island is cultivated. The rest consists of wastelands of largely unproductive red lateritic soil, spreading deserts, and rock. Nevertheless, Madagascar is the chief supplier of vanilla to the world. Mr. Stratton takes us on a tour of the hot, steamy north, where French, Chinese, Indians, Créoles, and Malagasy are engaged in the tricky business of growing and selling the green vanilla bean. Then follow the intricacies of negotiation with New York brokers in a fluctuating market. The entire process is fraught with uncertainties, in which the practice of outwitting one's competitors, false orders, price wars, and sudden bankruptcy are factors. Chronic labor shortages and unemployment go hand in hand. The Malagasy generally are not great workers; their needs and wants are so simple that there is little incentive to work — they simply quit whenever the spirit moves them. Besides, the climate does not seem to be conducive to labor in any form.

The island had been "discovered" in 1500 by a Portuguese navigator, and from time to time settlements had been attempted. But the Malagasy did not take kindly to strangers on their land, and no permanent colonies resulted until much later.

One of the most terrible periods in Malagasy history occurred during the 19th century reign of Queen Ranavalona I, the Cruel. It is said that she was responsible for the deaths of more than a million of her subjects in her effort to stamp out all opposition and threat, real and imaginary, to her own power. She herself did not read or write and was suspicious of the educated. Christians were particularly feared and were put to death, while the Queen reverted to a form of ancestor worship. But working throughout this time of horror to bring in French culture and modern ways was Jean Laborde, who had been shipwrecked on the island as a young man and remained to establish factories, refineries, and farms. How he managed to do this is an engrossing story.

The French had long been interested in Madagascar and finally annexed the island in 1896. The old tribal system was dying and was replaced by the French way of life, under the great administrator Joseph Gallieni.

Mr. Stratton discusses in detail the Great Rebellion of 1947 and the accompanying upheaval of the populace. Today the Malagasy Republic is within the French Community and handles its own internal administration.

To this reader, some of the most diverting passages are Mr. Stratton's random encounters, his illuminating conversations with Malagasy, French, Créoles, displaced Germans, and a multitude of others. While in the south he met a delightful group of Norwegian-American Lutheran missionaries who run some twenty-two outposts. He stumbled upon chameleons (two-thirds of all known species are found on the island), lemurs (thirty varieties), and the startlingly grotesque baobab tree. In the Taboo Forest tomb posts are covered with biographical and symbolic wooden carvings.

Observation inspires the author to reflection and the expression of strong opinion on a variety of subjects ranging from the meaning of the "Présence Française," evolution, and the Coelacanth fish to what constitutes "decadence" in art. According to the dust jacket, Mr. Stratton says that he has included in this volume just about everything he knows. For his colleagues and former students at Bowdoin the book offers an excellent opportunity to renew an old friendship. Those of us who have not met the author may feel that we have become quite well acquainted with him by the time we've turned the last page of this "biography of Madagascar." No facts-and-figures, anecdote-laden travel book this, but the story of a far-off land made fascinating and colorful by the subjective narration of an author who tells the tale very definitely the way he sees it and feels it.

NEAL W. ALLEN, JR., Editor, Province and Court Records of Maine, Volume 4: Maine Historical Society, 1958; pp. lxxvii and 427.

NEAL W. ALLEN, JR., Editor, Province and Court Records of Maine, Volume 5: Maine Historical Society, 1964; pp. lviii and 250.

Thirty-odd years ago the Maine Historical Society undertook to publish the early court records of the Province of Maine. As originally planned, the project was to consist of three volumes that would include the court records preserved at the York County Court House for the years from 1636 to 1689. Volume 1 appeared in 1928 and Volume 2 in 1931, both edited by Charles Thornton Libby. Then, after a lapse of sixteen years, Volume 3 appeared in 1947 under the editorship of Robert E. Moody. With this third volume the records were published through 1692, three years beyond the originally determined terminal date, and the project was said to be completed (see Vol. 3, p. vii). Fortunately, however, the project has been further extended by the publication of two more volumes, one in 1958 and another in 1964. These last two volumes are the work of Dr. Neal W. Allen, Jr. '40, Professor of History at Union College. As a result of their publication, early Maine provincial court records are now available in published form to the end of the year 1718.

In both of his volumes Professor Allen follows very much the plan used in the earlier volumes. In each the court records are preceded by lengthy introductions which give excellent descriptions of the court structure of early colonial Maine, considerable biographical data concerning the justices and officers of the courts, as well as good descriptions of the beginning and development of the professional bar. In addition, both volumes are placed in their proper historical perspective by discussions of conditions as they existed on the Maine frontier, which then consisted of York County.

As for the court records themselves, it is inevitable that they should display quite a bit of dirty linen from which, if it is viewed narrowly, one can get a distorted idea of the society to which the records relate. But, as Professor Allen points out, court records are important sources for the historian (see Vol. 5, p. xxxix). They give a realistic view of the comings and goings within the community — not solely the comings and goings of those who are recorded in history because of their positions and importance, but also of many others, particularly of some who perhaps are not as reputable as the majority of the population, but who are often much more colorful. For instance, there are several references in these records to Black Will, Jr., a mulatto who not only maintained the reputation for promiscuity that his father had established before him, but whose very appearance was very much of a surprise to everyone, even to his mother, who had accused one John Metherell of being the father of her unborn child. However, when the child was born, it was quite evident that the father was a Negro rather than Metherell.

Most of the civil litigation recorded related to the sale and possession of land, which is characteristic of any rural, frontier community. On the criminal side, the records indicate that people had the same weaknesses then that they do now, but that they were treated differently by the courts. Sexual offenses, which outnumbered all of the others, were invariably punished by whippings of seven, eight, ten, or even twenty lashes on the naked back. For giving birth to a bastard child, a woman could have her choice between receiving eight or ten lashes on the naked back or paying a fine of thirty or forty shillings. But, whatever the choice, she still had to pay court fees. Other offenses such as cursing or swearing and drunkenness were usually punished by a fine which was ordered to be paid to the poor of the locality. Failure to attend public worship on the Lord's day was also considered to be an offense which was punishable by a fine of which the poor of the community were again the beneficiaries. There are also a number of entries which indicate the beginning of administrative law. These are the entries that were made when the court granted permission to keep a public house of entertainment, to serve strong drink, to hang a gate for one year on a new highway laid over private land, or to keep a ferry over the York River. The present-day counterparts of such matters are handled by regulatory agencies of one type or another rather than by courts of law. The procedures used then were simpler than those used today, but they were adequate to assure a well ordered society on a frontier that existed under the constant threat of Indian attack and experienced frequent wars that were the repercussions of the armed conflicts of Europe.

Like the editors of the first three volumes of the Province and Court Records of Maine, in Volumes 4 and 5 Professor Allen has made a valuable contribution to the recorded history of Maine. As he indicates in the introduction to his most recent volume, much still remains to be done, particularly for the early and middle years of the eighteenth century. Perhaps, before very long, he will again apply his scholarly talents to the records of these years and further enrich the published material that relates to Maine's colonial past.

BASIL GUY, The French Image of China Before and After Voltaire (Studies on Voltaire and the Eighteenth Century, vol. XXI): Institut et Musée Voltaire, Geneva, Switzerland, 1963; pp. 468; 60 Swiss francs.

In this book Professor Guy has tackled a fascinating subject, broader and more complex than the phenomena of French anglo-mania or the cult of the Noble Savage: the impact of an unfolding and variously idealized image of China on French minds and tastes from the Renaissance to the Revolution, with particular concern for the multifarious manipulation of the image by 18th-century French writers in that age of feverish polemic. The subject involves the gradual growth in France of acquaintance with Chinese history, religion, morality, and politics, for which the author rightly gives pride of place to the writings of the Jesuit missionaries, deformed though they were by concerns of propaganda and by the Society's own censorship in the face of condemnation by Rome. It embraces the dramatic seizure of this knowledge by the sceptics, free-thinkers, and philosophes to turn the evidence against the Jesuits, at once discrediting Biblical authority by the use of Chinese chronology and creating the image of the Chinese sage — in fact, of a whole nation of Chinese sages, where a merging of natural morality and political morality enabled wisdom, justice, and tolerance to reign supreme in a manner that put France to shame. The subject evolves through the later manifestations of this sinophilia among the Physiocrats, even as a sinophobic reaction was setting in (led by Grimm, Diderot, and Rousseau), and the eventual fading of the idealized image with the advance of scientific sinology and other preoccupations. It includes as well the curiously and charmingly distorted reflections of the image of China in the arts and in imaginative literature.

It would be hard to improve on Mr. Guy's plan of presentation of this many-faceted subject in a single monograph. The order is of necessity basically chronological, and yet certain centers of interest are quite properly treated en bloc. Notable among these is the central Chapter V devoted to "Voltaire sinophile" — for, despite the title, a sixth of this book is devoted to the French image of China in Voltaire as well as before and after him. This obviously involves retrospect and anticipation, as Voltaire's preoccupation with China spans his long lifetime, but few readers would wish this material dispersed. Similarly one is grateful for the consolidation in Chapter IV of most of the discussion of the varied aspects of Chinese exoticism in the arts. This delightful chapter, incidentally, including an account of the not unrelated chinoiseries to be found in early 18th-century imaginative literature, gives an impression of being the most straightforward and best written in the book, free of the stylistic obscurity which elsewhere from time to time slows a reader down unnecessarily. Four full-page half-tone plates lend visual support to the author's demonstration of the way China stirred the imagination as well as the mind.

The complexity of this study leads me to underline what to my mind is its principal weakness: whether the fault of author or of editor, there is no index of proper names. Expert as Mr. Guy is in directing a formidable cast of characters, many of them keep reappearing, and it is frustrating not to be able, without laborious search, to locate the earlier reference to which even a careful reader needs to turn back. And what will not be (if I may borrow one of Mr. Guy's rhetorical mannerisms) the disappointment of a scholar who may, legitimately, wish to use this volume as a work of reference without reading it through? The subtitles of chapters in the table of contents are of some assistance, but far too imprecise to make up for the lack of an index.

One might quarrel with some of Mr. Guy's interpretations, such as the importance he attributes to Chinese history as a determining influence on Voltaire's thought, where this reviewer would see, even in the Essai sur les mœurs, little more than a brilliant use of grist for a mill already turning. On the whole, however, the author is modest in his analyses and invites further investigation on debatable matters. One is constantly aware of his concern for accuracy in documentation as well as of his appreciation of the far-reaching implications of his subject beyond the limits he has set himself.

Not the least of the services rendered by Mr. Guy is the definitive repertory of published writings dealing with China in this period, provided in the listing of primary sources, often with useful explanatory notes, which occupies 19 of his 26 pages of impeccable bibliography. It is followed by a valuable selective list of earlier studies relating to the subject, among which this book now takes a place of honor.

Faculty

Of Poetry and Power, edited by Erwin A. Glikes and Paul Schwaber, with an introduction by Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.: Basic Books, New York, 1964; pp. 155; $5.95.

Of Poetry and Power is, as its subtitle tells us, a collection of "Poems Occasioned by the Presidency and by the Death of John F. Kennedy." The selections vary in tone from unconsolable grief to vengeful anger, from the melancholy to the macabre. Just as many Americans felt on that tragic November day that a piece of each of us died with him, a number of the contributing poets identify closely with the late President, such as William Butler: "I too am dead"; Adrien Stouderberg: "We were all passengers in that motorcade"; and Lewis Turco: "You were and are ourselves." It has been said that President Kennedy gave to Americans a sense of youth, vitality, and purpose; but with his death we somehow aged again. This feeling is expressed by G. S. Fraser, ". . . no more young men in the world, / The old men troop to honor him."

Some pay tribute to the woman who turned the tragedy of Dallas into a triumph of dignity and majesty — the valiant Jacqueline. Will Inman says of her, "And when she strides / soul uplifted / with unbrazed eyes, / his coffin cannot contain him." Philip Booth, a former member of the Bowdoin faculty, depicts her walking on the lonely beach at Hyannisport on Thanksgiving, 1963, while "The muffled sea drums slowly on her heart." He says that she now may "finally weep, this night of our dark thanks."

While a few in their shock and despair can find no comfort and see his death as useless and final, to Ralph Gordon "Death draws from a man / All but the light he has won." Jerome Rothenberg, on returning from Arlington after the burial, finds that "The way back is dense, but clear. / You have returned with me." If the President's death is not to be in vain and if his life is to give up hope and inspiration, then, as W. H. Auden warns us, "Remembering his death, / How we choose to live / Will decide its meaning." The spirit of John Kennedy shall not die, if the American people choose not to let it die.

Some of the poems evoke poignant memories of the man as he lived; others paint vivid — and at times gruesome — pictures of the way in which he died, and explore the dark recesses of the killer's mind. I prefer to remember how he loved life and not how he met death — how he "embodied the air where democracy stood tall" (John Tagliabue), how he brought "a healthy radiance to sick times" (Robert G. Tucker). I want to think of the man, as Richard Eberhart describes him, "Who loved mankind, who strove for peace." One of my favorite lines is from "For John Kennedy of Harvard" by Edward Pols, Chairman of Bowdoin's Philosophy Department: "A man who wore that humor in his face." Professor Pols recalls their freshman days together at Harvard and how the young Jack Kennedy "seemed to own the place." He believes that even though President Kennedy was "still half-symbol, / Being given so little time," his "bright incontinent essence . . . still contrives / Some reason, measure, humor in our lives."

There are seventy-nine poets represented in Of Poetry and Power. Of the eighty-three poems in this volume, only about fifteen would appeal to the average reader. Many of the selections will be appreciated mainly by other poets who can understand the esoteric and sometimes obscure symbolism. While a few have true beauty and power and "touch a familiar chord," many others are almost nauseating in their clinical descriptions of the President's wounds and disgusting in their hate-filled rantings. If the book was intended to be a tribute to John Kennedy, then in my opinion it has failed. I do not believe that in toto it is the kind of tribute he would have liked. He would not want us to dwell upon the gory aspects of his death or to be plunged to the depths of despair and consumed by bitterness.

His own words in a memorial book written about his older brother give the best testimony to the way he would have us remember him: "There is a completeness to Joe's life, and that is the completeness of perfection. His life as he lived, and finally as he died, could hardly have been improved upon."

"And through it all, he had a deep and abiding faith — he was never far from God — and so I cannot help but feel that . . . 'death to him was less a setting forth than a returning.'"

Notes

The College has received from Mr. Vernon A. Howard a copy of the text of his Doctor of Philosophy dissertation, submitted to the Department of Philosophy at Indiana University, August, 1964, entitled The Academic Compromise on Free Will in Nineteenth Century American Philosophy: A Study of Thomas C. Upham's "A Philosophical and Practical Treatise on the Will (1834)." The 160-page typed manuscript concerns the work of Thomas C. Upham, Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy from 1824 to 1867. The senior member of the Department of Philosophy at Indiana is Professor Newton P. Stallknecht, for many years a member of the faculty at Bowdoin.

Instructor in English Herbert R. Coursen, Jr. is the author of three forthcoming articles. They are "The Poetry of Matthew Arnold," Studies in English Literature; "The Sub-plot of A Woman Killed with Kindness," English Language Notes; and "In Deepest Consequence: Macbeth," Shakespeare Quarterly.

Professor Lawrence S. Hall '36, who is Chairman of the Department of English, is the author of two recently published articles. "Isabella's Angry Ape," a criticism of Shakespeare's play Measure for Measure, appeared in the October, 1964, issue of the Shakespeare Quarterly.

The November, 1964, issue of The Skipper, a yachting magazine, carried the first of three sections of Professor Hall's "Yankee on a Rebel River," an account of his voyage down the Mississippi in the spring of 1962 in a Grand Banks dory named "Way Out."

Herman R. Sweet '31, a member of the Department of Biology at Tufts University, is the author of "Start an Orchid Collection for $25," an article which appeared in the November, 1964, issue of Horticulture.

Roger Howell, Jr. '58, Assistant Professor of History at Bowdoin, is the author of Newcastle and the Puritan Revolution, which will be published by the Oxford University Press sometime in 1965.

Alumni Clubs

ANDROSCOGGIN COUNTY

Club President John Wheaton '58 announces a new program of Club activities. There will be regular luncheon meetings, on the second Tuesday of each month, beginning on January 12. Professor Athern Daggett '25 will speak that day, to be followed by Dean of Students LeRoy Greason on February 9, Senior Center Director William Whiteside on March 9, and News Director Joseph Kamin on April 13. Tentative plans call for an annual stag sports night, on Tuesday evening, February 16, and an annual spring ladies' night and dinner, on Tuesday evening, May 18.

BATH-BRUNSWICK

On Sunday, October 4, the Bath-Brunswick Club sponsored an informal reception for those members of the faculty and staff who have joined the College in the past five years. Bruce White '22, a Director of the Club, served as chairman of the reception committee for the gathering, held at the Alumni House from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The Club held its annual fall dinner meeting on Wednesday, October 28, and once again entertained as special guests guidance counselors and subfreshmen from schools in the Brunswick area.

The program began with a guided tour of the campus at 4:30 p.m. The schoolboys and their counselors then met Professor William Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center, who explained the Senior Program and conducted the group on a tour of the Center's facilities.

A 6:30 social hour for alumni and guests at the Alumni House was followed by dinner in the main dining room of the Senior Center. Club President George Erswell '47 presided at a brief business meeting, announced the tentative date for the spring meeting (Wednesday, May 12), and introduced Secretary-Treasurer Pete Fortin '37 and Alumni Council Member Emerson Zeidler '20, both of whom reported briefly. Prospective Students Committee Chairman John Caldwell '47 spoke of the importance of the subfreshman meetings, both to the College and to prospects from the area.

The principal speaker was Professor Nathan Dane, II '37, who spoke movingly about the progress that Bowdoin, "a conservative college in the State of Maine," is making.

The meeting concluded with a drawing for a Bowdoin Chair, which was won by Mr. Louis McCafferty, an alumnus of the University of Maine and a guidance counselor at Brunswick High School.

BOSTON

Following an executive committee planning session at the Hotel Statler on September 14, each Club member was mailed a detailed program for 1964-65. The successful monthly luncheons continue. On October 13 John Volpe, Republican candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, spoke, and on November 10 Director of Admissions Hubert Shaw '36 was the guest.

The luncheon speakers scheduled for the remainder of the year are advertising executive Ed Chase '38 (January 12), Biology Professor James Moulton (February 9), Edward Logue of the Boston Redevelopment Authority (March 9), Winthrop Walker '36, banker and Member at Large of the Alumni Council (April 13), and Psychology Professor L. Dodge Fernald, Jr. (May 11).

The Boston and North Shore Clubs are co-sponsoring the annual stag sports night on Monday, November 30, beginning at 5:15 p.m. at the Midtown Motor Inn, 220 Huntington Avenue. A social hour, a buffet supper, and football movies will be followed by the Bowdoin-Northeastern hockey game nearby.

The dates have also been fixed for the annual spring dinner and ladies' night (Friday, March 19) and the annual "Bowdoin Night at the Pops" (Thursday, May 13).

Boston-area alumni interested in working with the Prospective Students Committee are invited to contact Club Vice President Bob Delaney '55 at Liberty 2-5430 or 655-2675.

BOWDOIN TEACHERS' CLUB

On Thursday evening, October 1, approximately 15 alumni and guests gathered at the Tarratine Club in Bangor for a six o'clock social hour and dinner at seven. The meeting of State-of-Maine Bowdoin educators was held in conjunction with the annual convention of the Maine Teachers' Association.

The special guest from the College was Professor Paul V. Hazelton '42, Chairman of the Department of Education and former Assistant Director of Admissions. Just back in this country from a year's sabbatical leave (spent largely in Great Britain), he spoke on "The Conscience of the Rich" and brought the latest news from the campus.

President Coles is flanked here (at the left) by Portland Bowdoin Club President Dave Osgood '53 and Secretary-Treasurer Charles L. Hildreth, Jr. '53.

Bowdoin educators in Maine and elsewhere are now planning for the annual campus meeting of the Club on Saturday, April 24. A detailed announcement of the program will be made later.

BUFFALO

George Craighead '25 reported on August 13, "Late on the stormy afternoon of August 12, a quick pick-up group of local Bowdoin alumni were guests of Ed Milner '31 on his trim cruiser Anjac V for a trip down the fast and white-capped Niagara River. Though there was no snow, this was 'Nels Corey weather!' Nels, during his past visits to the Niagara Frontier, has always run into the rough and savage play of our local elements.

"Despite winds and choppy seas, the warmth of college friends in the snug and spacious cabin of our host's Anjac V spelled a fun evening. Later that night, back in the marina, toasts went the rounds, and a particularly rousing one at the news that the Bowdoin Club of Western New York had passed its area quota in the Capital Campaign. Convener George F. Phillips, Jr. '54, of course, rued the weather, the absence of vacationing alumni, and the dearth of baby sitters, which kept down attendance. With the Anjac V leaving the next day for Mystic, Conn., all aboard wished a bon voyage to our genial hosts, Helen and Ed Milner. These were the landlubbers: Janet and George Craighead '25, Fred Purdy '32, Betsy and Morgan Heussler '46, Cindy and Russ Kellerman '52, Dave Woodruff '52, and George Phillips '54."

LOS ANGELES

The Bowdoin Club of Los Angeles began another successful year with its second annual Lobster Boil on Sunday, August 9. Alumni, their families, and friends gathered at Paradise Cove, beginning about 10:00 a.m. The menu featured Maine lobster, and Secretary Marv Kaitz's notice advertised, "Reserved beach with private lifeguard, parking, and picnic tables; sunning, relaxing, beaching, wading, swimming, and exploring; pier-strolling, fishing, tidewater pools and caves, and boating; romancing, picture-taking, singing, music, and guitar playing." The College was represented by Mike Bennett '67 of Wilmington, Calif., best remembered by alumni everywhere as the youngest member of Bowdoin's College Bowl Television Team.

On Wednesday, September 2, Psychology Professor L. Dodge Fernald, Jr. was guest of honor at a meeting at the home of Club Vice-President Bill Dougherty '46. Approximately 15 alumni and wives gathered for a pleasant social hour and dinner and then heard the latest campus news from Professor Fernald.

bers a comprehensive schedule for the current year. Significant features are the monthly luncheons, the annual fall dinner meeting, several campus meetings for alumni and guests, a subfreshman meeting at the College, and a spring stag dinner.

The luncheon meeting on October 17 featured Physics Professor Noel Little '17 and Tallman Professor of Physics Maurice Taylor. Psychology Professor Alfred Fuchs spoke on November 4. Other speakers during the year will be History Instructor Richard Lyman, Jr. '57 (December 2), Associate Director of Admissions Robert Mellow (January 6), Student Union Committee President Jim Willey '66 (February 3), Overseer Paul Niven '16 (March 3), Chemistry Professor Samuel Kamerling (April 7), and Alumni Fund Secretary Bob Cross '45 (May 5). The speaker for June 2 will be announced later.

The annual fall dinner meeting was held at the Holiday Inn, Exit 8 on the Maine Turnpike at Brighton Avenue, on Wednesday evening, November 4. A 5:30 social hour was followed by dinner at 7:30. Professor Nathan Dane, II '37 was the featured speaker, and other guests from the College included Athletic Director Mal Morrell '24 and Coaches Nels Corey '39, Sid Watson, and Pete Kostacopoulos.

On Saturday, December 5, the Club will sponsor a social hour and spaghetti dinner for alumni, wives, and Harvard alumni guests at the Alumni House. They will then attend the 7:30 p.m. Bowdoin-Harvard hockey game at the College.

On Wednesday afternoon and evening, February 10, the Club will sponsor a campus tour, social hour, and dinner for prospective students from the greater Portland secondary schools.

On Friday, February 19, alumni and wives will have an opportunity to tour the Senior Center, have dinner there, and attend the Bowdoin-Army hockey game. Plans are yet to be announced for a spring stag dinner in April or May.

RHODE ISLAND

Retiring Club Secretary Geof Mason '23 reports a successful spring dinner and ladies' night at the Warwick Country Club on Friday, April 24. Approximately 40 alumni and guests attended the meeting, which included a six o'clock social hour and seven o'clock dinner.

Following a short business meeting and the biennial election, the group heard a message from Professor William B. Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center.

The new officers for the Club are President, Geoffrey T. Mason '23; Secretary, Henry M. Swan '56; Treasurer, Phineas Sprague '50; and Alumni Council Member, Herbert Hanson, Jr. '43.

The Club continues its informal monthly luncheon meetings at the Turk's Head Club in downtown Providence. The group meets at noon on the first Wednesday of each month, September through June. Alumni interested in being reminded of the luncheons are invited to contact the Secretary at 81 Mathewson Road, Barrington.

ST. LOUIS

The Bowdoin Club of St. Louis met on Wednesday evening, October 14, at the home of Ed O'Neill '38 in suburban Ladue. Special guest from the College was Associate Director of Admissions Bob Mellow, who was visiting schools for Bowdoin in the St. Louis area.

SAN FRANCISCO

Secretary Fletch Means '57 reports a successful meeting of the Bowdoin Club of San Francisco at his home on Monday, August 31. The special guest from the College was Professor L. Dodge Fernald, Jr., Chairman of the Department of Psychology, who brought news of campus happenings and answered questions.

In addition to the guest speaker and the host and hostess, the following alumni were present with their wives: President Bruce Alden '49, Frank Allen '51, Bill Austin '42, John Mullane '50, Gabe Peluso '55, and Dr. Ross Wilson '40.

President and Mrs. James Coles were guests of the San Francisco Club on Wednesday evening, September 30. The social hour and dinner, originally scheduled for the Red Knight Restaurant, were moved at the last moment to the Torino Restaurant, where all had a pleasant time hearing the latest news from Brunswick and meeting old and new Bowdoin friends.

SPRINGFIELD

The Bowdoin Club of Springfield sponsored an extremely successful double-barreled meeting in Connecticut on Saturday, October 3, before and after the Bowdoin-Wesleyan football game.

Club President Ed Sample '49 and Treasurer Charlie Bergeron '53 report that approximately 200 alumni, members of their families, and friends gathered at Foss Hill, overlooking the Wesleyan football field, for "bring-your-own" picnic lunches before the game. And more than 150 attended a gala victory cocktail party and buffet supper at the Yale Motor Inn, Wallingford, in the late afternoon and evening.

News Of The Classes

1826 Dr. Jacques M. Quen is the author of "Isaac Ray and His 'Remarks on Pathological Anatomy,'" an article which appeared in the March-April, 1964, issue of the Bulletin of the History of Medicine. Dr. Quen is Clinical Instructor in Psychiatry at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. In his words, "Isaac Ray was the first American to win international fame and renown as a psychiatric specialist."

Dr. Ray was a member of the Class of 1826 at Bowdoin and also attended the Maine Medical School. In 1951 the American Psychiatric Association established the Isaac Ray Award, "to be given annually to a psychiatrist or member of the legal profession who has promoted closer relations between law and medicine."

"Remarks on Pathological Anatomy" is the title of a dissertation which Dr. Ray read and defended before the Maine Medical School faculty on May 17, 1827.

Ebony Magazine for July, 1964, contains an article on John Russwurm. It is entitled "Pioneers in Protest: Founders of the Negro Press."

1852 "Joshua L. Chamberlain Still Ranks As One of Maine's Greatest Men," a feature

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
Jackson Heights, N. Y. 11372

Mert McRae reports that "they refuse" to let him "stay idle." He is assistant manager and desk clerk at the New Century Hotel in Romney, W. Va., "a small, modern, 40-room hostelry in a rural community located 28 miles southwest of Cumberland, Md.," which has been Mert's headquarters for many years.

1907 Secretary, John W. Leydon
3120 West Penn Street
Philadelphia 29, Pa.

The Class held its 37th annual mid-summer picnic on Saturday, August 22, at the Atlantic House at Scarborough Beach, where 45 people enjoyed a shore dinner.

The following members of the Class, wives, and guests were present: William Linnell, the Misses Linnell, and Mrs. Edward T. Hyde; Mrs. Kenneth Sills H'52, Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davis '08 and their guest, Mrs. Nellie Spiller; Mr. and Mrs. John Halford and Mrs. Victoria Otto; Mr. and Mrs. John Leydon, Mrs. Joseph Drummond, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Lawrence, Mrs. F.

Arnold Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Duddy, Mrs. E. Eugene Holt, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Allen and their guest, Miss Woodman, a descendant of Cyrus Woodman, a benefactor of the College; Mrs. M. Carroll Webber, Dr. and Mrs. Lester Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Haley, Thomas Winchell, Miss Edith Weatherill, Mrs. Willis Roberts, Leon Mincher, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Snow, Mr. and Mrs. Osgood Pike, Mrs. John Frost, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wilder '23, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Giles '41 and their two children.

After dinner President Linnell welcomed the group. Class Secretary John Leydon brought messages from absent members of 1907, Mr. Allen related some interesting details of his trip to the West this year, and Dr. Adams told of an incident relating to Professor Alpheus Spring Packard of the Class of 1816. Mr. Duddy related some details of his travels in the Southwest, Mrs. Drummond gave a vivid description of a recent trip to Iceland, and Mr. Haley and Mr. Winchell also spoke.

Mr. Wilder, who is Bowdoin's Assistant to the President, described the new Senior Center and its program, outlined some highlights of the past year, and gave some details of his recent trip to Europe to examine the program of foreign student exchange.

Wadleigh Drummond, a Director of the First National Bank of Portland since January of 1919, has resigned that position and been succeeded by his son Josiah '36. Wadleigh has been elected an Honorary Director of the Bank.

Gladys and Malon Whipple observed their 50th wedding anniversary on October 3.

Waldoboro

Dudley Hovey died on September 18 at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital in Massachusetts, after a brief illness. On September 22 his ashes were brought to Waldoboro and interred on a high hill overlooking the Medomak Valley and across stretches of forest in full autumn coloring, away to the blue Camden Hills. I venture to add that no man of 1909 will be missed more.

With each issue of the Bulletin the configuration of the life of the Class of 1909 alters. It was only yesterday, seemingly, that Luke Lombard, Dudley Hovey, and Harold Burton terminated their living membership in the Class. Justice Burton since June 1909 had been the Class President. Now Vice President Robert M. Pennell becomes the titular head of this fading fragment.

Carl Stone and the Acting Agent were the two members of 1909 who showed up on Homecoming Day for the Bowdoin-Williams game.

On November 10 a most impressive Memorial Service was held in the Bowdoin Chapel honoring Justice Harold H. Burton, one of the truly great men of our time. The Class was represented at the service by Arthur Hughes, Bob Pennell, Jake Stahl, and Colonel Stanley.

Last May the suggestion was made to one of our classmates that he might care to establish a prize at the College to be awarded for excellence in German. It was pointed out that there were such prizes in Greek, Latin, and French, but none in German. The first award under this new prize will be made in June 1965.

We have been delighted by the recent emergence of two of our most popular classmates. Bill Sparks has moved from the Philadelphia area and is now living at Williamsburg, Va., Rt. 2, Box 50. His two daughters are engaged in work at Colonial Williamsburg, and the son is a minister at Christ Church, New York City. Bill's humorous summary follows: "My health is O.K.; walk two miles daily; weight, 165; retired 15 years ago; outlook optimistic; age 82 years. Amen."

Then a voice from far away, Nick Carter, from Cambria, Calif. Now Cambria is a little place — if such be possible in California — located on the shore of the great sea whose name means peace. We are sorry to report that neither Nick nor Mrs. Carter is quite as well as they would like to be, a condition which they probably share with the most of us. Nick reports sight dimming a bit, but he derived vast pleasure from the role of Bowdoin on the College Bowl.

Now, good friends, we want very much for our next notes a word from Maurice L. Blair, Dr. Ezra Ralph Bridge, the erstwhile gay John E. Crowley, the taciturn Daniel T. C. Drummond, that superb Latinist John R. Hurley, and others whom we will mention next time.

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews
59 Pearl Street
Mystic, Conn.

Bob Hale represented the College on December 3 at the inauguration of Gerard J. Campbell as President of Georgetown University.

1911 Secretary, Ernest G. Fifield
351 Highland Avenue
Upper Montclair, N. J.

Don Dennis' son, Donald '51, was married on October 17 to Miss Mary L. Hartig of Berkeley Heights, N. J., a graduate of Cedar Crest College in Allentown, Pa., where she is Alumnae Secretary and he is Librarian.

1912 Secretary, William A. MacCormick
114 Atlantic Avenue

Herb Bryant is Treasurer and a Trustee of the Little Brown Church in Round Pond.

Last summer the Class Secretary became the proud possessor of a Bowdoin Chair through the kind offices of Class Agent Herb Bryant. This was done in behalf of the Class, of which Bill has served as Secretary-Treasurer for the 52 years since graduation. He sends his thanks to the brethren!

At the 112th annual meeting of the Bath Savings Institution, held last July, the Class Secretary was elected to its Board of Corporators. Bill was the Secretary of the YMCA in Bath from 1914 to 1917.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Frank Ridley, whose brother, John C. Ridley, died on August 22.

R.F.D. 2
Farmington

Laurence Crosby represented Bowdoin on October 10 at the dedication of St. John's College in Santa Fe, N. M.

The doctors' office building on the grounds of the Beverly (Mass.) Hospital is named in honor of Dr. Albert Parkhurst. The committee which chose the name two years ago reported as follows: "We wanted to name it for a man of loyalty to the hospital, a man who has exhibited complete dedication to his profession, a kind, courageous, compassionate, courteous man with outstanding ability, a man who practices the highest standards of professional ethics and personal morals, a man who sets an example of honesty and purpose to the young doctors who have come here both to further their education and to practice medicine, a man who has caused us all to benefit enormously by association with him — Dr. Albert E. Parkhurst."

Bert has practiced medicine in Beverly since 1920.

Francestown, N. H.

Al Gray had what he considers a most unusual experience the first two weeks in October, when at the age of 72 and teaching in a high school for the first time in his life, he did a stint as a substitute teacher of Latin and English. He reports that it was fun and that he learned a lot, including the Salute to the Flag and the Lord's Prayer, both in Latin! (Editor's note: Al taught French for 38 years at Milton Academy.)

Frank and Agnes Loeffler have returned to their Florida home at Ormond Beach after spending the summer months in Gloucester, Mass. Frank was at the College on September 3 with a candidate for the Class of 1969 — whom Secretary of the Alumni Fund Bob Cross '45 speaks of as the "Frank Loeffler Admissions Candidate Number 14."

1915 Secretary, Harold E. Verrill
Ocean House Road
Cape Elizabeth

Arthur Fish is a Trustee of the Little Brown Church in Round Pond.

The George Halls' son Edward '56 was married on August 29 to Miss Lynne M. Birlem of Southwest Harbor.

At the annual Congress of Correction of the American Correctional Association at Kansas City in August, Spike MacCormick received an award for distinguished service from the Correctional Service Federation, the national federation of prisoners' aid associations. In July he made a survey of the Louisiana Penitentiary at the request of the Governor, and in October he made a quick study of the juvenile institutions in Texas for the State Youth Council.

Austin MacCormick House in San Francisco, a "halfway house" for newly-released prisoners, is now in operation. One hundred men can use the house each year, staying about four months each. It is operated by the American Friends Service Committee.

1916 Secretary, Edward C. Hawes
180 High Street
Portland

During the summer Bob Campbell wrote, "I am supposed to be retired, and yet in all my ministry, except when I had an operation eight years ago, I have been only a few Sundays out of the pulpit."

"A year ago last September I began to serve the rather small but lovely church in beautiful Hamilton, Mass. The church was 'down' and almost out. But now it is 'up.' Since that time it has paid off a debt, bought a piano, painted the building inside and out, and a month ago dedicated an entirely rebuilt organ with new electric console. We have received 46 new members. All of this in an area that is not thickly settled but of open spaces. I go on Sundays for the services and one day a week to call."

The 1914 family at its 50th Reunion last June.

Bob's address is 25 Orchard Street, Marblehead, Mass.

Herb Foster's son, Herbert H. Foster, Jr., is a psychologist with the State Rehabilitation Department at Santa Cruz, Calif.

The Alden Heads' son, Alden '56, was married on October 17 to Miss Gwen I. Mount of Ithaca, N. Y., a graduate of Syracuse University.

In October Larry Irving wrote from the University of Alaska in College, Alaska, "The program of our Institute of Arctic Biology is moving and will probably progress better during my projected absence for the next seven weeks. I am attending conferences in Japan and will return through Honolulu, California, and Washington, D. C. Florence will be with me, and so I can look for pleasant distractions from scientific meetings, which are often as fatiguing as interesting.

"We have had a pleasant summer at home, with considerable progress in the garden. The first snow is now here, interrupting progress in the new building for the Institute, which is scheduled to be ready next autumn."

Larry is Director of the Institute and Professor of Zoophysiology at the University of Alaska.

John Winter's son, Captain Norman Winter '50, is now Deputy Base Civil Engineer at Sembach Air Base in Germany, after receiving a master of science degree in civil engineering last August at the University of Pittsburgh, where he had been assigned for two years in the Air Force.

1917 Secretary, Noel C. Little
60 Federal Street
Brunswick

In September Lt. Col. Dave Lane reported, "This morning I discovered that Reginald Lombard '48, Stewart Pollard '49, and I are all working in the Operations Division of the Headquarters of the U. S. Army, Europe, so we had a little Bowdoin Day of our own. I'm still hoping to get back for the 50th."

Dave's address is Hq., U. S. Army, Europe, Operations Division, APO 403, New York, N. Y. He is stationed in Heidelberg, Germany.

1918 Secretary, Lloyd O. Coulter
Nottingham Square Road

HAROLD HITZ BURTON '09

Associate Justice Harold H. Burton, who retired from the United States Supreme Court in 1958, died in Washington, D. C., on October 28, 1964, at the age of 76. Born on June 22, 1888, in Jamaica Plain, Mass., he prepared for college at Newton (Mass.) High School and was graduated from Bowdoin summa cum laude, as was his roommate and fraternity brother, the late Owen Brewster '09. In 1912 he was graduated from Harvard Law School, and for the next two years he practiced law in Cleveland, Ohio, with Gage, Wilbur, and Wachner. From 1914 to 1916 he was an attorney for the Utah Power and Light Company and the Utah Light and Traction Company in Salt Lake City and then for a year was an attorney with the Idaho Power Company in Boise. During World War II he served in the St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne, and Ypres-Lys offensives in France as a captain in the 361st Infantry of the 91st Division, receiving the Belgian Croix de Guerre and a Purple Heart Medal.

After the war Mr. Burton returned to Cleveland, where he engaged in the general practice of law until 1929, when he became Director of Law in that city. He served brief periods as Acting City Manager and Acting Mayor and in 1935 was elected Mayor, an office to which he was re-elected in 1937 and 1939. In 1940 he was elected to the United States Senate from Ohio, and in 1945 President Harry Truman named him to the Supreme Court.

Justice Burton was elected to the Bowdoin Board of Overseers in 1936. He had also served as a Trustee of Wellesley College, Fenn College, and Hiram College. He received honorary degrees from many institutions, among them Oberlin, Ohio Wesleyan, Mt. Union, Kenyon, Boston University, Wooster, Heidelberg (Ohio), Western Reserve, Wesleyan (Connecticut), and Bowdoin. He was for nine years a member of the Board of Incorporators of the American National Red Cross, and from 1944 to 1946 he was Moderator of the American Unitarian Association. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Selma Smith Burton, whom he married on June 15, 1912, in West Newton, Mass.; two daughters, Mrs. H. Charles Weidner, Jr. and Mrs. R. Wallace Adler, both of Shaker Heights, Ohio; and two sons, William S. Burton '37 and Robert S. Burton '43, also both of Shaker Heights. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and Phi Beta Kappa.

Chief Justice Earl Warren issued the following statement on the day of Justice Burton's death: "Mr. Justice Burton has gone from us, but for years before passing on he made a valiant fight against crippling disease with courage and serenity. He retired from the Supreme Court six years ago, but to the end of life he performed devoted service to other courts in the District of Columbia to the extent his diminishing strength would permit.

"He served 13 years on the Supreme Court, and I am sure that in its long history no Justice on the court has been held in higher esteem by his colleagues. His opinions written for the court will be a lasting memorial to him, and will long be studied as a part of the development of American jurisprudence. A deeply religious and kindly man, Justice Burton personified good will and devotion to duty."

The First Bowdoin Alumni College

Herbert Ross Brown - Educational Director

Eight-Day Alumni College Program, August 15-22, 1965,

Offers an Exhilarating Follow-Through of Liberal Education to Alumni and Their Wives . . .

Next August the chapel bell will summon (at a less grisly hour than the one you may remember) Bowdoin men and women to share in a common intellectual experience of informal lectures, group discussions, and the evaluation of ideas.

Housed in the exciting new Senior Center, the symbol of a pioneering experiment in undergraduate education, the participants will enjoy the benefits of common residence in an uncommon building with all the amenities for intellectual refreshment and gracious living.

Points of departure for the discussion groups will be the reading — done in advance — of four or five basic books to be chosen for their timely relevance to the complexities of the modern world. The seminars will be led by several members of the Bowdoin faculty who have unusual competence, not only in their professional specialties, but also in evoking candid and vigorous expression of opinion.

Afternoon and evening hours will be kept free for independent reading, recreation, and the cultural opportunities provided by professional Broadway productions in Pickard Theater, exhibitions in the Walker Art Building, and concerts by the Aeolian Players.

August, 1965, will be a stimulating time to be back on the campus: to live in the magnificent Senior Center commanding views of Casco Bay and the White Mountains, to watch the last stages of construction on the new Library, the renovation of the Moulton Union, and the completion of the Gymnasium, where the squash courts will be open to participants in the Alumni College program, as will the Curtis Pool and the tennis courts on Pickard Field.

Dates: Sunday, 15 August, through Sunday, 22 August.

Living and Dining: The Senior Center.

Advance Reading: In the spring the College will send four or five books to each registrant to enable all members to do the necessary "home work."

Charges: $395 all-inclusive fee — room, meals, books, transportation both ways between Brunswick and the Portland Airport, greens fees at the Brunswick Golf Club, tickets to plays, concerts, tennis and squash courts. Wives are cordially invited to join their husbands in this program at no additional fee.

Administration: Further details of the Alumni College Program, including the titles of the books to be read in advance, the names of the faculty discussion leaders, and application forms, will be mailed to all alumni interested in Bowdoin's first summer venture in continuing education.

The need of limiting the number of participants to make possible small discussion groups demands that early applications are desirable. Address all inquiries to Professor Herbert Brown, Educational Director, Bowdoin Alumni College, Brunswick, Maine, 04011. Preliminary applications should be filed not later than March 15.

THE COVER

The cover of this issue features two renderings of the addition to the Moulton Union, designed by the firm of Steinmann, Cain, and White in New York. At the top is a sketch of the addition as it will appear from the front of the building. The section at the right of the picture represents new construction.

The architect's sketch at the bottom shows how the Union will appear from the east after completion of the expansion project next fall. A two-floor wing, 30 feet deep, will run completely across the rear of the original building and will extend an additional 45 feet to the south, with a recessed two-story wing on that side.

Clement Franklin Robinson 1882-1964

Clement F. Robinson '03, a member of the Board of Overseers since 1925, died in Brunswick on December 13, 1964, at the age of 82. Those of us who put out the ALUMNUS six times a year miss him with particular poignancy because for more than twenty years he wrote the "Looking Backward" column for the magazine. Our masthead continued to carry his name through the November, 1964, issue, in the hope that he might change his mind and start writing the column again, despite his farewell in the June, 1962, issue — "...having reached the goal that was set back in 1942, the Editor now stops periodically 'Looking Backward' — but, of course, at his age he does not cease to look backward happily on the long series of Bowdoin years which have been here touched upon. It has been a joy as well as a highly appreciated privilege to bring some of Bowdoin's past to the readers of the ALUMNUS. But now's the time for this Editor to end his editorial responsibility."

The editorial for that same issue paid tribute to Mr. Robinson in these words, which apply with even more force now that he has left us: "This is the last issue of the ALUMNUS in which Clement F. Robinson's column 'Looking Backward' will appear. Saddened at C.F.R.'s decision that he has completed the assignment which became inimitably his twenty years ago, the Editor considered continuing the column himself. Down deep, however, is the knowledge that he could not begin to do as fine a job as Mr. Robinson has done for so many years. He is also reluctant to see anyone else write 'Looking Backward,' just as he would have been sorry to see anyone else teach 'Casey's Lit' after President Sills retired. The column and the man are inseparable."

Clement Robinson knew a remarkable amount about the College and the Town of Brunswick, and he was always willing to share his knowledge and enthusiasm with others. We miss him sorely. R.M.C. (See also page 36.)

"A Finer Spirit in Our Midst . . ."

by Raymond S. Troubh '50

WASHINGTON, D.C. IS A GREAT CITY noted for its high polish, bravura, and impersonality. It was here that friends of Harold Hitz Burton paid their last respects to this gentle and righteous man on October 31, 1964, and in its way the setting was a reminder of the contrasts that were Harold Burton: in this city of color and fire, the memorial services were held in a small, plain, straight-lined church where simple words were spoken — lines that moved the audience more than the abundant eloquence of neighboring halls. Politician, mayor of a great city, and United States Senator, Harold Burton was a shy, unassuming man, one who had overcome a difficult stutter. A Justice of the United States Supreme Court and confidant of austere legal scholars, he liked nothing better than to guide visiting groups of small towners seeing the Court for the first time (he was considered the best tourist guide the Court had and once was offered a tip by an unknowing Rotarian). A Republican, he became a Democratic president's first appointee to the highest court in the land.

Mr. Justice Burton, without doubt, was one of the most conscientious of men, and this characteristic was clearly recognized by his colleagues. He was one of those rarities — an objective, dispassionate man without any real prejudice and of deep religious faith, who sought above all to erase the intrusion of personality or emotion from the judicial decision-making process.

Upon his retirement from the bench on October 14, 1958, after thirteen years of service, his colleagues wrote to him: "We believe that of all the justices who have sat on this bench, not one has adhered more closely than you to the ideal for which we all strive — 'Equal justice under law.'"

An amusing anecdote which appeared in the New York Herald Tribune perhaps best sums up Justice Burton's sense of duty. "One Sunday just before the opening of the baseball season, the mayor of Cleveland stood in the ball park, pegging fast balls to his secretary. This was because the year before, throwing the first ball for the Indians' opening game, he had been a bit wild. Harold Hitz Burton, who was to become a United States Senator and Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, was not wild again."

Blessed with the rare privilege of serving for one year as a law clerk to Mr. Justice Burton, I saw at first hand his qualities of devotion to duty, eagerness to seek the truth, absolute humility, and reserved judicial detachment. His manners on the bench were mirrors of his own life — gentility, humility, fairness, and imperturbability.

In the United States Supreme Court each justice is allowed two law clerks. The relationship is a highly personal one and normally lasts for one year. What the law clerks contribute and how close the relationship becomes depend on the temperament and background of each justice. To be Harold Burton's law clerk was to become a member of his and Selma Burton's immediate family. Mrs. Burton remembered each law clerk on Thanksgiving with a mince pie and on Washington's Birthday with a cherry pie. Each law clerk's birthday was celebrated in chambers with an abundance of ice cream, cake, favors, and surprises, but no tobacco or liquor. Justice Burton never smoked or drank, or (within our hearing) swore. His only display of autocratic power was to demand of each law clerk an autographed picture to add to his ever-increasing collection.

Charles H. Mitchell Tess H. Cheatham Harold H. Burton Ray Trough Jim Ryan

This picture shows Charles H. Mitchell, messenger for Justice Burton; Mrs. Tess H. Cheatham, the Justice's secretary; Justice Burton; Raymond S. Trough '50 and James R. Ryan, Mr. Burton's law clerks.

The law clerks entertained Justice and Mrs. Burton at dinner, and I can recall those nervous last-minute fears that the roast would burn or the children would act up at the wrong time. But everything always went well because the Burtons, although they "walked with kings," never lost "the common touch."

The relationship did not end at the completion of our year of service. The Justice was interested in our careers and our growing families, an interest which was evidenced by much personal correspondence. The law clerks gathered often in Washington for dinner with Justice and Mrs. Burton, and on these occasions cherished moments were relived and humorous anecdotes retold.

THE LIVELIEST SESSIONS OF ALL with the Justice were our traditional Friday night discussions of cases. Our office lights were frequently the only lights burning at the Court late on Friday nights. In those days the Supreme Court Justices met on Saturday mornings to discuss and vote on cases. In order for Justice Burton to prepare himself thoroughly with every facet of the dozens of cases to be discussed at the Saturday morning conference, each of his law clerks was assigned work on half of the cases. The facts, law, and citations of each case were developed in a so-called "certiorari memo" (those petitions where the litigants asked the Court to hear oral argument). In each case where certiorari had been granted (the Court agreeing to hear the case), a much more detailed "bench memo" was prepared to aid the Justice in listening to oral argument.

Painstakingly each memo and each brief were discussed, all points by both sides were thoroughly analyzed, and all conceivable precedents were considered. Woe betide the law clerk who either missed a case in point or was sluggish in his analysis, as the Justice slowly turned his chair to the great library of bound volumes standing ten feet high behind him. He would pick out the volume in point (a blue Supreme Court library bookmark lurking at just the right page) and commence to read aloud and in full the cited case. We seldom missed the point (or the case in point) after a few such lessons!

During these sessions and, of course, in his votes the next day the Justice sought the right answer. In those days of identities and labels, he was neither "liberal" nor "conservative." On the Court he was considered a "swing" man, that is, one who could not be counted on for sure by either side in a close vote. He listened to and weighed carefully the arguments of the litigants, his judicial brethren, and his law clerks and then carefully, and independently, cast his vote. He welcomed frank and open discussions of the issues and regretted it when his law clerks too quickly saw his view. While it was his responsibility, and only his, to cast the vote, he listened to and considered his clerks' views. In these lengthy Friday night sessions we were equals in shirtsleeves.

He sought wisdom and guidance from the judicial precedent, and yet he would not blindly follow precedent. In no sense of the word was he an extremist except in his quest for justice. His opinions were thorough and yet to the point. He wrote and rewrote and rewrote until he was absolutely sure that he had answered all reasonable claims of the losing party. Just as he avoided controversy solely for the sake of controversy, he avoided overloading his opinions with inapt quotations merely to display his learning. Personal glory was not his goal. He was independent and dissented when he disagreed with the decision, but he articulated his dissent only when he felt it would benefit the bar or clear the air. And yet when necessary his dissents were firm and clear, as witness his now famous dissents in the Du Pont and Baseball cases.

The application of the anti-trust laws was the issue in both cases. In the Du Pont case Mr. Burton felt that 40 years was too long to wait to apply the Clayton Act to Du Pont's earlier acquisition of General Motors stock. In the Baseball case, he insisted in his dissent that organized baseball was a business large enough to come under the anti-trust laws.

When he was anguished by a decision, his voice rang out, as in the Willie Francis case. Willie Francis, convicted of murder in Louisiana, had been seated in the electric chair twice but did not die when the switch was thrown. His lawyers contended that he should not be executed after that experience. Justice Burton disagreed with a majority of the Court, which held that it was not a "cruel and unusual" punishment for the State of Louisiana repeatedly to pass electric current through Francis' body until it finally succeeded in electrocuting him.

He was the favorite opinion writer of the newspapermen whose duty it was to cover the Supreme Court because he invariably stated the issues and the holding in the first paragraph of each decision he wrote. Because of his painstaking attention to detail and his thoroughness in research, he was frequently assigned the lengthy and complicated (sometimes dull) cases not often reflected in the headlines of the day. On the other hand, one of his early opinions anticipated subsequent decisions by holding invalid the practice on Southern railroads of segregating dining car passengers by color. One of his proudest moments on the bench certainly was his participation in the 1954 decision outlawing segregation in the schools.

HAROLD BURTON VALUED INTEGRITY IN MEN above all other qualities, and his own life bears witness to this fact. Upon receiving the Bowdoin Prize on September 25, 1958, he stated that early in life he picked out five leaders from whom he sought to learn. In his brief description of each of these men — Washington, Marshall, Lincoln, Edison, and Theodore Roosevelt — the word "integrity" stands out as the demonstrable quality he sought to emulate. On this same occasion his then-brethren on the Court wrote to President Coles concerning Mr. Justice Burton:

"His distinguished contribution to the work of the Court is known to all from the notable opinions he has written for the Court over these years. Yet this public record reflects only a small portion of the service he has rendered. Justice Burton has regarded his position on the Court as a trusteeship and has dedicated himself to it wholly and without stint. His indefatigable energies and keen analysis have earned the respect of those who served with him, as his gentle, understanding, and undemanding nature has earned their deep affection and esteem."

Harold Burton believed fervently in an independent judiciary. He wrote and spoke on this subject many times. He referred to it as "the keystone of our freedom." His favorite analogy in explaining the Court's role was expressed in a speech which he gave to a conference of Federal Judges in 1953: "The American people . . . expect from their courts, no less than from their baseball umpires, honest, informed, and independent judgments, regardless of whom the decisions may disappoint. Our legal profession owes no more sacred obligation than to justify such a faith in the integrity and independence of the judiciary."

Harold Burton's life stands as an eloquent testimonial to what he believed. He was an uncommon man and he will be missed. There are no better words than those of the late William Witherle Lawrence '98, written upon learning of the death of his friend President Sills:

"His voice was kindly and his brow serene,
And such a friendliness shone in his face
We felt that, as it were by special grace,
A finer spirit in our midst had been."

"Our English majors now know exactly where they stand at any time, instead of risking almost all on a single throw of the dice in the comprehensive just before graduation."

"... it is frequently found that the ideas of the young Turks are neither so young nor so Turkish as they may ingenuously think."

"There are always new things in education, but one of them is not the human nature it has been dealing with for many centuries."

Moving the Academic Graveyard

Chairman of the English Department

I AM NOT ANYONE TO SHUN A CLICHE OUT OF SNOBBERY if it conveys something more thriftily and accurately than the language can put it otherwise. So in good conscience I can recall to service once again the notorious old metaphor that goes more or less this way: Getting a college faculty to change a curriculum is like moving a graveyard. After a quarter of a century of knocking around the academic world I can cite all kinds of evidence attesting to the prevailing truth of this cliché. Nevertheless, whatever may be the mobility of cemeteries, curriculums on occasion can be, and have been on occasion, changed, even radically changed, and the English Department at Bowdoin is a case in point.

There are various bases for changing a curriculum. Some of them, such as vague restlessness or the idea that invention is the mother of necessity, are less trustworthy than others. Ours were formed on a hard-eyed inventory of altered and altering circumstances. For example, today we have more students than we had yesterday, and not only are they more than their predecessors, they are different from them in kind and quality of preparation, and in need, and in outlook. The very quantitative aspect of today's undergraduate body effects a qualitative difference in its environment and psychology. But the challenge of quantity does not stop here; it is augmented by a remarkable extension of knowledge and a remarkable addition of new knowledge, all of which, to be assimilated within the same old four year undergraduate hitch, require continuing adjustment and increasing selectivity.

Today's students, because they are a growing horde, are more and more subjected through greater and greater exigency to techniques of mass manipulation. But there is an inevitable limit to the amount of human engineering good old human nature will take before either revulsion or collapse sets in. In compensation for the equally inevitable organized herding, somehow, somewhere along the line, there must be nourished and fledged the essential individual. If the liberal arts education has any indispensability in tomorrow's society, this will be it.

With that in mind the English Department has made two fundamental changes in the administration of its curriculum. First, it put all its courses on a semester basis so as to increase flexibility and choice by freeing the student from the constriction of the year course. Second, it completely reshaped its major program, once on a mass basis, more recently on a group one, so that each major pursues an area study of his own — one in his Junior year and one in his Senior year — through a personal tutorial relationship with a member of the staff within whose specialty his project falls. The major now has close guidance tailored to his peculiar interests, needs, abilities, and academic circumstances. Formerly a member of a closed student society dubiously eyeing a closed faculty society (each with a little justifiable mistrust of the other), he can no longer escape partnership in a corporate departmental enterprise. Nothing is more nerve-racking, or damaging to incentive, than not knowing where you are, what is expected of you, or how to go about doing whatever it is that is expected of you. In spite of all the current mammy-palaver, called in the decanal jargon of the moment "dialogue," nothing breeds assurance like accountability. Our English majors now know exactly where they stand at any time, instead of risking almost all on a single throw of the dice in the comprehensive just before graduation. Capability for honors work can be recognized and encouraged earlier than before, and the good but dilatory student can be forced of his own free will up to capacity.

If this seems a highly special and expensive strategy in the face of the numbers problem, it should be pointed out that the old program surveying the whole field of English literature from Beowulf to John Updike, with its duplication and diffusive focus, was pedagogically far less effective and economical because it simply did not zero-in either the teacher's competency or the learner's need. Even so, in scrapping it the Department could not scrap the comprehensiveness indispensable to any major curriculum. So, to assure comprehensiveness in the new program it transferred the sophomore survey readings in major British writers to freshman English, set up four blocks of courses — in the Middle Ages, Shakespeare, the Renaissance and Milton, and the Eighteenth and Nineteenth centuries — in each of which majors must elect a semester, along with four free electives. It further required the Junior and Senior major studies to be in areas not covered in the student's formal course schedule. The comprehensiveness acquired in this way is more deeply rooted than that of any survey; in addition, it promotes independent enterprise and it allows much closer aiming of that enterprise. Finally, the Department added a course in Milton, who had heretofore been squeezed (if you can imagine Milton being squeezed) into the Renaissance; it added a course in the history of the origins and development of the language, where English teachers in the schools have been, and still are, notoriously ignorant; instead of offering two semesters of criticism every other year it will now offer one every year so that all majors may have a crack at the analytical as well as the historical approach to literature; it renumbered courses so as to make sense and system; and it dropped or compressed an aggregate of six semesters, with therapeutic loss of weight, and little — as little as possible — loss of blood. What blood was let got transfused rather than spilt.

TO MAKE POSSIBLE RADICAL REVISION of a curriculum in a small college the tradition of academic imperialism, of private ownership of courses, of never trimming one aim in order to make room for another — to put it bluntly, and correctly, the tradition of, and spirit of, individualistic uncooperativeness must go. Everybody has to give, not too much but a little, in the interests of all, and it necessarily follows by nature that those who have most have most to give. These will usually be senior faculty, who have to realize that it is their professional responsibility, as it is the college's institutional responsibility, to develop the national and cultural resource of youth — and not student youth merely, but teacher youth. Old teachers do not fade away, nor should they be asked to "phase" themselves "out." If they were ever any good at all, they have not somewhat more or somewhat less to offer than young teachers, only something different — the fine distillation of intellectual and pedagogical experience. But the young, the students, cannot live in this rarefied atmosphere altogether; they equally need to metabolize the gusto of instructors and assistant professors (even perhaps of those ghostly transitional figures known as associate professors) who are still impatiently making mistakes and pushing any and every idea, and person, around as far as they will be pushed. That institution is unhealthy where seniority, either from jealousy or fear or complacency or bigotry or fastidiousness, stifles, deflects, even fails to encourage and harness such energies.

At the same time the difficulties in altering a curriculum stem not merely from seniors who tend to clutch it but from juniors who tend to toss it away. A curriculum is, or at least by definition it should be, a structure, and exasperation with one that is cramping to certain styles easily lays hold of an ancient cliché, neither thrifty nor accurate, which I would not be caught dying with — namely, "any change is better than none." Calculated and watchful experimentation and modification are one thing, but "any change" usually unbuttons everything and results in a sort of game like one we used to play when I was a child, called "Whadda ya put in the old man's soup?" Well, each player put in whatever came to his mind to put in, and the product, of course, was not a potable concoction. Also, it is frequently found that the ideas of the young Turks are neither so young nor so Turkish as they may ingenuously think. Four such youthful rebels, fresh but still Ph.D.-less from the graduate schools, several years ago rammed their own "progressive" program into what they considered an archaic and fuddy-duddy English 2 program. I was entertained to discover that their modern innovation in no way whatever, neither in detail nor in philosophy, differed from the "gentleman of belles lettres" course which was shovelled out of the curriculum back in the 'twenties before even I had entered college. There are always new things in education, but one of them is not the human nature it has been dealing with for many centuries.

TRUE PROGRESSIVENESS IN THE ACADEMY, as anywhere else, steers between frigidity and wantonness. I know of only one way to achieve sound curriculum reform, and that is through an impulse to academic statesmanship and a sense of what I call executive pedagogy, not on the part of one man or two or three men, but shared by at least a majority of those who are involved. These attributes cannot be had anywhere except in a robust and flourishing environment. So far the English Department's innovations have stood up well; in any event, if by chance there are any weaknesses, we can be confident they will be worried into the open, like those of the elevators in the Senior Center, through exploitation by the students.

Renumbering of English Courses

to take effect in 1965-66

(old numbers are in parentheses)

Methodological Courses 1-9

- 1-2 English Composition (Freshmen) (1-2)
- 4 Oral Communication (Freshmen) (3-4)
- 5 Advanced Oral Communication (6)
- 6 Discussion and Debate (5)
- 7 English Composition (7)
- 8 Advanced Composition (8)
- 9 Literary Composition (31, 32)

Courses in Periods and Major Writers 10-29

- 10 Origins and Development of the Language (new course)
- 11 Chaucer (21)
- 12 Medieval Poetry and Prose (22)
- 13 Shakespeare (13)
- 14 Shakespeare (14)
- 15 English Literature of the Renaissance (15)
- 16 English Literature of the Renaissance (16)
- 17 Milton (new course)
- 18 Eighteenth Century Poetry and Prose (18)
- 19 English Romanticism (19)
- 20 Victorian Poetry and Prose (20)

21 Twentieth Century English and American Literature (27)

22 Twentieth Century English and American Literature (28)

Survey and Genre Courses

- 30 Literary Criticism (30)
- 31 The Drama (23)
- 32 The Drama (24)
- 33 The English Novel (11)
- 34 The English Novel (12)
- 35 American Literature (25)
- 36 American Literature (26)

(English 47, Playwriting, is in a special numerical category)

A major in English and American Literature consists of English 100 (the major course) and eight semester courses as follows. At least one semester unit must be chosen from each of four groups: (1) English 10, 11, or 12; (2) 13 or 14; (3) 15, 16, or 17; (4) 18, 19, or 20. Four additional units may be chosen from the foregoing and/or English 21, 22, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36. English 30 is required of all students contemplating graduate study.

English 100 (the major course) consists in the Junior and Senior years of individual study under tutorial supervision in two areas which have not been covered formally through courses. Such areas are broadly conceived and might constitute a period, a movement, or a genre; they shall be selected by the student with the advice and approval of the Department so as to extend, beyond the scope of his formal course program, his acquaintance with the whole field of English and American literature.

THE MOULTON UNION

This building was erected by the generosity of AUGUSTUS FREEDOM MOULTON, LL.D.
of the Class of 1873

*Here the Fires of Friendship Are to Be Kindled

THE DONOR'S AIM TO GIVE BOWDOIN A CENTER OF HOSPITALITY where the life of the College will be lived and enriched by friendship is fittingly commemorated on the bronze tablet, inscribed as above, placed at the entrance of the Union and unveiled on September 25, 1929.

The Association of College Unions defines, in part, the purpose and function of a Union as follows:

"The Union is the Community Center of the College, for all members of the college family — students, faculty, administration, alumni, and guests (and their families). It is not merely a building; it is also an organization and a program. Together they represent a well considered plan for the community life of the college."

In far-away 1927, on the day of my graduation from Bowdoin, the gift of the Union was announced. At that time few colleges or even universities had buildings erected as Unions for Union programs. Today there are hundreds of Unions in this country and abroad.

In January of 1929, when the Moulton Union was opened to the members of the College, it served a total enrollment of about 500 undergraduates. For nearly ten years only men served on the Union staff. In fact, comparatively few women visited the College except for home athletic events and during houseparties.

The Director of the Union was also a part-time Instructor in Government and Assistant Varsity Football Coach. Through the depression years the Union seemed to be the center of student employment, since the Director was also Director of Student Aid. During World War II the service men stationed on campus found the Union a home, and the few undergraduates left at the College as the war progressed also came to the Union from their closed fraternity houses for food and recreation. After the war the present bookstore was opened.

The author of this article is, appropriately, Donovan D. Lancaster '27, Director of the Moulton Union since it was opened for use in 1929 and also Director of the Centralized Dining Service. During his long career at Bowdoin, which has continued without interruption since he entered as a freshman in the fall of 1923, Don has also been Coach of Swimming, Instructor in Physical Training, Instructor in Physical Education, Assistant Coach of Football, Instructor in Government, Director of Student Aid, and Adviser to Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

In the last decade more visitors, singly and in groups, have come to the campus than ever before because of college programs. Others have visited because excellent turnpikes now lead to Brunswick from both north and south. These people have been welcomed to the Union. Activities during both winter and summer have made this a twelve-month activity.

The expanded enrollment has left the Union too small, especially with the taking on of new services that the College needs to perform.

NEXT FALL MEMBERS OF THE COLLEGE will see a Union building expanded from 28,000 to 44,000 square feet of floor space. Every attempt has been made not to change more than absolutely necessary either the exterior or the interior of the older part of the structure. This is a carefully planned addition, an expansion.

Conceived by students, faculty, administrative officers, and members of the Governing Boards and then corrected and polished by architects, consultants, and decorators, and finally constructed by builders, this addition is being built from the inside out to fit our needs. It is modestly constructed but with an attempt to include an expense of a few dollars today rather than many tomorrow. There is even space on the northeast corner for another wing for future generations.

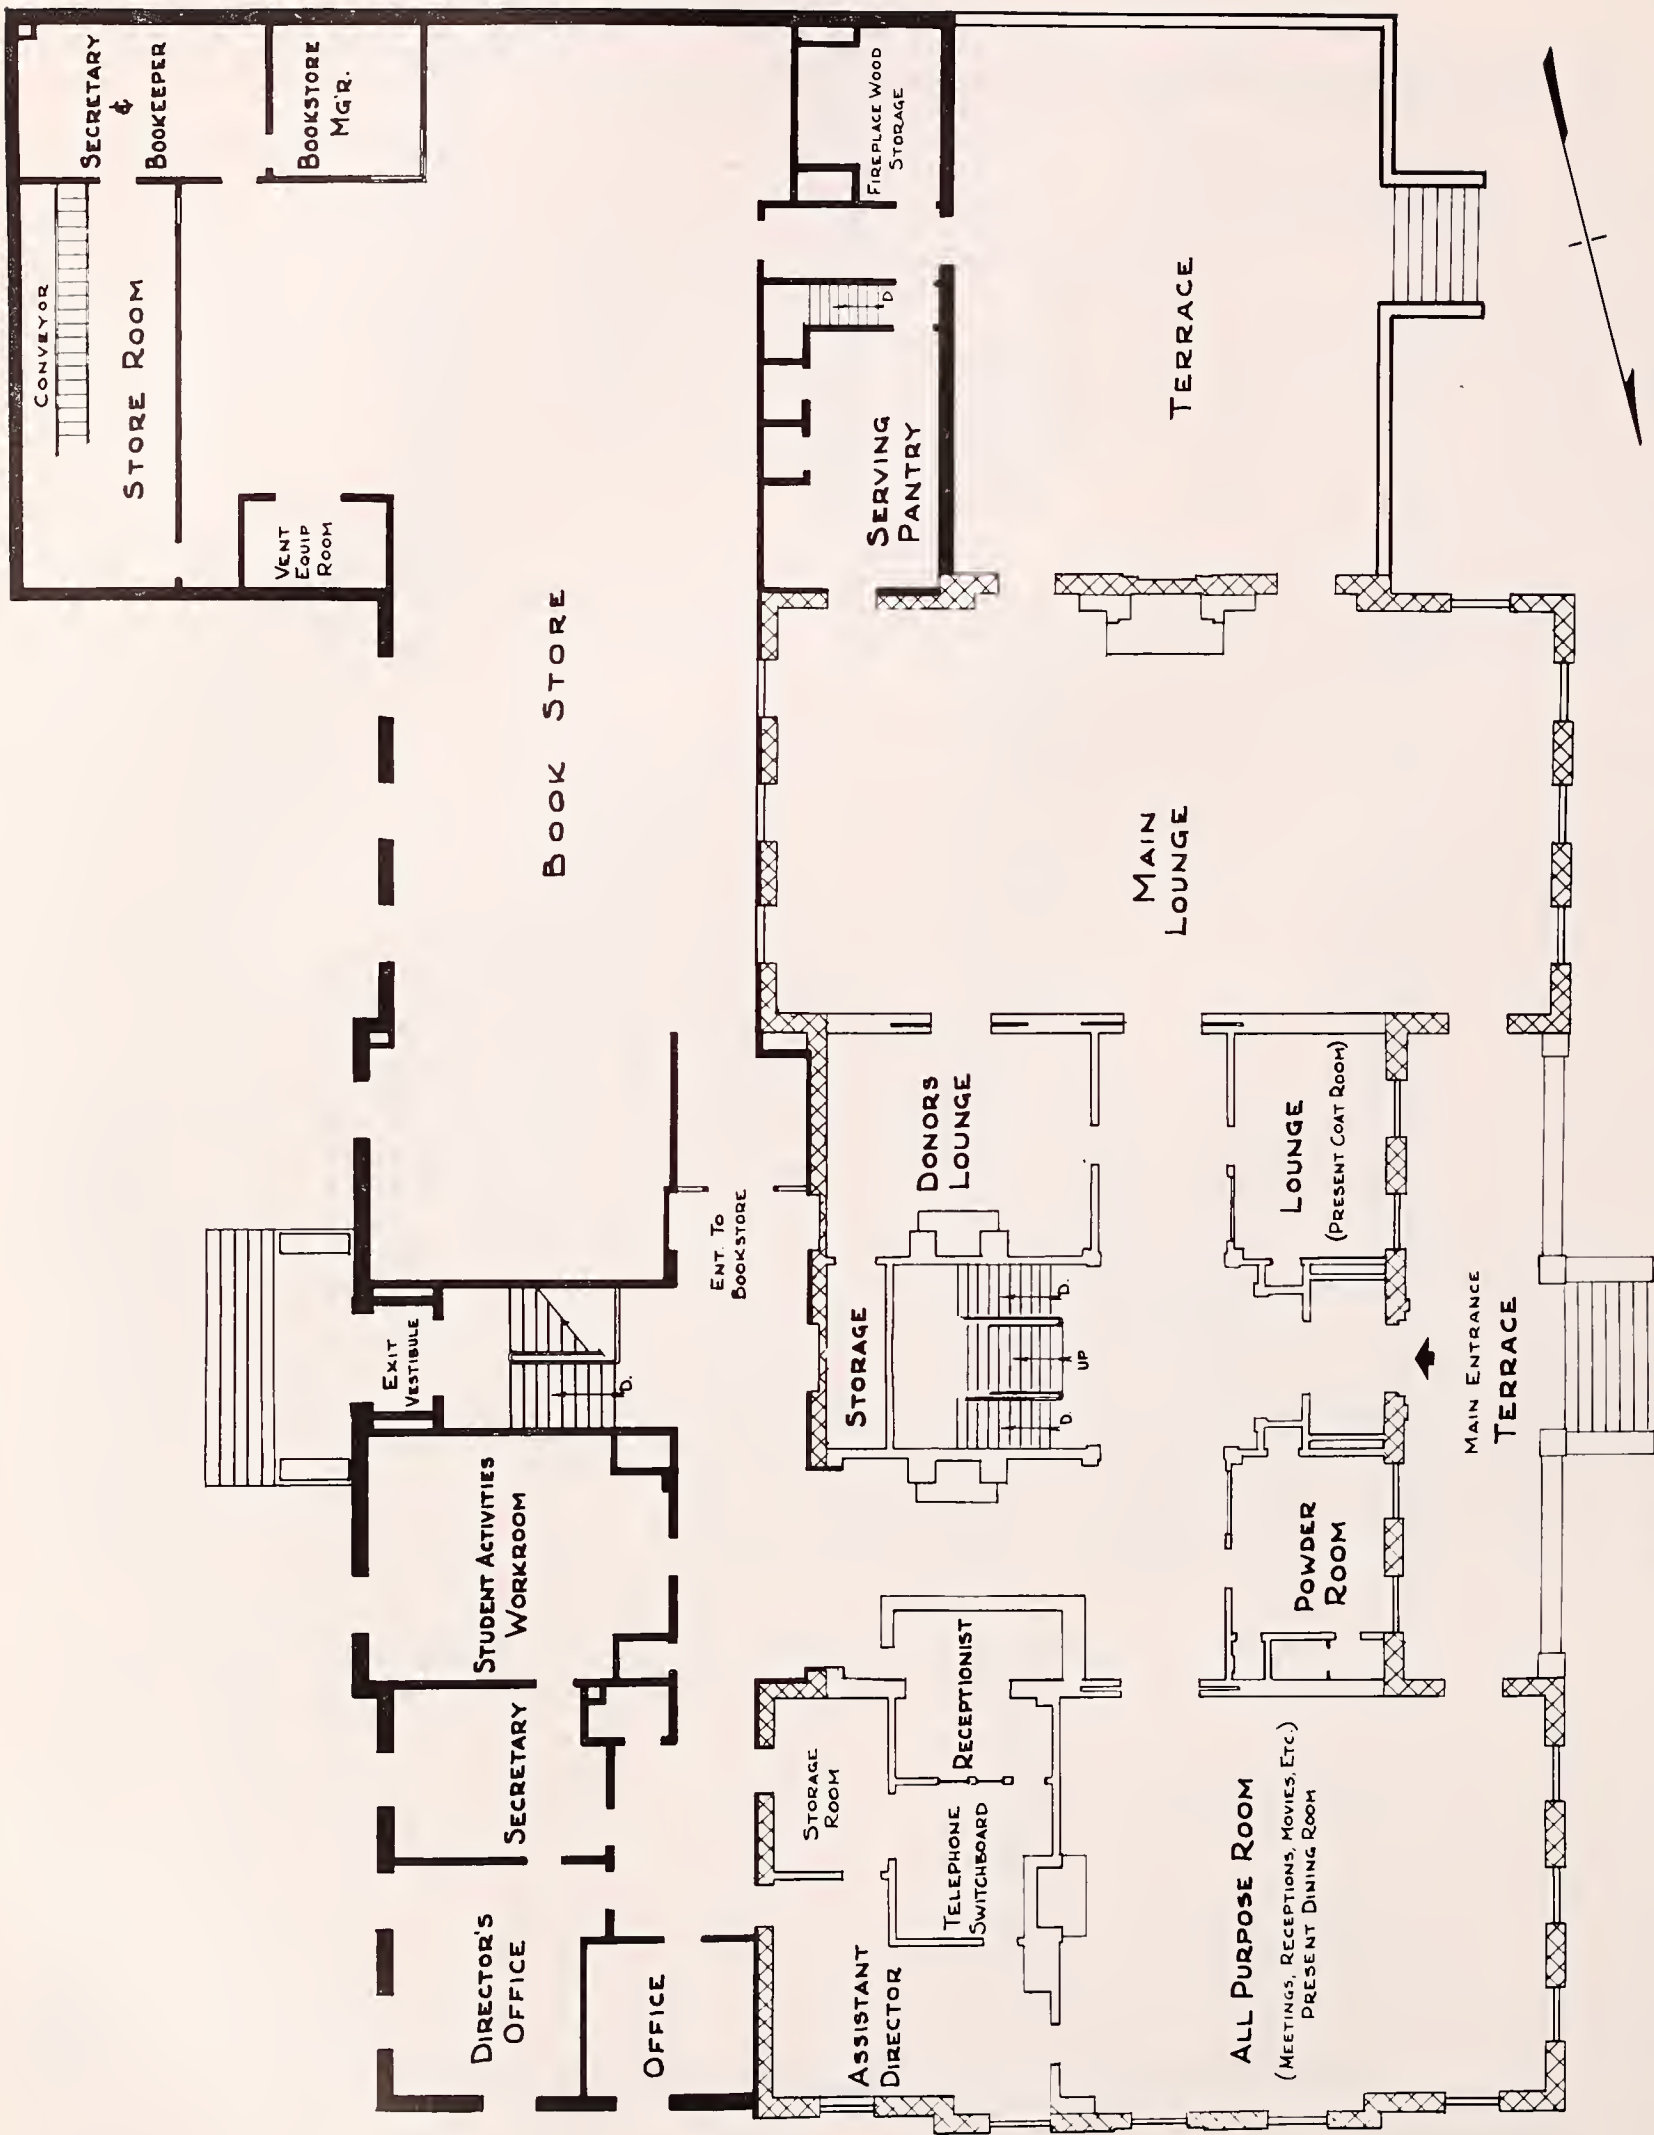

WHEN YOU ENTER THE MAIN FRONT DOORWAY, you will immediately see at your left a new reception and information area. Here all members of the College will be welcomed and assisted. They may make application for an area and date for a campus program, find an address, use a house phone for a campus call, reserve a hotel or motel room in town, get student activity mail, check the lost and found, pick up dormitory parcel post packages, sign up for equipment to use in the student activity room, or consult the events schedule listed months ahead. The college switchboard operator is nearby.

Stroll back into the main hall, and you will notice that the Union has changed but little. The old coat room has become an attractive small lounge with privacy. The large lounge looks the same except for some new and regrouped furniture emphasizing the fireplace. The donor's room is still there.

BOWDOIN COLLEGE

The main staircase looks the same. On the top floor you will find the names of student organizations on the doors and more conference rooms for student meetings. We are getting organizations out of the dormitory cellars and giving them some good office space and furniture.

Let's go back downstairs for a cup of coffee. No dining room on the main floor! The large dining room, on the north end of the main floor, has become a lounge, lecture, or marshalling room, a reception area after lectures, a room for playing bridge. If you go downstairs and head for the old billiards room, you find a dining room seating 120, with a new wing containing a kitchen and a smaller banquet room. The low-beamed old billiards room has been changed to an attractive, intimate dining room, entered from the new east section containing a shopping center dining service room in which customers go to different areas for food and are not held in lines. To the south of the main dining room is a new carpeted banquet room which will provide space for meals for up to 80 people. A sliding multifold door will divide this room for smaller groups. Above the kitchen, which is in the southeast corner of the basement, is a small pantry room, accessible by staircase and dumbwaiter from the kitchen and directly off the lounge, for quick service at larger group meals in the main lounge. Just off the lounge to the south and easily reached from the kitchen is a large terrace for warm weather lounging or eating.

NOW GO BACK DOWNSTAIRS TO THE MAIN DINING ROOM. Retrace your steps and go up the front stairs, pass through the reception and information area, turn right, and you will see the great glass doors to the College Bookstore. Enter and immediately you are surrounded by books, 3,500 square feet of Bookstore space, with 2,500 different titles in paper backs alone. Some paper backs are recommended by teachers for reading around course work. Other paper backs are for recreational or casual reading. There is a book browsing section, where easy chairs and good lamps are available for leisurely examination of books. A good bookstore, with the emphasis on books, is vital.

The entire Bookstore is self-service. We are planning by the fall of 1966 to have a Bowdoin Gift Catalogue, complete with pictures and descriptions of merchandise.

Bookstore, staff offices, and student work rooms (with typewriters, adding machines, poster makers, duplicating machines, and so forth) are in the new first floor area behind the present building, and downstairs are a television room, an Outing Club area, a supervised game room with five new pocket pool tables, six public telephone booths (remember how you waited to get a phone?), and so forth.

The old Union has been changed very little to accomplish so much, and the new furnishings in the new areas will match and blend with the old.

The objective of a College Union is to share in the enrichment of the social, recreational, and cultural life of the College. We hope the whole building goes far to satisfy Ruskin's demand:

"We require from buildings, as from men, two kinds of goodness; first, the doing their practical duty well; then, that they be graceful and pleasing in doing it: which last is itself another form of duty."

MANY MEMBERS AND FRIENDS OF THE COLLEGE HAVE COOPERATED to plan this enlargement. Initially, in 1962-63, President Coles appointed an ad hoc Faculty Committee made up of Philip C. Beam, John F. Brush, Richard O. Hathaway, Donovan D. Lancaster '27, James M. Moulton, Albert R. Thayer '22, and A. LeRoy Greason, Jr., as Chairman. After a year's intensive work of interviews with students, faculty, and staff a report was made. In June of 1963 a joint Governing Boards-Faculty Committee was appointed to work with the architects and consultants. This committee, which is still at work, is made up as follows: A. Shirley Gray '18, Chairman, from the Trustees; Overseers Neal W. Allen '07, Paul K. Niven '16, and Alden H. Sawyer '27; Donovan D. Lancaster '27, Director of the Union; and Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason, Jr.

The architectural firm is Steinmann, Cain, and White of New York City, which is also doing the new Library. This is the successor firm to McKim, Mead, and White of New York, which designed the original Union, the Walker Art Building, and many other Bowdoin buildings. The builders are Consolidated Constructors and Builders, Inc., of Portland. They are also constructing the new Library and the new Gymnasium.

The food service consultants are Crabtree, Dawson, and Michaels of Belmont, Mass., who served admirably with us in the same capacity at the Senior Center. The bookstore consultant is John Clemons of Middlebury, Vt. Thomas Moore of the architect's staff is the decorator.

President Coles, in spite of his busy schedule, has helped very much with wise counsel and has been able to attend most of our committee meetings. Robert Gleason, who has assisted with the construction of many Bowdoin buildings since World War II, is again with us with his great knowledge of the building business. We are thankful for his assistance. André Warren and Fred Wendelken of the Grounds and Buildings staff have helped us with advice and sketches.

We will all do our best to be ready for you next September.

New Football Coach

On January 5 President Coles announced the appointment of Peter Kostacopoulos as Coach of Football, succeeding Nels Corey '39, who resigned last November. The new coach will also continue to serve as Coach of Freshman Baseball.

"Pete is a fine man who has done an excellent job as an assistant coach," President Coles said. "All of us are sure that he will continue to do an outstanding job in his new assignment."

Athletic Director Mal Morrell '24 said, "I consider Pete an outstanding coach, and I never knew a man more dedicated to the study of football or more thoroughly informed about the sport. He has a keen insight into the game, and we are extremely pleased to have him as our new head coach."

Peter Kostacopoulos

Mr. Morrell said that there were 45 applications for the position and that he had interviewed 20 of the men. Kosty, as Bowdoin's new coach is popularly known on the campus, was among the leading candidates from the start.

Kosty himself said, "I consider it a tremendous challenge to assume the responsibilities of head coach of football at Bowdoin College. It is also a great opportunity, and I shall do my very best to merit the confidence which has been shown in me. It has been a privilege to work under Nels Corey for the past six years."

Stating that he plans "no drastic changes," Kosty said that the Polar Bears will continue to use a winged T offense with a split end. A native of Pawtucket, R. I., he was graduated in 1952 from Pawtucket East (now Tolman) High School. He attended Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield in 1952-53, where he played under Nels Corey, and then entered the University of Maine. There he was co-captain of the football team, for which he played both center and quarterback, was also co-captain of the basketball squad, and played second base and catcher on the baseball team. He was an All-Maine selection in both football and basketball.

After his graduation from Maine, he was an assistant coach of football and basketball at Deering High School in Portland for two years before joining Bowdoin's coaching staff as line coach in 1959. He has been the chief football scout for the Polar Bears and also has taught physical education classes.

Coach Kostacopoulos is married to the former Joann Hanson of Machias, also a graduate of the University of Maine. They have three sons, John (6), Peter (3), and Paul (born last November).

One Way to Help

Some years ago members of the Bowdoin Club of Connecticut established the Connecticut Alumni Scholarship Fund at the College, with the stipulation that no award was to be made from the Fund until its principal had reached the figure of $10,000. Thanks to the efforts, the generosity, and in some cases the ingenuity of Connecticut alumni and their wives, the principal has grown to about $8,500, only $1,500 short of the goal which was originally set.

On December 7 Dr. Charles M. Barbour '33 of West Hartford, a member of the Board of Overseers of the College, wrote of what he termed "a very unusual and very special contribution" that has been made to the Connecticut Scholarship Fund by the wife of his classmate Dr. W. Holbrook Lowell, Jr. of Wethersfield, Conn.

To use Dr. Barbour's words — "Phyll Lowell, Hoby's wife, has over the years done a terrific job in behalf of the Scholarship Fund. Perhaps you know about the containers that were formerly used for sterilizing small things in hospitals or doctor's offices that she acquired and sold to raise money for the Fund. About a year and a half ago she acquired a large number of safety deposit boxes (small and medium sizes) and began selling them to friends and to wives of alumni. As a result of this enterprise she recently sent me a check for $65.00 to be added to the Connecticut Alumni Scholarship Fund. The check is enclosed.

"At some future date, when the Fund has reached $10,000 and some fortunate students from this state are awarded grants from this Fund, they will never know the effort that a large number of people in Connecticut have spent in making the awards possible. It often seems to me that we all take these things too much for granted. I did myself while in college. . . . Phyll is, of course, only one of many who have done a good deal for Bowdoin in this respect."

Campus Career Conference

On February 28 and March 1 the Bowdoin Alumni Council will sponsor its fourth annual Campus Career Conference for undergraduates in cooperation with the Placement Bureau and its Director, Samuel Ladd '29. The Conference will give students from all four classes opportunities to discuss possible future positions with alumni in 12 different occupations. The topics covered by panel discussions will be education, labor relations, publicly-held corporations, the Peace Corps and social services, medicine, law, government, insurance, radio and television, military service, journalism, and marketing and sales.

Arrangements for the Conference are being made by Council President John Cartland '39 of West Hartford, Conn.; Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50; Mr. Ladd; William Thalheimer '27 of Wilmington, Del., who is Chairman of the Council's Placement Committee; and other members of that committee.

A highlight of the two-day program will be a lecture on "The Psychology of Space Travel" by Dr. Leonard W. Cronkhite, Jr. '41, following the Council's annual dinner for members of the senior class on March 1. Dr. Cronkhite is General Director of the Children's Hospital Medical Center of Boston and an expert on human survival in space.

Glee Club Schedule

The Glee Club will sing at Thayer Academy in Massachusetts on February 26, with Skidmore College at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., on February 27, in Brunswick with Westbrook Junior College on March 6, and at Hebron Academy on March 8.

The spring tour, to take place from March 26 through March 31, will include concerts on successive days in Springfield, Mass., Hartford, Conn., Long Island, N. Y., Brooklyn, N. Y., Philadelphia, and Summit, N. J.

On April 7 the Glee Club, under the direction of Professor Robert K. Beckwith, will present a campus concert, and on April 10 it will sing at Lasell Junior College, Auburndale, Mass. The annual "Pops" concert will take place in Symphony Hall in Boston on May 13.

John Donovan Joins Faculty

Dr. John C. Donovan has joined the Faculty as Professor of Government, following his resignation as Manpower Administrator of the United States Department of Labor in Washington, D. C. During the spring semester he is in charge of the course in American government, and he hopes to offer at some future time a seminar in the field of the political process as part of the Senior Center Program. He is taking over much of the work formerly handled by Professor David B. Walker, who resigned from the Faculty in 1964 to continue his Washington assignment as Staff Director for the Senate Subcommittee on Intergovernmental Relations, headed by Maine's Senator Edmund S. Muskie H'57.

A graduate of Bates College in 1942, Professor Donovan received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard and taught at Bates from 1949 until 1959, when he joined Senator Muskie's staff. He became associated with the Department of Labor in 1962 and was appointed Manpower Administrator in March of 1964. During World War II he served as a lieutenant in the Navy.

Professor Korgen Resigns

Professor of Mathematics Reinhard L. Korgen has resigned from the Faculty, effective June 30, to continue as Program Director for the National Science Foundation's Academic Year Institute Programs in Washington, D. C. He administers some 60 Academic Year Institutes and about 280 in-service institutes at colleges and universities throughout the country.

Professor Korgen noted that he was rounding out his 34th year of association with Bowdoin and recalled that he arrived at the College in 1931, planning to stay only three years. The challenge of his work with the NSF is such that he wishes to continue his activity in Washington, but he and his family plan to retain their property at Prince's Point in Maine.

It was under his direction that Bowdoin's Institute in Mathematics became a sequential institute leading to a master of arts degree.

Scholarship to Ingram

Steven K. Ingram '65 of Rehoboth, Mass., a leading scholar-athlete and co-captain of the 1964 varsity football team, has been awarded a National Collegiate Athletic Association Scholarship for graduate study. His grant is one of the first groups of scholarships to be awarded under a new NCAA program, which is financed by that organization's four percent share of football television rights fees. $1,000 scholarships have been awarded to 22 varsity football players, 11 from large colleges and 11 from smaller ones, and 10 more awards will be made to varsity basketball players.

To be eligible for a scholarship, a student must distinguish himself academically, perform with distinction as a member of the football or basketball squad, plan to do graduate work, and conduct himself "both on and off the field in a manner which has brought credit to himself, his institution, intercollegiate athletics, and the ideals and objectives of American higher education."

Ingram has already earned seven varsity letters (in football, basketball, and track) at Bowdoin and will probably get two more this year. He has been a Dean's List student and a James Bowdoin Scholar. A year ago he was selected as a participant in the Independent Study Program in Mathematics and spent the year studying special functions and their uses in mathematical physics under the direction of Professor Richard L. Chittim '41. For nine weeks last summer he continued his studies at the College in this area of mathematics, in a program supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation, which also supported the earlier program.

During the current year Ingram is an Undergraduate Research Fellow, along with nine other seniors. He is working under Professor Daniel J. Sterling on a project entitled "Studies in Differential Geometry."

Ingram presently holds a Carleton S. Connor Memorial Scholarship, provided through the income of a fund established several years ago by friends of the late Mr. Connor, who was a member of the Class of 1936 and served as Chairman of the Alumni Fund, as President of the Alumni Council, and as a member of the Board of Overseers.

Curing "Hardening of the Arteries"

Warning that debating is developing a "hardening of the arteries," Professor Albert R. Thayer '22, who is Harrison King McCann Professor of Oral Communication at Bowdoin, says that the "cure is an injection of variety." His plan is a new debate form that incorporates the case method of a law school with the lively English debate — accented by a touch of Yankee ingenuity — and puts audience and debaters on a nearly equal plane.

"Our objective in the Bowdoin experiment," Professor Thayer says, "is to reach a happy medium between the American form and the English form by placing the debate within a more exciting framework. Unlike the English, our debaters must acknowledge the facts as they are presented in the case — be it fictional or based on reality. Our audience is free for the first time to register favor or disagreement, but it may not challenge the participants with questions until the open forum period that normally follows."

"Unlike the standard American form, our audience does participate to a far greater extent, and our debaters spend far less time grubbing through the library."

Members of the debate teams are given the facts of a difficult case the day before the debate. They use the 24 hours not for research, but as a period of reflective thinking, with the opportunity to organize their arguments on the basis of the facts presented.

When the debate begins, each member of the audience receives a copy of the case, putting him on nearly equal terms with the debaters. The audience is encouraged to reflect its feelings during the debate by cheering arguments which it favors.

The first public test of the Thayer experiment came in December, in the first Wilmot B. Mitchell interfraternity debate of the season. The case was one of moral and social controversy, involving four college girls adrift on a raft. Fearing that additional weight would sink their flimsy refuge, they drown a male survivor who tries to climb aboard.

An "affirmative" team from Sigma Nu upheld society's murder conviction against the girls, while a "negative" team from Phi Delta Psi reasoned for their innocence. The judges decided for Sigma Nu.

Bowdoin will not switch entirely to the case method of debating, Professor Thayer says. "Then our men might go to the opposite extreme — and develop a contempt for facts. We believe that a mixture of orthodox debating with our new experimental form will give us the values (interest, audience participation, use of logic and persuasion) we seek — values not completely present in any single style of debate."

Football Honors

Eleven members of the 1964 football team, which tied for third place in the final United Press International New England small college ratings, were named to a variety of "All-" teams after the season ended. Halfback Paul Soule '66 collected the most laurels, being named to the Boston Record American All-New England team and the United Press International All-New England small college squad, the Portland Sunday Telegram team, and the Bangor Daily News All-Maine team. The Amherst team, which finished the season at the top of the UPI ratings, voted Soule "the most outstanding player to face Amherst."

Quarterback Bob Harrington '65 was named to the Associated Press Little All-New England team and won honorable mention on the UPI team, as well as being selected a member of both All-Maine teams. End Steve Ingram '65 also made both All-Maine units. The other end, Jim MacAllen '66, was selected to the UPI All-New England small college squad and both All-Maine teams. Center Dave Stocking '66 was selected for both All-Maine teams and won honorable mention on the UPI squad. Guard Tom Zilinsky '65 was picked for both All-Maine teams, fullback Bruce Alemian '66 for the Sunday Telegram squad, and tackle Alan Ayer '66 for the Daily News team. Quarterback Maurice Viens '67 and guards Jim Day '66 and Steve Krisko '65 were picked for all-opponent squads named by other colleges, as were most of the other Bowdoin players mentioned.

President Bixler Teaching Senior Seminar

Dr. J. Seelye Bixler, President Emeritus of Colby College, is teaching a seminar entitled "The Philosophy of William James" as part of the Senior Center Program during the spring semester, and he and Mrs. Bixler are in residence at the Center. He is Visiting Professor of Philosophy. Since his retirement in 1960, after 18 years as President of Colby, he has taught at the University of Hawaii, has been a Fellow-in-Residence at Wesleyan University's Center for Advanced Study in Liberal Arts, has been a Visiting Lecturer of the Phi Beta Kappa Association, has served as counsellor to the administration of Thammasart University of Bangkok, Thailand, and has taught at Carleton College in Minnesota.

George Donham Bearce 1922-1965

George D. Bearce, Associate Professor of History at Bowdoin, died on January 18, 1965, at the age of 42. A member of the Faculty since 1954, he was an internationally known specialist on India and its history. His book British Attitudes Towards India, 1784-1858 received the American Historical Association's Wataamull Prize in 1962 as the best volume on the history of India to be published in this country. It is widely used in colleges and universities in the teaching of South Asian history.

Professor Bearce taught courses at Bowdoin in the cultural and intellectual history of Europe up through the Middle Ages, in the history of England from its origins to the present day, and in the history of South Asia in the modern period. While on a leave of absence during 1961-62 he served as Fulbright Lecturer at Osmania University in Hyderabad, India, where he continued his study of Indian art and social life. In 1962 he also headed the American delegation to the International History Conference sponsored by the Pakistan Historical Society and held in Dacca, East Pakistan. Under a travel grant from the American Council of Learned Societies, he returned to India in 1963 to attend the 26th International Congress of Orientalists, at which he delivered a paper on "The Festivals of Mewar: The Interaction of India and the West in Early Nineteenth Century Indian Painting."

A few weeks before Professor Bearce's death, a colleague in the History Department, Professor Roger Howell, Jr. '58, read his paper "Intellectual and Cultural Responses in a Changing Era: 1740 to 1800" for him at the annual meeting of the American Historical Association. He was a contributing author of the book The Glass Curtain Between Europe and Asia and wrote numerous articles and reviews for American and Indian journals. He served as Secretary-Treasurer of the Conference on Asian History and as Secretary of the Conference on South Asian History. In addition, he was a member of the contributing staff of Historical Abstracts, for which he wrote abstracts of articles published in several Australian and Indian journals.

President Coles paid tribute to George Bearce in these words: "Professor Bearce was one of the brilliant young scholars at Bowdoin and a nationally recognized historian. Of keen and incisive mind, he was also a person of great industry and courage. A career of highest promise has been prematurely closed by his death."

Professor Robert A. Walkling, Chairman of the Computing Center Committee, is shown here with the IBM 1620 Computer which was installed at the College several months ago.

Computing Center

Late in November technicians completed installation of a new IBM Model 1620 Computing Center, which is housed temporarily in the Searles Science Building but which will be moved into Hubbard Hall when work on the new library building is completed late this year.

In December members of the faculty and staff completed a series of lectures designed to show them how to make the fullest use of the new equipment, which cost $100,000. The heart of the new Center is the 1620 computer itself. As compact as an average office desk, it performs complex problems in seconds. The unit is capable of storing up to 20,000 pieces of information and can return any one of them in 20 microseconds.

Sports Trophies and Elections

Four men received special trophies at the fall sports banquet on November 19. Quarterback Bob Harrington '65 won the William J. Reardon Trophy as the senior who has made an outstanding contribution to the football team and to the College as a man of honor, courage, and leadership. Center Dave Stocking '66 won the Winslow R. Howland Memorial Trophy as the varsity football player who made the most marked improvement and who best exemplifies the qualities of aggressiveness, cooperation, enthusiasm for the game, and fine sportsmanship.

Jay Shubert '66 was the winner of the Wallace C. Philoon Trophy, presented to a non-letter winner who made an outstanding contribution to the football squad, and the George Levine Trophy went to Gerry Giesler '65 as the varsity soccer player best exemplifying the traits of sportsmanship, valor, and desire.

All-Maine halfback Paul Soule '66 and All-Maine center Dave Stocking '66 were elected co-captains of the 1965 football team; the new co-captains of soccer are Cy Allen '66 and Ed Fitzgerald '66; and the new cross-country captain is Cary Rea '67.

Alumni Fund Awards

Nine Alumni Fund awards were presented at a banquet in the Senior Center dining room on November 6 as part of the annual Alumni Council-Alumni Fund Conference. Winning the Alumni Fund Cup for the fourth consecutive year were the Class of 1917 and its Agent, Edwin H. Blanchard of Jackson Heights, N. Y. They finished first in the Fund competition, the standings for which are figured on the basis of both total dollars given and the percentage of the class contributing. Mr. Blanchard has been a Class Agent for four years, and he and 1917 have won the Alumni Fund Cup for four years.

Both the Class of 1916 Bowl and the Class of 1929 Trophy went to Edward Born of Schenectady, N. Y., and the Class of 1957. The 1916 Bowl is awarded each year to that class whose record in support of the Alumni Fund shows the greatest improvement over its performance the preceding year. In his first year as Agent Mr. Born brought 1957 from 54th place in 1962-63 to 23rd place last year. The Class of 1929 Participation Trophy goes each year to that one of the ten most recent graduating classes which achieves the highest percentage of participation in the Alumni Fund. This was the first time that any Class Agent had earned two trophies in a single year.

Mr. Blanchard and Mr. Born were also among the six recipients of Decade Leader Awards, given to Agents whose classes finish first among the groups within their ten-year graduating period. Other Agents cited were Malcolm E. Morrell '24 of Brunswick, S. Sewall Webster '10 of Augusta, Dr. Ross L. Wilson '40 of Menlo Park, Calif., and Robert Whitman '45 of Winchester, Mass.

Linus Pauling Speaks

On November 24 Dr. Linus Pauling, the only person in history to win two undivided Nobel Prizes, delivered the Annie Talbot Cole Lecture in the Pickard Theater. His subject was "The Moral Aspects of Nuclear Disarmament." That afternoon he gave a special lecture on "Molecular Diseases and Evolution," mainly for physicians, chemists, biologists, and so forth.

World Premiere of Coxe Play

On December 11 and 12 a new play by Professor Louis O. Coxe of the English Department had its world premiere when it was performed by the Masque and Gown. Entitled Decoration Day, the play by the co-author of the Broadway adaptation of Billy Budd is based on the life of General Joshua L. Chamberlain of the Class of 1852, the hero of Little Round Top in the Civil War and later President of Bowdoin and Governor of Maine. Professor Coxe uses several flashbacks, jumping over the years to the time when Chamberlain accepted his Army commission; to the preparation for the battle of Gettysburg; to an Army hospital in Washington; to his return to civilian life; to the State House in Augusta; and to faculty meetings at Bowdoin. The play opens with Chamberlain approaching death in 1914 and then returns to these principal events of his life. He discusses the approaching first World War with a Bowdoin undergraduate who is the grandson of one of his former soldiers, and he is finally put to rest by the College Physician, who is the grand-nephew of another former soldier.

ALUMNI

WITH ART OBJECTS . . .

The Museum of Art is exploring the possibility of holding at Commencement time this year an exhibition of works of art belonging to Bowdoin alumni. Marvin Sadik, the Director of the Museum, would be glad to hear not later than March 15th from any alumni who own objects which might be eligible. Oil paintings, watercolors, drawings, prints, sculpture, and antique decorative art objects and furniture will be considered. The final decision as to whether or not this exhibition is feasible at this time, and, if so, what objects will be included in it, will be made not later than April 1st.

On February 13 and 15 the Masque and Gown will present The Rogue's Trial by Ariano Suassuna, Professor of Aesthetics at the University of Recife in Brazil. Instructor Fredric M. Litto, Acting Director of Dramatics in the absence of Professor Pat Quinby '23 during the spring semester, is directing the production.

The 30th annual student-written one-act play contest will take place on March 19.

Winter Sports Report

A second consecutive triumph in a major basketball tournament and another heartbreaking loss in a hockey tourney were among the highlights of Bowdoin's winter sports record at the mid-January semester break. The Polar Bear hoopmen had posted four victories and eight defeats, but two of the wins were good for another tournament title. The improving hockey squad had a 5-7 record, the swimming team had won one meet and lost two, the indoor trackmen were still looking for their first victory after two dual meets, the rifle team had one defeat on its slate — and the skiing team was still waiting for snow.

Coach Ray Bicknell's basketball squad opened its season with a 78-71 triumph over New Hampshire and then lost to Clark 71-79. Next came a 76-75 victory over Worcester Tech, followed by a 69-87 defeat at the hands of Maine and losses to Tufts (72-77) and M.I.T. (68-81).

The team bounced back with a vengeance in the Blue Nose International Classic at Halifax, Nova Scotia, bringing home the championship by virtue of victories over Acadia University 59-49 and Williams 63-62. It was the second consecutive tournament title for Bowdoin, which swept the Down East Classic at Bangor last year. Polar Bear Captain Dick Whitmore '65, a center, and guard Brian Warren '66 were named to the Blue Nose All-Star team, and Warren shared the most valuable player honors.

The squad ran into difficulty in its next four contests, losing to M.I.T. (66-83), Bates (56-71), Williams (46-70), and Amherst (58-60).

Whitmore paced the team in the scoring and rebounding departments. He had connected on 92 of his 241 field goal attempts and had tossed in 51 of 102 free throws for a total of 235 points. In addition, he had grabbed 126 rebounds.

Forward Howie Pease '66 had a total of

90 rebounds and 132 points with 52 of 116 floor shots and 28 of 51 free throws. Warren had 123 points with 57 baskets out of 154 tries and 9 foul shots out of 17 attempts. He had 53 rebounds.

Other leading scorers included guard Dan Tolpin '66, with 76 points; forward Ned d'Entremont '65, with 74 points; and utility man Steve Ingram '65, with 56 points.

Coach Sid Watson's hockey team got off to a slow start but developed some scoring punch as the season progressed. The icemen lost their first three games — to Brown (1-11), Northeastern (1-13), and Harvard (1-4). The team then defeated Norwich 7-3 but lost to Middlebury (1-5) and Merrimack (0-4).

For the second consecutive year it took an overtime period to deprive the Polar Bear hockey team of a tournament title. In the Intercollegiate Holiday Hockey Tournament at Lake Placid, N. Y., Bowdoin was matched against Middlebury in the opener. With two minutes left to play in the final period, the Polar Bears led 3-0. But three quick enemy goals, followed by a Middlebury tally in overtime, resulted in a 3-4 defeat for Bowdoin and a graphic demonstration of why coaches grow old before their time. In the tournament consolation game an aroused Bowdoin team whipped Colby 6-3.

There followed a 6-2 victory over Pennsylvania and a 4-7 loss to Providence. In their next outing the pucksters once again took the measure of Colby 5-3 (the fourth consecutive win over the Mules!)

and then defeated American International 9-6.

Forward Ed Fitzgerald '66 was pacing the Bowdoin individual scorers, with 10 goals and 8 assists for 18 points. Tied for second place with 12 points each were two other juniors — center Bill Allen, with 6 goals and 6 assists, and defenseman Frank Yule with 5 goals and 7 assists.

Forward Barry Smith '66 had 5 goals and 4 assists for 9 points, and forward Steve Wales '67 had 5 goals and 3 assists for 8 points. Defenseman Tim Brooks '67 had 3 goals and 2 assists for 5 points. Tied with 4 points each were Co-Captain Bill Matthews '65, a defenseman, and sophomore forwards Andy Cornella and Alex Salmela.

Co-Captain Dave Coupe '65 had 241 saves in 7 games, and the other Polar Bear goalie, Dick Leger '66, had 166 saves in 5 games.

Coach Charlie Butt's swimming team opened the season with a 63-32 victory over Connecticut as Captain Tim Robinson '65 won both his specialties, the 100 and 200 yard freestyle races. Harvey Wheeler '67 took the diving, Peter Stackpole '67 the butterfly, and Ralph Poirier '67 the breaststroke. Other Bowdoin firsts were turned in by Karl Aschenbach '66 in the 50, Ed Bailey '65 in the 500 freestyle, and Bill Lynch '65 in the backstroke.

The Polar Bear mermen then lost to Springfield 30-58. Bowdoin winners included Stackpole, Robinson, and one relay team.

Four talented wives of faculty members took part in a Bowdoin Music Club recital on December 4. They are Mrs. John Rogers, pianist; Mrs. Thomas Cornell, soprano; Mrs. Robert Johnson, violinist; and Mrs. Charles Towle, violinist.

In its third meet, Bowdoin lost to Amherst 33-62 despite a triple win by Robinson, who captured the 100, 200, and 500 yard freestyle events. Stackpole won the individual medley and took a second in the butterfly.

The indoor track squad, coached by Frank Sabasteanski '41, opened with a 39½-73½ loss to M.I.T. Alex Schulten '66 hit 57 feet 8½ inches in the 35 pound weight to add an inch to his own meet record. Andy Seager '66 took a first in the high jump, and Ray Bird '66 won the 40 yard dash. Bowdoin scored a sweep in the shot put, with John Coggins '66, Dave Stocking '66, and Max Willscher '67 finishing in that order. Tommy Allen '67 was second in the 600 and Captain Gil Ekdahl '65 second in the pole vault.

The trackmen next lost to Holy Cross 32-81. Schulten again took the 35 pound weight, at 59 feet 8½ inches. Wilson Smith '67 and Ekdahl finished 1-2 in the pole vault. Pete Good '66 won the high hurdles, with John Tarbell '66 third. In the low hurdles Tarbell and Bird finished second and third respectively. Seager was second in the high jump.

Schulten was Bowdoin's only entrant in the Knights of Columbus Games at Boston on January 16, finishing fifth in the 35 pound weight with a heave of 58 feet 8 inches. His distance was the third best for any college athlete in the event.

Sergeant John Muise's varsity rifle squad opened its schedule with a loss to Nasson 1,143 to 1,252. High man for Bowdoin was Mike Harmon '67, with a score of 253 x 300. Captain Steve Munger '65 shot a 239, and Steve Leonard '65 posted a 222. — J.D.K.

Burton Fund Started

The Harold Hitz Burton Memorial Fund has been established at the College through the efforts of members of the Bowdoin Club of Washington. It is open to contributions from all — alumni and non-alumni alike. Gifts for this purpose may be made through the 1964-65 Alumni Fund, with a man's class receiving credit for his contribution toward its dollar objective.

The decision as to the ultimate purpose of the Burton Memorial Fund will depend upon the amount of money which is contributed to it.

A SPECIAL ALUMNI TRIP TO EUROPE?

Mrs. John L. McEntaffer, whose husband is an Instructor in Economics at Bowdoin, is completing preliminary arrangements for a special group trip by air to Europe next summer. It will be open to Bowdoin alumni, students, parents, faculty, staff, and their immediate families.

The trip will be arranged through Pan-American to leave Logan Airport at Boston on Tuesday, June 22, for London, England. Seven weeks later the group will return by similar jet flight from London to Boston, on Thursday, August 12. Perhaps a guided tour of Europe can be arranged for part or all of the intervening weeks for those who are interested.

Preliminary indications are that the adult special round trip rate will be approximately $335 per person (about $140 off the regular price). Children under two may go for 10% of the regular price, and children from two to twelve years of age may go for half price. A minimum group of 25 is necessary if the special rate is to be effective. Reservations should be made as soon as possible and by April 1 at the latest.

Members of the Bowdoin family interested in further details are invited to contact Mrs. McEntaffer at her home, 60 Merrymeeting Road, Brunswick, Maine. Her telephone number is 729-9028, code 207.

ALEXANDER WETMORE (chief author and consultant) and thirteen other leading ornithologists, including OLIN S. PETTINGILL, JR. '30, Song and Garden Birds of North America: National Geographic Society, 1964; pp. 400; $11.95.

Alexander Wetmore uses a quotation from the Book of Proverbs to introduce Song and Garden Birds of North America. Agur, son of Jakeh, says, "Yea, four things which I know not: the way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid." Agur aptly expressed the fascination that a bird of the air had for him. Most of us share this wonder. This seems an appropriate note on which to start a book which will extend your wonder as it increases your knowledge. Fourteen ornithologists, four wildlife photographers, and two artists have pooled their talents to produce this National Geographic Society book about garden and song birds of North America.

This is a book to enrich your life, and here is an example of how it can. When a pair of olive-garbed American goldfinches frequent our feeding station, we now know what we are seeing. Male and female look alike in this season. These warm-blooded creatures are not cold this wintry day, although their body temperature is considerably higher than our own (at 108-112°F.). A goldfinch has more than 2,360 feathers fluffed to make a fine insulation. The dipping, wave-like flight of this bird helps us identify him as our "wild canary" of the summer, and his call of "per-chic-o-ree!" confirms our guess.

The goldfinch is primarily a seed-eater, although in the springtime he will eat aphids and caterpillars. His favorite foods are thistle and dandelion seeds, and he depends upon these as nest-building materials as well. Mating and nest building are delayed until the thistledown is available. This means that in New England a pair of goldfinches has time for but one family before winter. The female chooses the nesting site, which may be in a tree fork thirty feet from the ground or in among the thistles and close to the ground. The nest, which the female builds by herself, is a tightly woven cup of thistledown — so tightly constructed that in a heavy rainstorm it may fill with water and drown the fledgelings if they are left unprotected. It would appear that mother goldfinch has a life filled with responsibility. From mating time until the eggs hatch, the male stays near the nest, dipping and swooping over his mate and singing his glorious song of courtship.

If you are critical of this family relationship, you should read further. Mother goldfinch could do worse. Both goldfinch parents feed the young with pre-digested seed cereal. Young birds often consume food equal to their weight in a single day, and their body weight may increase 20 to 50 per cent daily. The baby birds leave the nest when they are fifteen or sixteen days old and are ready for independent lives. Goldfinches shelter in evergreen thickets during the winter but will travel to wherever there is a good seed supply.

Feeding beside the goldfinches are a few English sparrows, which are not really sparrows at all. Called English sparrows or by their correct name "weaver finch," they annoy me! I think it is because they have so many unseemly people-traits. They chatter and cheep endlessly without having produced anything worth listening to. They steal from other birds — food, nesting materials, living quarters. They succeed, not because they are clever, but because they are bold and quarrelsome. They practice these same traits with their own kind and add to them mate stealing. Each clutch has seven eggs in it, and each set of parents raises two or three broods a year.

After reading this book, I find that there is, after all, some good to be said of the English weaver finches. They eat the Japanese beetle that is so damaging to rose bushes. They feel enough compassion for their young to risk their lives to feed a baby bird that has fallen from the nest. The male with his black bib is a fine example of how a bird's plumage can change seasonally in a way other than molting.

When a blue jay joins the flock on the feeder, his beauty alone is enough to make me appreciate him. He is noisy. It is said that he will appropriate another bird's nest and remodel it before the eyes of the previous owners. He may kill other birds, a hairy woodpecker, for example. This is considerable to forget and forgive on the grounds that he is so ornamental. The ornithologist has facts, however, which plead the cause of the blue jay. Many birds depend upon the warning cries of the jay for safety. Considered apart from other birds, jay parents are models of tenderness and dedication when dealing with their offspring. They build a nest together, and while the female tends the eggs, the male brings her food. Once the eggs hatch, both parents defend the nest and feed and protect the young. In warm weather jays are insect eaters, waging war on the hairy caterpillar, ripping open its cocoon and eating the pupae. Jays also eat mice. In the winter the blue jays become seed eaters, feeding on acorns and pine seeds. We are likely to picture the jay as an all-the-time-winner, with the smaller birds at his mercy, but jays are killed by other birds. Blue jay feathers have been found woven into the nests of other birds, ones reputed to have been victimized by jays. We can only assume that some of the jay's bad qualities have been prompted by earlier wrongs! Bowdoin's Olin Sewall Pettingill, Jr. '30 does a fine job in this book in defense of the blue jay.

"The way of a bird" is a fitting title for an introduction to Song and Garden Birds. This is a collection of facts about birds, facts which in some cases are so fantastic that they are almost unbelievable. Would you believe that a bullfrog could catch a low-flying sparrow and swallow it? Or that a bachelor cardinal would take to feeding goldfish because his instincts suit him for parental responsibilities? You find out why a hummingbird can fly backward and why birds aren't cold. You learn about feather structure, diet, vision, molting, digestion, nest structure, a bird's ability to learn, migration, growth patterns, and mating habits and that these are different with each bird family and with the different species of the same bird family.

Thirty-one different bird families are represented in 327 color photographs and descriptive accounts in Song and Garden Birds. Each family has many members, but those included are only the ones we would see in North America. One might start this book and choose the birds that frequent his own locale. The authors have made this easy for us by indicating each bird's range. It is hard to limit yourself to using the book in this way because there is always the possibility that bird ranges will change or that your own bird-watching range will change.

"What Bird Is That?", the final chapter, is a simple and scientific guide for bird watching by Roger Tory Peterson. Of special help is the section on how to choose and get the best use from your binoculars.

In a pocket at the back of the book is an album entitled "Bird Songs of Garden, Woodland, and Meadow." The work of Arthur A. Allen and Peter Paul Kellogg of the Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology, it has six high-fidelity, vinyl records containing 70 different bird songs. The narration is done by Dr. Kellogg.

Song and Garden Birds of North America leaves me in awe at the breadth of the science of ornithology; it leaves me filled with admiration for an effort which represents a united enthusiasm of all contributors; and it leaves me with a further appreciation for the growing wonder that is mine in the limitless pleasure of bird-watching.

VANCE BOURJAILY, The Unnatural Enemy: The Dial Press, New York, 1963; pp. 182; $5.00.

Here is a book about nature, equally about the nature of man. Each man who responds to the pull of the natural world, whatever his outdoor pleasures — participant or spectator — will find something of himself in this book.

The Unnatural Enemy is Vance Bourjaily's first book of non-fiction, and it is a very good one. It is about men who hunt. It is objective, and introspective. It is startling and beautiful in places. The writing is honest, the effect sharply etched on those who have been there, if not everywhere. Man is the unnatural enemy, unnatural when placed beside hawk or owl — creatures beautifully fashioned for their role in the balance of nature. Man's urge to kill those he loves, feathered and furred, is complicated by conflicting emotions and values that are attitudes toward man, not toward nature; attitudes which reflect, if not a contempt for game, at least a stupid indifference toward it. Some of these attitudes involve codes of sportsmanship inherited uncritically and applied spasmodically, the press of human competition for a dwindling game supply, the symbolic roles of the gamekeeper, the avenger/protector, the rebellious poacher, the meat hunter, the conservationist — yes, even the philosopher.

This book gives expression to things which all who hunt and fish have felt, if vaguely and without articulation. It fascinates with highly personal answers to the questions with which non-hunters and non-fishers challenge us. How can you kill anything? Why are you moved to? What do you get out of it? What does it prove?

The following paragraphs speak for themselves:

"... This is the setting, these the conditions, which make for desperation or ... neurotic behavior when we hunt, fish, or walk in the woods. I will name a few particular, specimen neuroses later (The Doctor Syndrome, The St. Valentine's Day Psychosis, The Rhinoceros Horn Complex) — and I will name my own. But I have not yet named the alternative I spoke about to the British ideal of the sportsman, and as a matter of fact I do not need to. Thorau has done that for me: 'A sojourner in nature,' he calls him, one who stays in nature for a time, trying to fit rather than mar it, learning from it, taking from it, perhaps a token or two — something good to eat, or hard to catch — as evidence for himself that he has understood something of how nature works and how a primitive self might use it.

"There is, in this, not sport so much as self-renewal, an acknowledgment that one is of natural origin and belongs first to a world built by forces, not by hands; and the hunting, which gives shape and purpose to the sojourn, becomes a rite of simplification, in relief of our over-connected domestic and working lives."

Other quotations and illustrations from the writings of Edward, Duke of York, Ivan Turgenev, and Ernest Hemingway serve Bourjaily well in developing his insights into the worlds of the hunter and the hunted. Strongly recommended for hunters who might like a breather from rich, autumnal magazine prose and some fruit for thought into the bargain.

ERNST C. HELMREICH, A Free Church in a Free State: The Catholic Church, Italy, Germany, France, 1864-1914: D. C. Heath and Company, 1964; pp. 128; $1.50.

In recent years the D. C. Heath Company has published a series of books designed to guide the college student through those crucial periods of history about which historians have engaged in significant interpretative debate. Among the latest in the series "Problems in European Civilization" is a useful volume, edited and introduced by Professor Ernst Helmreich of Bowdoin's History Department, entitled A Free Church in a Free State: The Catholic Church, Italy, Germany, France, 1864-1914.

This book should meet a larger audience than is represented by college students enrolled in a history course. Its timeliness is evidenced in the cogent questions raised by Professor Helmreich in his introduction:

Is religious toleration a sound ideal, and what is necessary to its implementation? What is necessary for the achievement of the goal. . . "A Free Church in a Free State"? Is it possible . . . to erect a wall between the affairs of the church and those of the state? What obligations does a church have to the state and the state to the church? Is the concept of a religiously neutral state basically anti-religious, bearing in mind the biblical quotation that he who is not with me is against me? Is the religiously neutral state the first step towards the religiously hostile state. . . ? What constitutes an anti-church attitude on the part of the state? Does the abolition of religious instruction in the schools, the establishment of civil marriage and divorce, or the dissemination of birth control information constitute an illegitimate intervention of the state in the religious field? What is the difference between state support, neutrality, and hostility towards religion?

Obviously the reader cannot expect to find simple answers to these questions. As Professor Helmreich indicates, they involve broader issues of culture and society. Western culture has become so heterogeneous that universal definition of neither church nor state is likely to be agreed upon. And in the United States the issue can scarcely be understood within categories of "church" and "state," for we are a society of many churches, denominations, and sects, and many levels of government — local, state, and national.

The reader will discover in Professor Helmreich's book a discriminating selection of primary and secondary materials. These selections serve a dual purpose: they reveal the range of interpretative disagreement among the historical guild, thus uncovering the lively issues involved, and they provide, with the aid of the author's introduction and notes, a fine narrative description of historical events. For the most part the selections are judiciously chosen, with a fine feeling for balance. One might wish, however, a selection to balance Philip Schaff's description of the Vatican Council. This nineteenth century American church historian had little appreciation for Roman Catholicism, and the selection reveals almost as much about Schaff as about the Council. Protestant church history has lately been undergoing revision in its interpretation of the Roman Catholic Church, and this might have been an appropriate moment to highlight this revisionism.

The author is to be particularly commended for original translations of material heretofore found only in German. Excerpts from the speeches of Bismarck are particularly well chosen. The bibliographic essay which concludes the volume is a student's delight. A book which raises so many important questions should send its readers further afield. Professor Helmreich's is just such a book.

STEPHEN MINOT, Chill of Dusk: Doubleday and Company, 1964; pp. 327; $4.95.

Stephen Minot's novel Chill of Dusk bears on its dust jacket the phrase "a novel of the twenty-first century." The Harvard Alumni Bulletin, noting the blurb inside the jacket, refers to this as an "anti-war" novel. Neither comment, I think, bears reliable testimony to what the book is really about, and we had best settle that point before we attempt to evaluate the degree of Mr. Minot's success.

Elizabeth Frezno (née Adams), the only major character to endure the rigors of the whole twelve years of the novel, feels a disturbing sense of depravity, "the feeling that in her life she had been sinking, like a shell in the deepest sea, drifting through progressively darker zones — gliding back through epochs of human effort toward the darkest age." (p. 316) To be sure, this takes place in the twenty-first century. To be sure, the nuclear holocaust of the third World War places the people of Phoenix (Brunswick, Maine, though it is unimportant) in a situation of ultimate stress. But the novel neither indicts war nor makes any particular use of its setting. The novel is about PEOPLE, and Mr. Minot is attempting here to define the human character. He is not writing about war and the twenty-first century any more than Sophocles wrote about Theban government in Oedipus Rex. The novel is about the sinking, drifting, gliding which Elizabeth senses and we see acted out.

We measure the state of Phoenix's civilization by the nature of the authority of town concepts. At the novel's beginning the town supports, somewhat grudgingly, the authority of Thomas Adams, one of only two men born before the war. He is a book-bound monomaniac who forces the town to offer its young to his school for the traditional period of education. The villagers allow him to teach their children the humanistic (and atheistic) values of literature, geography, and mathematics in exchange for his willingness to operate and maintain the town's central heating plant, the last vestige of the pre-war life. These values come into increasingly frequent conflict with the practical needs of survival. In a final confrontation the demands of the body overwhelm those of the intellect, and Adams escapes the wrath of the townspeople by committing suicide.

Adams' successor, an interim leader, is his son-in-law, Luke Frezno. Luke is a Natty Bumppo kind of frontiersman and an indifferent Roman Catholic. His ability to survive inspires the village, but he does not wish to rule. The extreme anti-Catholicism of the past years and Luke's tolerance shift the power and responsibility of government to the shoulders of Father Leblanc, an unordained "priest" who has never even seen the Bishop. In order to perpetuate the power of the Church, Father Leblanc begets an heir, to be his successor, upon Elizabeth Frezno. Under Father Leblanc the town forsakes the virtues of individual strength of human endurance for a perversion of religious humility. Since Father Leblanc always acts after the fact, through the machinery of the Mass, the people of Phoenix pursue animal gratification (exemplified by the sluttishness of Luke's daughter Willow), punctuated weekly by visits to the church. The corruption which spreads from the "priest" to the whole of the village makes it careless in the midst of its apparent prosperity.

One night the town is captured by a militaristic band of neo-Zoroastrians, who call themselves Solists, after the chief deity in their polytheistic religion. Slowly their power forces the conversion of most of the townsfolk. In a frenzied bacchanalia the Solists and their converts sacrifice Willow Frezno to their gods. Luke, Elizabeth, their sons, and the older son's pregnant wife escape by the light of the burning village. There is no apparent hope for civilized people in a heathen, uncivilized world. Alas, there seems to be little more hope for uncivilized and self-destructive people, irrespective of the state of the world. Man has finally drifted back to an almost prehistoric barbarity, and has demonstrated the primacy of his animal nature.

A few years ago I heard Robert Frost express his own certainty that Man would never destroy himself. Mr. Minot seems to suggest the contrary, that given an opportunity Man will certainly destroy himself quite completely. Mr. Minot speaks clearly, if sadly, but his theme is not at all original — many of us recognize this kind of retrogression as one possible eventuality. Mr. Minot's style is not original either, but he has a good narrative sense and a functional, if unspectacular, prose style, and his characters are as fully realized as they ought to be. The plot accelerates continually, building a good pace and avoiding unnecessary repetitions. All in all, Chill of Dusk is an enjoyable book, and, as a first novel, it is extremely competent work.

DONALD G. ADAM, also a graduate of Harvard, is Instructor in English at Bowdoin.

Notes

LEROY D. CROSS, Faculty Secretary of Bowdoin College, assistant editor of the New England Quarterly, and — to add to his distinctions — father of three Bowdoin sons — has contributed an article in the December, 1964, issue of Appalachia entitled "The Four Thousand Footers of Mountaineering Literature." To qualify for membership as a "Four Thousand Footer," one must climb forty-six mountains listed in the Appalachian Mountain Club Guide. Mr. Cross proposes another group which would require perhaps a longer and more strenuous apprenticeship — "the reading of forty-six mountaineering books essential to a well-rounded knowledge of our heritage of mountaineering literature." Appended is a list of Roy's forty-six favorites.

"Perceval" Marginalia (Hayward-California, 1964; pp. 58), a pamphlet by EDWARD

B. HAM '22, presents a review and restatement of the problem in Arthurian literature of Chrétien de Troyes and the Grail controversy in Chrétien's Roman de Perceval.

The Idea of the South, Frank E. Vandiver, Editor, published for Rice University by the University of Chicago Press, 1964, contains an article by RICHARD B. HARWELL, Librarian of Bowdoin College, entitled "The Stream of Self-Consciousness." The University of Georgia Press has recently published Confederate Imprints in the University of Georgia Libraries, edited by Mr. Harwell.

Proper Words in Proper Places by PAUL I. RICHARDS and IRVING T. RICHARDS '20 (The Christopher Publishing House, Boston, 1964) is a useful guide for effective writing. "Detailed suggestions are given for planning a work, for starting the writing of it, and for locating rough spots in the written draft."

"Hamlet" Scene by Scene by GEORGE S. JACKSON '27, an outline of that Shakespearean play, has been printed recently in pamphlet form by Bruce Humphries, Boston.

SVEN B. HAMRELL '48, a former Bowdoin Plan student from Sweden, is co-editor of The Soviet Bloc, China, and Africa (The Scandinavian Institute of African Studies, Uppsala, Sweden, 1964).

ROBLEY WILSON, JR. '52 is the author of "Notes Toward Yet Another Theory," a poem published in the Winter, 1965, issue of Carleton Miscellany. He also had a poem published in a recent issue of Commonwealth.

EDWARD G. HUDON '37, Assistant Librarian of the Supreme Court of the United States, is the author of an article entitled "Literary Piracy, Charles Dickens, and the American Copyright Law," published in the December, 1964, issue of the American Bar Association Journal.

In the article Mr. Hudon relates the story of the struggle in this country to obtain passage of a copyright law to protect foreign authors from literary pirates. The leader in the struggle was Charles Dickens, who received nothing from the American editions of his novels, although they were even more popular in this country than in England.

JAMES P. PETTEGROVE '30, Professor of English at Montclair State College in New Jersey, is the author of an article on Eugene O'Neill, published last October in a memorial issue of the University of Vienna's drama magazine Maske und Kothurn. He spent 1963-64 as a Fulbright lecturer on American drama at the School of Theater of the University of Vienna.

NEAL W. ALLEN, JR. '40 is the author of "Clio and the Bard," an article about William Shakespeare and his plays, which appeared in the Summer, 1964, issue of the Union College Symposium. Dr. Allen is Chairman of the Department of History and the Division of Social Studies at Union and a specialist in English and European history.

Alumni Clubs

ALBANY

Secretary Ed Born '57 reports a pleasant informal meeting of some Albany-area Bowdoin men and their wives with Associate Director of Admissions Robert Mellow on Thursday, November 19, at his home in Schenectady. He wrote, "I hope that Bob Mellow found the meeting at the Borns' as enjoyable as we did. It was my first contact with Bob, and I must say that he does a very good job of explaining a very difficult subject. Those present included Club President Lew Welch '54, David Lovell '60, the Gerry Yorks '37, John Ossolinski '62, and the Borns."

The Albany Club is forming a local prospective students committee. Interested alumni in the area should contact the Secretary at 1046 Wendell Avenue, Schenectady.

The spring meeting will be held on Friday, May 7, when Dean Kendrick will be the guest speaker.

CHICAGO

The Bowdoin Club of Chicago held a fall stag dinner meeting on Monday, November 16, at Stouffer's Restaurant on West Madison Street. The meeting began with a 5:45 cocktail hour, followed by dinner at 6:30.

President Dick Means presided at a brief business session, which included the election of these officers for the coming year: Richard Means '44, President; Edwards Ripley '58, Vice President; Harold Fish '25, Secretary; and Stanley Sargent '35, Alumni

Council Member. Stan Sargent reported briefly the high points of the fall conference of the Council and the Alumni Fund, which he attended as the representative of the Chicago group.

The special guest of the evening was Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50, who spoke of the many construction projects in progress, discussed the Senior Center program, and outlined other topics of Bowdoin interest. There was an extended period of questions, answers, and general discussion.

Also present at the meeting were Shirley Gray '18, Hal Fish '25, Howie Vogel '36, Geoff Houghton '53, and Ted Johnston '58.

Retiring President Bob McAvoy '50 is Chairman of the Prospective Students Committee. Local alumni interested in subfreshman work may contact him at 799 Foxdale Avenue, Winnetka, Ill.

CLEVELAND

The University Club in Cleveland was the site of a dinner meeting on Friday, November 20. Following a social hour and dinner, Club President Cal Vanderbeek '49 introduced Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50, who showed color slides of the campus and brought the latest news from Brunswick. Others attending the meeting were Bob and Sally Burton '43, Virgil Bond '37, Ollie Emerson '49, John Hickox '34, Pete Relic '58, and Dave Roberts '62.

The Club held another of its annual Christmas-week luncheons on Tuesday, December 29, at the Mid-Day Club. Eight alumni attended: Bradner '63, Foster '33, Freese '50, Geffine '63, Hickox '34, Kloppman '64, Woods '37, and Vanderbeek '49. Two undergraduates, Bamberger '67 and Bittenbender '68, were also present as special guests, while the Club entertained eleven junior and senior subfreshmen from local schools.

President Cal Vanderbeek writes, "Bill Geffine did the honors as discussion leader. Bradner, Kloppman, Bittenbender, and Bamberger did an excellent job of filling in. Their comments regarding Bowdoin were excellent, on an extremely high plane, aimed primarily at the merits of the small college, the abundance of excellent professors, courses, and facilities for accumulating knowledge, regardless of one's personal interest."

CONNECTICUT

Associate Director of Admissions Bob Mellow and Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 met with eight Hartford-area alumni at the University Club in Hartford for the monthly luncheon on Wednesday, December 2. Mr. Barnard brought general news of the College, and Mr. Mellow spoke about Bowdoin's present admissions situation and his estimates of future admissions problems and solutions.

That same night the Connecticut Club sponsored a meeting for alumni, subfreshmen, and parents at the First Church of Christ (Congregational) in West Hartford, where the Reverend Gordon Stearns '54, the Associate Minister, was host. Approximately 40 school boys and a dozen alumni and other guests were present. Club President Ralph Keirstead '26 introduced Mr. Barnard, who showed color slides of the campus, and Mr. Mellow, who spoke about Bowdoin admissions and answered many questions from the guests.

Luncheon Chairman Bob Spencer '60 reports that the day for the Connecticut Club's luncheons has been changed to the third Thursday of each month for the remainder of the season. The group will meet at the University Club to hear Overseer Frederick Perkins '25 on February 18, Overseer Charles Barbour '33 on March 18, and Placement Director Samuel Ladd '29 on April 15.

KENNEBEC VALLEY

The Kennebec Valley Bowdoin Club met on Wednesday, December 2, at the Pine Ridge Tavern in Waterville for a social hour at 6:30 and dinner at 7:30. Secretary Jon Lund '51 reports, "The meeting was a distinct success. We had a total of 34, counting the speaker and guests.

"President Tom Macomber '50 introduced Physics Professor Jim Turner '58 and Staff Writer Dave Leake, who gave a brief account of the activities of the News Services Office.

"Coach Frank Sabastcanski '41 gave a fascinating talk, accompanied by his excellent color slides taken during his recent trip to Ghana. He entertained us with a rare mixture of humor and keen insight which seems to characterize our athletic coaches. I heard many favorable comments after the meeting, and there was still a cluster of alumni around Frank when I left."

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Despite an early winter storm, 24 alumni and wives gathered at the Exeter Inn on Friday evening, December 4, to meet Professor Athern Daggett '25 and News Director Joe Kamin, who were the special guests for the meeting. A social hour was followed by dinner.

Secretary Dutch Morse '42 reports, "The meeting was most successful despite the bad weather. Skip Howard '54, Representative on the Alumni Council, was one of the members whose attendance was made impossible by the weather, but he took the time to telephone his report to President Norm Milne '54, who in turn delivered a capsule version, with the further representation that a mimeographed copy would be furnished to all who attended the meeting." Professor Daggett and Mr. Kamin brought the latest news from the campus.

NEW JERSEY

President Art Hamblen '48 reports that two successful prospective student meetings were sponsored in the northern New Jersey area on Sunday, January 17, with Associate Director of Admissions Bob Mellow representing the College. One was held at 3:30 p.m. at the home of Roy Heely '51 in Tenally, and the other was at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Bob Porter '34 in Summit.

Northern New Jersey alumni are reminded that the Bowdoin Glee Club will sing at Summit High School on Wednesday evening,

PHILADELPHIA

The Bowdoin Club of Philadelphia held a dinner meeting on November 17 at the Bala Golf Club, with some 22 alumni and friends present to greet Librarian Rick Harwell and hear his interesting and informative talk. "Rick spoke of General Howard, liberally interjected his own thoughts (Southern, of course), and related some recent news from the College," Secretary Ron Golz '56 reports.

Assistant Secretary-Treasurer John Malcolm '54, who is also the Luncheon Chairman, is completing arrangements for the regular monthly luncheons, beginning in January. Interested alumni may contact John at 231 North Highland Avenue, Lansdowne.

ROCHESTER

Secretary-Treasurer-Elect Ted Robbins '53 has recently sent a newsletter to all Bowdoin men in the Rochester, New York, area. The essence of it is self-explanatory: "At an informal gathering at Eddie's Chop House on Monday, November 23, twelve alumni from the area joined in forming a Bowdoin Club of Rochester. The purpose of the club will be to promote the interests of Bowdoin in our community and to maintain our own interest in the College and in each other.

"Present were the following area alumni: Walt Bowman '31, Curt Brewer '56, Bob Clarke '38, Ben Drake '29, Brian Flynn '57, Bill Fairclough '40, Cuy Hawkes '36, Dan Healy '37, Pete Hetherington '55, Rick Mstrom '61, Vincent Nowlis '35, and Ted Robbins '53. Special guests were Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 and George Craighead '25 of the Bowdoin Club of Buffalo. Several other Rochester alumni, who were unable to attend asked to be included in any plans for future gatherings.

"After a most pleasant social hour and a buffet dinner, a resolution to form a local Bowdoin Club was passed unanimously. The following were chosen officers for the coming year: President, Curt Brewer; Secretary-Treasurer, Ted Robbins; and Alumni Council Representative, Ben Drake. Formal petition for recognition of the Rochester Club will be presented to the Alumni Council at its midwinter meeting in February.

"Plans for a spring get-together were discussed. It was agreed that the meeting should be with wives, should include a few guidance counselors from some of the area high schools, and, if possible, should feature Professor Bill Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center, as guest speaker.

"Following the general discussion, Pete Barnard brought us up to date on the latest happenings in Brunswick. His beautiful color slides of the campus provided a genuine treat for us all. Everyone had a most enjoyable evening and left with a feeling of optimism about the future of Bowdoin's newest alumni organization."

Convener Steve Rule '58 reports a Christmas-week luncheon meeting of the Bowdoin Club of St. Louis on Tuesday, December 29, at the Diplomat Motel. "This was a very successful event and I believe we should make it an annual affair. All present enjoyed themselves very much.

"We met at the Diplomat at noon for a short social hour and luncheon. During the course of the meal, I could see that all the prospective students were enjoying themselves very much and obviously picking up lots of information from Dave Lander '66 and Jim Goldfarb '68, plus the alumni present, so I just let things proceed and did not call on the undergraduates for informal remarks as I had originally intended.

"A total of 20 gathered for this affair — 10 alumni, two undergraduates, and eight prospective students. The following alumni were present: Blake '47, Brace '50, Fischer '60, Goldman '37, Handy '52, O'Neill '38, Poor '49, Rosen '45, Rule '58, and Taylor '20."

ST. PETERSBURG

In the absence of Convener Charles Lincoln '91, who is spending the winter in Brunswick, Dr. Alton Pope '11 reports that the Bowdoin Club of St. Petersburg held a successful first luncheon of the season at the Pennsylvania Hotel on Thursday, December 10. Ten alumni were present: Haley '07, Webster '10, Pope '11, Redfern '11, Kennedy '13, McMurtrie '13, Newcombe '14, Fish '15, McNaughton '17, and Stack '22.

The Club will meet regularly on the second Thursday of each month for luncheon meetings through April 8. Visiting Bowdoin

SPRINGFIELD

Club President Ed Sample '49 reports a small but successful fall meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Springfield on Thursday evening, November 19, at the Storowton Tavern. A social hour at 6:30 p.m. was followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Attending were Charles Bergeron '53, Larry Dwight '54, Ed Sample '49, Ted Chambers '53, George Davis '57, their wives, and Bob Fleischner '39 and John Kelly '35.

News Director and Mrs. Joseph Kamin were special guests from the College. Ed reports, "Joe certainly gave an excellent speech. He's a tremendous asset to the College. In fact, he sounds like a Bowdoin alumnus; his enthusiasm is wonderful! I am only sorry that we didn't have a greater turnout for Joe and Judy."

The Springfield Club is working on plans for a subfreshman meeting in January and a Glee Club concert later in the spring.

WASHINGTON

Secretary Jay Carson '53 reports, "The Bowdoin Club of Washington held a 'Summer Send-off Party' on Saturday, June 6, at the home of Clarence Johnson '28 on Hillridge Drive, Rock Creek Hills.

"Over 70 alumni, wives, and guests enjoyed the social hour, followed by dinner, featuring steamed clams, Maine lobster, and all the fixings. The guests included four subfreshmen about to enter the Class of 1968 from the greater Washington area, Donahue, Lyon, Jonas, and Rector, and their parents. The Club also entertained guidance counselors from local schools, thereby strengthening alumni liaison with a source of supply for future generations of Bowdoin men from this area."

The Club held a very successful fall meeting at the Georgetown home of the Honorable and Mrs. Robert Hale '10 on Thursday, November 19. President Dave Marsh '51 reports, "Some 55 alumni, wives, and guests were at the Hales' to enjoy the remarks of Librarian Rick Harwell and CBS Correspondent Paul Niven '46. The hospitality of the Hales was, as usual, excellent, and honored guests included Professors Reinhard Korgen and Jim Abrahamson '26, presently on leave from the Bowdoin faculty, and former Professor David Walker.

"In addition to remarks by the speakers, Council Member Ed Stetson '41 gave us a rundown on Alumni Council activities, and Ed Hudon '37 spoke of the Washington Club's plans to raise a special fund honoring the memory of Justice Harold H. Burton '09."

YORK COUNTY

Club Secretary Cab Easton '48 reports a successful stag dinner meeting held at the Chef Wilhelm Restaurant in Ogunquit on Thursday evening, November 19. "The business session was opened by President Edwin Walker '36, who remarked that this is the beginning of the third year of this club, which has held fall and spring meetings since its founding in the fall of 1961. Treasurer Cab Easton reported a balance of $2.61, with some profit expected on the current dinner and from the annual dues of $1.00 per member. This will be enough to cover mailing costs. Alumni Council Member Rob Wilson '22 presented a very complete report of the recent fall meeting of the Council.

"The Club voted to have a ladies' night dinner meeting in the spring, at a time and place to be selected by the dinner committee: Chairman Lendall Smith '31, Maurice Weare '30, and Cabot Easton '48.

"The following nominating committee was appointed to report at the spring meeting, with a slate of officers for 1965-66: George Willard '30, Chairman; Churchill Cressey '50; and Laurence Staples '45.

"Professor Pat Quinby '23 was introduced as a guest from the College. He reminisced briefly about his contact with some of the club members. The principal speaker was Professor Thomas A. Riley '28, who presented his outstanding program 'I Walk to Work,' with lovely color slides of the campus and pictures of many faculty members who are fondly remembered by alumni in York County.

"We were happy to have present again J. Hudson Sinkinson '02 of Kennebunk, one of the oldest members of the Club and very active for his 86 years."

News Of The Classes

1895 In December Joe Roberts reported, "I plan to attend the Bowdoin 1965 Commencement, my wife accompanying me. It is my class year, my 70th. I am the sole survivor of 1895. We hope after Commencement to make a little side trip to the island of Monhegan." Joe's address is P.O. Box 1384, Pueblo, Colo.

1898 In November Clarence Eaton reported, "Re-elected State Genealogist for the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of Maine. Since 1925 State Secretary and State Historian for the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of Maine; Member of Society of Sons of the American Revolution; Society of the Order of Founders and Patriots of America; Society of the Descendants of the Colonial Clergy. Health: most excellent."

Donald MacMillan observed his 90th birthday on November 10. A newspaper story published on November 9 said that he is "currently engaged in the monumental task of identifying and cataloguing thousands of photographs, books, and papers documenting his half century of Arctic exploration."

"MacMillan looks and acts like a much younger man than he is. Last summer he went swimming in the chilly waters of the back beach near his trim white house on Commercial Street.

"The house, MacMillan's boyhood home, is filled with the lore and substance of the Arctic. Everywhere in evidence are such things as Eskimo canoes, the brass trappings of shipboard, a tusk lamp, and paintings of the grim, forbidding northland.

"It is in this house that MacMillan and his author wife Miriam are preparing his Arctic documents and books for Bowdoin College, which will house a permanent record of his achievements."

1902 Secretary, Hudson Sinkinson

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Noyes, whose son Frank died on January 2.

1903 Sam Gray's widow, Mrs. Bess Benson Gray, died on November 7, following a long illness.

After 48 years as Cumberland County Register of Probate, Henry Peabody was defeated in his bid for re-election in November. A feature article about him in the Portland Sunday Telegram for December 27 said, in part, "When he walks out of that office Thursday, the County loses an acknowledged authority on probate practice and law.

"But his experience and knowledge won't be lost.

He already has written some chapters of a treatise on probate procedure, and he has extensive notes for the remainder of a volume which will be of assistance to every lawyer concerned with this intricate and sometimes baffling phase of law."

"Peabody plans to have an office, and to be associated as a consultant, with a law firm now being formed, in which his son, Arthur A. Peabody, will be a partner."

"His wife, the former Velma W. Greenlaw of Westbrook, is also an attorney. They were married June 30, 1919."

"Semi-retirement, he says, will give him more opportunity to enjoy his three grandchildren, the son and two daughters of his son, Arthur. It also will provide more time at the family-owned farm in Gorham, N. H., which he loves.

"And there will be photography, meteorology, work on his book, and his continued connection with probate matters to keep him busy."

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
Jackson Heights, N. Y. 11372

On December 29 Sam Dana reported, "We are just back from five weeks in California, where I have been making a study of the proposal for a redwoods national park. This is a highly complicated and controversial subject, on which the Directors of the American Forestry Association wanted some information, so they drafted me to get it. We were fortunate to get out of Humboldt County shortly before the start of the disastrous floods. Apparently they have been the worst ever.

"Except for a trip to Washington next month to complete the report on the redwoods park study, we expect to spend the winter in Ann Arbor, Mich., at 2027 Hill Street. Snow shoveling and various odd jobs should keep me busy."

1905 Secretary, Ralph N. Cushing
10 Knox Street
Thomaston

Class Secretary Ralph Cushing and his wife, Nida, are spending the winter months in Gulfport, Miss., where their address is Apartment 302, Box EE, Alamo Plaza Hotel Courts. They left Thomaston and Maine on December 3 in a snowstorm.

Ray Pettengill has been to Jacksonville, Fla., to see Everett Hamilton's widow, who is living at the Wesley Manor there. He is not certain that he and his wife will be able to attend our 60th in June because Rachel's back limits their traveling.

Paul Robbins plans to attend our 60th Reunion in June, if all goes well. John Woodruff doesn't think he can be there because he is a victim of arthritis.

1907 Secretary, John W. Leydon
Philadelphia 29, Pa.

Class Secretary John Leydon reported just before Christmas, "We received a beautiful little book of poems by Margaret S. Allen that she wrote through the years and that friends persuaded her to have printed by the Anthoensen Press of Portland. 1907 is proud of its distaff side also."

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Ben Briggs, whose wife, Dot, died suddenly in December. With Mary K. Brown of California, she was United States Champion in tennis doubles in 1912. She also won the singles championship in 1912 but was defeated by Mary Brown in the challenge round.

On November 28 John and Hannah Halford observed their 50th wedding anniversary. Among the Bowdoin people present were Mr. and Mrs. John Leydon '07, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cary '10, Frank Evans '10, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Hovey '26, John Hovey '55, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Halford, Jr. '38, and John Halford '64.

Frank Evans '10 and the famous Sitka Spruce at Forks in the State of Washington. This tree was standing when Columbus discovered America nearly 500 years ago.

The Halfords live at 1676 Sheridan Lane, Norristown, Pa. They have a son, John Jr. '38; a daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Parker, Jr.; and five grandchildren.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Roscoe Hupper, whose brother, Harold H. Hupper of Martinsville, died in a car-backhoe accident on December 10.

Before returning to the United States in November, after his tour of duty as Honorary Mayor of the Spanish town of Zalamea de la Serena, Sturgis Leavitt delivered two lectures (in Spanish) at the University of Madrid. He wrote to the Editor of the Alumnus, "You see, being Mayor doesn't keep me from being a college professor. Here in Madrid I have been trying to see all the shows in town — I have been to 19 so far — and to win in the lottery, which is drawn three times a month. I am a bit ahead at this moment."

1909 Acting Secretary, Jasper J. Stahl

The memory of Harold Burton seems to linger with us, and justly so, I think, for in my judgment he was one of the truly great men of our time. We are now told that the Harold Hitz Burton Beneficiary Aid Fund has been started at the Harvard Law School by Mr. Frank E. Bubna of Cleveland, a long-time friend of the Justice. Income from this fund will be available for grants and loans to students at the Law School.

Ellen Breen, Secretary of Justice Burton, writes under date of November 10, 1964: "Letters from Bowdoin commanded his interest always, and he seemed especially pleased when the day's communications contained a message" from his class.

It is worthy of note that our classmate Jim Sturtevant, at an age near eighty, still continues the active practice of medicine in his home town of New London, Conn. Only recently have the Doctor and his wife returned from a trip into the South, which included a visit with their son, the Reverend Joseph Sturtevant '43, Rector of St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church of Columbia, South Carolina. Thus two grandsons of 1909 have recently come to light in our annals as Ministers of God. Could these be cases of spiritual atavism — a strike back to benign influences ("the light that never was on sea or land") shed in those morning worship services in the Chapel back in 1905-1909? This question is asked timidly lest it cause the Neo-heathens to rage unduly.

On August 10, 1960, our old classmate Bob Messer alighted at my home from the air on his way back from Copenhagen to Los Angeles. It was a happy experience for your agent to receive another message from this prodigal on Thanksgiving Day. He fears there will be few of us who will recall him. In this he errs, for those early days at Bowdoin are too full of vivid detail to warrant such a thought. Bob has really spent a lifetime in California — the last fifteen years in a building barred to the public and in the private employ of a man who is a national figure, but whom, strangely enough, Bob has never seen.

We continue to hope that there may soon be others of our still nebulous classmates who will appear in these notes.

A recent issue of a Governor Dummer Academy publication carried a feature article by Arthur Cole entitled "The Founding of the Archon." The Editor's sketch of the author said, in part, "In the fall of 1904 the young son of the Haverhill lawyer entered Dummer Academy. A member of the baseball, football, and basketball teams, he was the first editor of The Archon, the vice-president and valedictorian of the class of '07. The ranking scholar of the school in his senior year, he also won first place in the Ambrose Prize Speaking contest. Indeed, the class prophecy foretold that Arthur H. Cole would be appointed by the Dummer Trustees to the 'position of professor of Latin and Greek before taking any college examinations.'"

"It is with pleasure tempered with awe, then, that your editor presents the delightful and interesting reminiscences of Dr. Cole — first editor of The Archon — the Governor Dummer boy of 1904."

James Pierce of Houlton is Acting Chairman of the Citizens Committee for the Maine Power Authority, which favors the development of a hydroelectric power plant in the upper St. John River at Cross Rock in Aroostook County. Jim is President of the First National Bank of Houlton and a member of the timberlands firm of Madigan and Pierce. In addition, he is a Trustee of Madigan Memorial Hospital in Houlton and a member of the Maine Industrial Building Authority.

Republican Sumner Pike of Lubec was elected to the Maine House of Representatives in November.

In the November election Class Secretary Luther Whittier was elected to the Maine House of Representatives to represent Farmington, Industry, New Vineyard, Temple, Carthage, and Weld and also Perkins and Washington Plantations. A Democrat, Luther made his first bid for a seat in the Legislature back in 1922.

A feature story in the Portland Press Herald early in January said, in part, "Local folks have been concerned since November 3, on two points concerning Luther's election.

"Since Luther is a bachelor, they fear he won't have a partner for the Governor's Ball. This concern fazes Luther not at all.

"The other concern, since Luther rides a bike and does not own or drive a car, is the problem of the special Representative's license plates.

"Luther's comment: 'I'll have to get those and put them fore and aft on the bike.'

"As Luther prepares to begin his work in Augusta, he says, 'At age 75, I joined the Masons; at 76, I got elected to the Legislature; and I'm wondering what can possibly happen at age 77.'"

1914 Secretary, Alfred E. Gray

In a letter received last July 8, Richard A. Hall informed the Class Secretary that his mother, Katherine B. Hall, passed away on May 29, 1959. There are four children surviving: David T. Hall of White River Junction, Vt., Mrs. Ruth Hall Guernsey of West Lebanon, N. H., Captain John A. Hall of Dow Air Force Base, Bangor, and Richard A. Hall of Waldoboro.

A telegram addressed to the Secretary was found on the bulletin board at our Headquarters in Coleman Hall on Saturday morning, June 13. It contained this message:

"The light burns dim and the stars are clear,
And lilac-sweet is this night of June,
And out of my window, there as here,
I hear the pines at their old, old tune —
The old, old tune that will not grow old,
And I send you thanks with my heart's own pen."

"So with all my heart I proudly echo my husband's pen and send you my own thanks for all that Bowdoin gave to him and, therefore, to me too. Jean L. Robinson."

Mrs. Robinson has sent to the College Professor Robinson's record "Books and the Bad Life," and later on the Alumnus will carry a review of it.

John Thalheimer retired last August as Chief of Budgets and Statistics with the Memphis (Tenn.) Works of the International Harvester Company. An article in the Memphis Works News for October 5, 1964, datelined Santa Maria, Calif., said of John, "Don't be surprised if on a visit to California you see a man standing on his head trying to capture the roaring surf in oils for posterity."

"That daffy-looking artist will be John Thalheimer, former Memphis Works chief of budgets and statistics. After his retirement to this California retreat in August, Thalheimer decided to resume in earnest his all-consuming hobby — painting."

"Thalheimer started painting as a young man, has been painting over 40 years. Many of his friends, in Memphis, Auburn, N. Y., and Chicago, are possessors of his handiwork with the brushes."

"He likes to do landscapes and seascapes — especially seascapes — and his new location is ideal. Santa Maria is about half-way between Los Angeles and San Francisco, and beaches and mountains are not much more than a stone's throw from his home."

"A year-round temperature average of 48 low and 75 high contributed greatly to his and his wife Jean's decision to come here. Then, too, daughter Marianne and grandson Thomas (Chip) Morrissey live here."

"There is a quiet swimming pool, complete with patio, and whenever Thalheimer is not busy with his artwork, you can find him swimming."

Clayton Bardsley was featured in the "Face of Maine" column in the Portland Press Herald in December. It said, in part, "Clayt is well known as a clothier after some 40 years in the business, but he also has gained a wealth of esteem in the world of sports."

"A second baseman four years in high school, he began playing semipro ball at 13. 'Everybody did it,' says Clayt with a smile. 'I played until I was so old I staggered.' Actually Clayt was about 30 when Mrs. Bardsley put the brakes on for him.

"I played the Pine Tree League, Saco Valley, Pequawket League, and the Government League in Washington, D. C.' Clayt played with some of the best in the area, including major leaguers Sibbi Sisti, Bump Hadley, and Jack Hayes.

"Clayt's big baseball chance came with a tryout with the Washington Senators. 'I went up with Jack Hayes. He was traded to the White Sox, and they wanted to send me to the minors. I told them I didn't want it that way, and that's the way it ended.'

"Still very much in the sports picture, Clayt umpires schoolboy baseball and is a registered Maine guide and a licensed boxing official.

"It appears the Bardsley name will continue to shine in sports, as Clayt's sons, Joe (11) and Tom (10), were on the local Little League team the past season and did standout jobs."

Peso has been living in Bridgton all his life.

With reference to Tan Son Nhut, an Air Force base in South Vietnam, it said, "Across the vast, sprawling network of runways, a tall young captain from Waterville, Me., has steady experience with mortar rounds.

"This is Capt. John Towne, third of his family to serve the military as a field surgeon.

"Towne, a graduate of Boston University in 1962, is a volunteer for Vietnam. He runs a 10-bed dispensary to which many casualties are ferried from the delta.

"He is also the surgeon who treated the wounded of Bien Hoa and the 18 men injured in the bomb blast of the airport restaurant on November 18.

"It's interesting," he said. "It sounds strange, but I like it here. It's active. The casualty rate is lower than you might expect, considering the number of people you have in the field. The ones I get — other than the bombing — are usually mortar fragments or gunshot wounds. But they usually live if they make it this far.

"I'll tell you. I expected the morale to be considerably lower than it is. It's amazing how high morale is here," he said."

FRANCIS SMITH DANE '96

Francis S. Dane, a retired executive of the Hood Rubber Company, died on December 21, 1964, at his home in Lexington, Mass. Born on May 3, 1874, in Kennebunk, he prepared for college at the local high school and had the distinction of being the only lefthanded varsity infielder in the history of baseball at Bowdoin, playing at second base, shortstop, and third base, as well as in the outfield. He was one of the student leaders in acquiring Whittier Field, where the Dane Flagpole was dedicated on the occasion of his 80th birthday in 1954, as the gift of his wife and other members of his family. He was a member of the Bowdoin Alumni Council from 1925 to 1928, was 1896 Class Secretary for some years, and was Class Agent in the Alumni Fund from 1929 until 1946. Under his leadership, 1896 became the second class in Bowdoin history to contribute 100% strong to the Fund.

Following his graduation from Bowdoin Mr. Dane worked in the office of the Secretary of State in Augusta for a short time and was associated with Tuttle-Smith Company, a wholesale dealer in shoes, in Boston for two years. From March of 1899 until he retired on December 31, 1945, he was associated with the Hood Rubber Company, including 32 years as Assistant Treasurer. A resident of Lexington since 1903, he had served as a member of the Town Finance Committee, was for 10 years Treasurer of the Lexington Chapter of the American Red Cross, and was active in Boy Scout work, serving as examiner on bird lore for the Scout Council. He was Curator and an honorary member of the Lexington Historical Society and Senior Warden of the Church of Our Redeemer (Episcopal) from 1907 to 1927.

Mr. Dane is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Edmands Dane, whom he married on February 14, 1903, in Portland; a daughter, Miss Marcia W. A. Dane of Lexington; two sons, Francis S. Dane, Jr. '31 of Pasadena, Calif., and Nathan Dane II '37 of Brunswick; and seven grandchildren. His fraternity was Psi Upsilon.

NILES LEE PERKINS '03

Niles L. Perkins, retired Supply Officer of the Veterans Administration Facility at Togus, died in Augusta on November 19, 1964. Born on October 25, 1881, in Windsor, he prepared for college at Cony High School in Augusta and following his graduation from Bowdoin did graduate work at Harvard University for a year and then studied at Harvard Law School from 1904 to 1906. After a year and a half spent in New York in the law office of Wendell P. McKown '98, he returned to Augusta and engaged in forestry in partnership with his Bowdoin classmate Blaine S. Viles. He served as a member of the Augusta City Council, as City Treasurer and Tax Collector for four years, and as a member of the Maine House of Representatives. In 1915 he was appointed Quartermaster at what was then the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Togus. In 1930 he became Supply Officer, a position which he held until his retirement in 1951, after 36 years of service. He was admitted to the Maine Bar in 1924.

A member of the South Parish Congregational Church in Augusta, Mr. Perkins is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marion Sterling Perkins, whom he married on August 19, 1916, in Gardiner; two sons, Dr. Niles L. Perkins, Jr. '42 of Portland and George W. Perkins '44 of Skowhegan; a daughter, Mrs. Esther Williams of Stockbridge, Mass.; a step-sister, Mrs. Verda Duplissa of St. Petersburg, Fla.; seven grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. He was a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

Clement F. Robinson, a member of the Board of Overseers since 1925 and a lawyer for nearly 60 years, died in Brunswick on December 13, 1964. Born in that town on March 27, 1882, he prepared for college at the local high school and following his graduation from Bowdoin summa cum laude in 1903 entered Harvard Law School, from which he received his LL.B. degree in 1906. After practicing law in Boston for a year, he served as Clerk for a special Maine Tax Commission and then, in 1909, set up a practice in Portland. In 1911, with his brother Arthur '08, he formed the Portland law firm which eventually became Robinson, Richardson, and Leddy, a branch of which he opened in Brunswick in 1950. During the period from 1918 to 1924 he served first as Assistant County Attorney of Cumberland County and then as County Attorney. In 1924 he was appointed Deputy Attorney General of Maine, serving for seven months. Deciding five years later to stand for election as Attorney General, he was successful in the contest and served from 1929 to 1932. In 1931-32 he was President of the National Association of Attorneys General. He also held many offices in the American Bar Association, in which he was a member of the Board of Governors, and in the Maine State Bar Association.

For many years Mr. Robinson was a voluntary legal adviser to the Brunswick Naval Air Station, and in 1958 the Navy honored him with a citation for "outstanding legal assistance given the armed services." He had been a Director of the First National Bank of Portland and the Brunswick Savings and Loan Association, Clerk of the Squirrel Island Village Corporation, a Director of the Brunswick Chamber of Commerce and the Brunswick Village Improvement Association, Moderator of the Town of Brunswick, and a Trustee of the Brunswick Public Library. He wrote the charter for the Brunswick and Topsham Sewer District, which he also served as counsel for many years. He was a Director of the American Judicature Society, a Trustee of the Maine Home for Boys, the New England Conservatory of Music, and the Maine Historical Society, and Vice President of the Pejepscot Historical Society.

Mr. Robinson was a Deacon of the First Parish Church in Brunswick for some years and also served as Moderator for Parish meetings. He was a Trustee of the Universalist Church of Maine from 1946 to 1949. He was a member of the National Amateur Press Association, the Brunswick Rotary Club, the Harvard Clubs of Boston and Maine, the Cumberland Club, the Town and College Club in Brunswick, the Fraternity Club of Portland, the English Speaking Union, and the Robinson Family Genealogy Association. The author of numerous historical articles and stories which appeared in newspapers and legal, professional, and other publications, he had also been President of The Fossils, a well known group of amateur writers.

Elected an Overseer of the College in 1925, Mr. Robinson was Vice President of the Board of Overseers from 1934 to 1943 and President from 1943 to 1949. In 1921-22 he was Lecturer in Law at Bowdoin. He had been Class Secretary for 1903 since 1928 and for many years, as Associate Editor of the ALUMNUS, wrote the familiar column "Looking Backward." In 1943 his alma mater conferred upon him an honorary master of arts degree.

The son of Professor Franklin C. Robinson of the Class of 1873, who taught at the College from 1874 until his death in 1910, Mr. Robinson was married in 1908 to Miss Myrta Booker of Brunswick, who died in September of 1962. He is survived by their daughter, Mrs. James M. McConnell of Gray, and six grandchildren. He was a member of Alpha Delta Phi and Phi Beta Kappa.

HENRY QUINBY HAWES '10

Henry Q. Hawes, a retired Vice President of the advertising agency of McCann-Erickson, Inc., died at his home in Kenwood, Calif., on December 19, 1964. Born on October 4, 1888, in Westbrook, he prepared for college at the local high school and after teaching school in North Windham for a year entered Bowdoin, from which he was graduated summa cum laude in 1910. He received a master of arts degree from Columbia University in 1911 and became the first Superintendent of the experimental Mechanics Institute in Rumford. Two years later, in 1913, he began his long association with McCann-Erickson in New York City. He moved to San Francisco in 1914 and became a Vice President of the company in 1921, following service in France in World War I as a first lieutenant in the Field Artillery. For many years he was in charge of McCann-Erickson's West Coast operation. Prior to his retirement in January of 1959, he was, in effect, one of three owners of McCann-Erickson, with the late Harrison K. McCann '02 and the late Harrison Atwood '09.

Henry Q. Hawes '10

Following his retirement, Mr. Hawes devoted his time to an interest of some 20 years — the improvement of beef cattle — and operated Kinnybrook Farm, a 1,000-acre cattle ranch 50 miles north of San Francisco, where he raised prize-winning registered Herefords and led an effort to bring down the cost of beef by breeding back to the larger size of the original Herefords. The American Hereford Association honored him in 1964 for his contributions to Hereford breeding.

Mr. Hawes had served as a Director of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce and as Chairman of the Community Chest's Executive Committee. He was a Director of the American Trust Company, the Red Salmon Canning Company, and the Schlage Lock Company. He was also Chairman of the Budget Committee for the War Chest of San Francisco in 1945 and Chairman of the Fund Raising Committee for the Golden Gate International Exposition in 1939-40. A Trustee of Mills College from 1939 to 1947, he was a member of the Pacific Union Club, the Bohemian Club, and the Stock Exchange Club.

Last spring Mr. Hawes and his wife, the former Marie Corinne White, whom he married on June 8, 1925, in San Francisco, gave Bowdoin more than $2.1 million in the form of real estate at Kinnybrook. President Coles, who presided at services for Mr. Hawes on December 22, told alumni at the Commencement Dinner on June 13, "This magnificent contribution assures the completion of the $10 million Capital Campaign. . . . I know that you all share with me in expressing deep appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Hawes for the wonderful encouragement and support they have given Bowdoin's program."

LELAND GREEN MEANS '12

Leland G. Means, Manager of the investment firm of A. C. Allyn and Company in Portland for many years, died in that city on November 10, 1964. Born on March 31, 1891, in Orleans, Neb., he prepared for college at Portland High School and following his graduation from Bowdoin went into the investment business with the firm of Maynard S. Zimmerman of Westport, Conn.; and two brothers, John H. Zimmerman, Jr. of St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, and William A. Zimmerman of Norfolk, Va. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

PETER JOSEPH KING '50

Peter J. King died on October 15, 1964, as the result of an automobile accident in Northbrook, Ill., where he lived. Born on July 15, 1928, in Lowell, Mass., he prepared for college at Keith Academy in Lowell and following his graduation from Bowdoin was for some years a housewares buyer with Abraham and Strauss in Brooklyn, N.Y. In 1958 he became New England Sales Manager for Bissell, Inc., with which he was promoted successively to Director of New Products and National Account Manager, Director of Marketing, and Vice President of Marketing, with headquarters in Grand Rapids, Mich.

In recent years Mr. King had been Vice President of Marketing with Amana Refrigeration Company in Amana, Iowa, Marketing Director of the Hammond Organ Company's Special Products Division, and Assistant Manager, Sales Manager, and Vice President of the Everett Organ Company, a division of Hammond Organ. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Phyllis Crotty King; two sons, Paul and Matthew King; two daughters, Alberta and Nancy King; his father and stepmother, Dr. and Mrs. Leo F. King '22 of Lowell, Mass.; and two brothers, Leo F. King, Jr. '51 and Dr. Denis W. King '55, both of Lowell. His fraternity was Sigma Nu.

GEORGE DONHAM BEARCE Faculty

George D. Bearce, Associate Professor of History at Bowdoin, died on January 18, 1965. Born on November 5, 1922, in New York City, he prepared for college at Bucksport High School and was graduated from the University of Maine in 1943. He was a Captain in the United States Army Ordnance Corps from 1943 to 1946, with overseas service in England, France, Belgium, and Germany. He attended Harvard Law School in 1946-47 and taught English at the College of William and Mary for a year before completing work for master of arts (1949) and doctor of philosophy (1952) degrees at the University of Wisconsin. He was a teaching assistant in history at Wisconsin, taught at New Mexico Highlands University in the summer of 1952, and was an instructor at Kalamazoo College in Michigan for two years before joining the Bowdoin Faculty in 1954.

Professor Bearce was a Past Chairman of the Northern New England Historians. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the American Historical Association, the American Political Science Association, the Conference on British History, the Maine Social Scientists, and the American Association of University Professors. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jeana Dale Bearce, an artist whose works have been exhibited internationally, whom he married on June 25, 1955; a daughter, Barbara E. Bearce; his father, George D. Bearce of Bucksport; and two sisters, Mrs. Oliver Harrison of Bremerhaven, Germany, and Mrs. Arthur Haskell of Palos Park, Ill.

A Progress Report on Bowdoin Admissions

Mid-Atlantic Admissions Seminar

On Wednesday and Thursday, October 28 and 29, Bowdoin's Admissions Officers conducted another admissions seminar, which paralleled those held in recent years on the campus and in Chicago. Interested alumni from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland were invited to attend the sessions at the Treadway Inn in St. Davids, a suburb of Philadelphia.

At the opening dinner meeting on Wednesday night, Director of Admissions Hubert Shaw '36 outlined Bowdoin's admissions procedures and policies, including the duties of the Faculty Committee on Preparatory Schools and Admissions. He also summarized the current admissions picture and explained the use of the College Catalogue, admissions and scholarship forms, and pamphlets and brochures on such subjects as financial aid, athletics, and the Senior Center. This meeting concluded with a period of questions and answers.

The next morning Assistant Director of Admissions Walter Moulton '58 led a discussion concerning financial aid. He explained the College Scholarship Service financial aid application form, as well as Bowdoin's system of computing need and award in each case where financial aid is granted. He also described the program of scholarships, loans, and bursary jobs and the exchange of information with other colleges with which Bowdoin has scholarship applicants in common.

Associate Director of Admissions Robert Mellow discussed school and college relations, including the importance, place, and work of alumni aides in admissions and local prospective students committees. He spoke of the ways in which alumni can help and how they can follow up individual cases for the Admissions Office.

After luncheon Mr. Shaw conducted a workshop in admissions cases. Sixteen actual admissions files were presented in disguised form to conceal the identities of those involved, and then each alumni participant was asked to pick five men to be admitted — and eleven to be rejected — and to tell on what basis he had made his selections. The seminar concluded with a discussion of the kinds of information that the Admissions Office receives and the action such information implies for each admissions case.

Local Subfreshman Activities

During the fall and winter a number of Bowdoin Alumni Club prospective students committees, as well as individual alumni, sponsored more than twenty subfreshman meetings, designed to inform local candidates, their parents, and their school advisers about admissions opportunities at Bowdoin. Meetings were held in a number of areas, including Albany, Greater Boston (Beverly, Dedham, West Acton, Weston, and Winchester), Brunswick, Cleveland, Hartford, Minneapolis, Northern New Jersey (Summit and Tenafly), Portland, Providence, Rochester, St. Louis, Springfield, Thomaston, and Washington, D. C. Others are scheduled later in the spring, and some Clubs have also invited subfreshmen and their parents to regular Alumni Club meetings.

Mid-March Preview of the Class of 1969

As of March 1, the Admissions Office had received 1,410 applications for admission to the next freshman class, which will number about 250 students. This figure represents an increase of some 28 percent over last year's applications. Approximately 75 candidates have already been promised admission through the regular program of early decisions, and more will receive word before the final letters of acceptance (and rejection) are sent out in mid-April.

This year about 50% of the admissions applicants requested financial aid. A portion of them will be granted approximately $125,000 in scholarships, loans, and campus jobs.

During three weekends in February more than 400 of the 900 admissions prospects who were invited visited the campus. Once again the undergraduates and the fraternities played an important role in entertaining these visitors and showing them something of life at Bowdoin. The College is grateful to the alumni who personally drove subfreshmen to the campus or who arranged for their transportation.

Bowdoin's Herbie Brown

On February 25 Professor Herbert Ross Brown H'63 received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree at a Centennial Founders Day convocation at the University of Maine. The text of the citation read upon that occasion by the President of the University, Lloyd H. Elliott, is given here:

HERBERT ROSS BROWN

Born in Allentown, Pennsylvania, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Lafayette College with a Master's Degree from Harvard University and a Doctor's Degree from Columbia University, he moved to Maine in 1925 as a member of the faculty of Bowdoin College; a loyal teacher at this college for 40 years, his duties have included outstanding service as head of the Department of English; devoted to the cause of excellence in American literature, he has gained a position of eminence as an historian, lecturer, and author; among his noted literary works are The Sentimental Novel in America, and, more recently, the widely acclaimed biography of the late President Kenneth C. M. Sills of Bowdoin, entitled Sills of Bowdoin; he has held the post of Managing Editor of the authoritative New England Quarterly since 1944; for these endeavors he has been the recipient of many honors, including major literary awards from Duke University and the New England Society of New York, honorary Doctor's Degrees from Lafayette College, Bucknell University, and Bowdoin College, and selection as a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; we honor him, too, as a man who has diligently contributed to Maine's progress, including service as Chairman of the State Board of Education, and has actively participated in the political and civic life of the State.

You pointed out one of the pitfalls of higher education when you wrote: "The intellectual snob, the man who thinks that because of his more formal education he will become ipso facto a superior being, will not be long tolerated, even should he succeed in escaping from college."

In recognition of your distinguished record as a teacher, your scholarly literary achievements, and your devotion to the highest ideals of your college and your State, the Trustees take pleasure in conferring upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

In addition to serving as Educational Director for Bowdoin's first Alumni College (see pages 4 and 5 of this issue), Professor Brown is representing the College on a committee comprised of faculty members at Bowdoin, Amherst, Wesleyan, Williams, and Dartmouth (the Pentagonal group) to study the possibility of joint projects among the five institutions for providing improved opportunities for professional study for secondary school teachers, particularly those of disadvantaged youth.

Navy Service in the Spanish-American War

by Hudson Sinkinson '02

These reminiscences of the Spanish-American War are taken from two letters which Hudson Sinkinson '02 of Kennebunk wrote in June of 1963 to his niece, Mrs. Sterry R. Waterman of St. Johnsbury, Vt. Mrs. Waterman was at the time corresponding about the Civil War with John J. Pullen H'58 of Philadelphia, the author of THE TWENTIETH MAINE. At his suggestion Mrs. Waterman loaned the letters to the Editor of the ALUMNUS, who is happy to find a spot for the reminiscences in this issue.

MY ENLISTMENT IN THE NAVY FOR THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR was about as casual an action as possible. Some of us, instead of going to class — three seniors and one junior — just walked to the docks, hired a boat, and visited the Montauk. We learned that enlistments for the Portland Naval Reserve were being accepted at the Armory in Portland, and we signed up, went home and broke the news to the family, and went on board that afternoon.

I did not request leave for time off to take final exams for Bowdoin — but we three seniors did get leave to receive our graduation certificates at the City Hall in Portland from the Mayor in our uniforms — and I was made toastmaster at the class banquet. Another bonus for my "patriotic" action was that when we were discharged and I went to Brunswick to see President Hyde, he kindly waived the formality of final entrance exams. Because I might easily have scored a condition in math, that was another welcome bonus.

Aside from two eleven-inch cannon, about all the arms we had for some weeks were the officers' dress swords and their revolvers. But we had a Regular Navy officer for Captain, and he ran what was known as a "tight ship." His junior officers were as much sailors as the crew — a newspaper man, a recent Harvard graduate, and a doctor. Maybe the paymaster was Regular Navy.

All the petty officers were landlubbers from master-at-arms down. We did not get any shore leave for two or three weeks. By that time we were used to swabbing down the decks every morning, keeping clean-shaven and familiar with our duties, sleeping in hammocks, and routine duties.

I remember one time when we drew some of that infamous "embalmed beef," which literally stank up the ship while it was being cooked. At that time I was writing news from the Montauk for a Portland paper, the Courier, which is no longer in existence, and reported that a shipmate had remarked that we'd soon have to tie a shingle to our backs to keep our heads to the wind if embalmed beef remained our principal diet — or words to that effect. We greeted this odorous ration by cutting large chunks off and feeding them to the fishes. Hard-tack became our principal ration.

When our captain read my report, I was immediately summoned to his quarters. He read the rules of war to me and said I'd be court-martialed if I did not cease and desist. But my squawk worked. After that, the quartermaster drew our rations in money and bought supplies locally.

Another incident was what we called "The Battle of Trundy's Reef." We got up steam one day and speeded, at about four knots an hour, out of Portland Harbor. We set adrift a striped target close to Trundy's Reef and were ordered to battle quarters for target practice. I was a gunner's mate and in charge of the shell locker. We sent two bags of powder and a couple of eleven-inch shells to the turret. The ship stopped, and we waited for the cannon to boom. But presently the ship got under weigh, and they trundled the powder and shells back to be stored away. The reason? The turret could not be turned to point the cannon. So the "protector" of Portland steamed back to her anchorage. The captain again called me to his quarters and ordered no report on that incident.

THE SANITARY ARRANGEMENTS ON THE MONTAUK were primitive for the crew, an overhang near the stern, shielded by canvas. For the officers there was a toilet well below the waterline which had to be clamped and sealed tight, then pumped out by a member of the crew who was titled "Captain of the Head." As I recall, the lad who drew that title was a few years later a famous halfback at Dartmouth. But any one of us enlisted men might have been tapped for that "honor." He graduated from Westbrook Seminary before entering Dartmouth.

The history of unpreparedness is typical of every war the United States has ever fought, as far as I know. I remember reading markings on the boxes of canned and smoked meat, such labels as "Iowa 1893," showing a vintage of five years earlier — no knowing how long it had been in storage before being put aboard the Iowa, or maybe the Illinois — the famous White Fleet of new battleships that we had all been aboard previously, when they made their annual cruise up the coast and anchored in Portland Harbor for about a week.

If we had not had the "White Fleet," it is doubtful that we would ever have gone to war with Spain. They were believed to be the most powerful fighting ships in any navy — completely outclassing anything Spain could offer — with the Spanish ships thousands of miles away from their home bases.

That war was a romp for us, and we grabbed Cuba and the Philippines as security for war damages — or something — and became an overseas power.

Our Navy service was a picnic, compared to what happened to the National Guard lads. Their training camp was a swamp down south, and pneumonia, or some such thing, knocked them out by the score — including the "embalmed beef." Several of my acquaintances died — and I'm not sure any of them finally got to Cuba.

We were much better off in the Navy. The Army lost more men in the training camps than were killed fighting Spaniards. I don't know how many Navy men were killed in the sinking of the Spanish cruisers, if any, which were sunk or run ashore by our battleships when they tried to run home to Spain. In Cuba we lost more soldiers to disease than to gunfire — before we finally let the Spaniards surrender.

We got pretty well fed up with lying at anchor in the inner harbor, and we signed a petition to be sent south to help "free" Cuba or words to that effect. Quite naturally, nothing came of that.

As I remember, the Philippines were surrendered after a little token resistance.

We have never had a direct and positive answer to the question "Did the Spanish attack and blow up the Maine, or did an internal explosion sink the Maine?" We had complete freedom to determine what happened, but, so far as I know, no definite report on the evidence uncovered was ever publicly announced. Perhaps the findings were sealed, or maybe the evidence was inconclusive.

The Montauk bore battle scars from numerous hits during the attack on Charleston forts during the Civil War. When it was full loaded, the deck at the stern was less than two feet above the water, and I doubt that the deck was six feet at the bow. Under our own power, top speed was about four knots an hour. In rough weather she must have been a wet ship, and a ready-made coffin in a storm.

THE ONLY SEA SERVICE WE SAW IN '98 was a voyage in tow of a former New York to Portland passenger steamer, armed as a light cruiser. We were too heavy for her, even with the constant help of our engine. So every few hours we had to take in the heavy towline — a wonderful exercise for our crew — and plod along under our own power at about four knots an hour until our towboat's engine cooled off. Fortunately, the sea was calm, although the deck was wet most of the time. Eventually we got safely to Tompkinsville, Staten Island, New York, on our way to putting the Montauk out of commission.

At Tompkinsville there were one or two other old monitors with reserve crews for whom the commanding officer of the yard forbade shore leave for New York because the ships and crews were not what he termed clean ships. Spit and polish paid off for the Montauk crew — we saw the town.

Our return to Maine, after decommissioning, was made on the New York boat. The band met us in Portland, the Mayor welcomed us home, and we were discharged from the Navy.

This concludes the history of my "war service" from May to October of 1898.

*The ten volumes — six for required reading to be done in advance of the seminars, and four items for collateral reading — will be shipped to each registrant.

THE PROGRAM

The format of the Alumni College will include two seminars or discussion groups each morning from 9:00 to 10:30 and — after a coffee break — from 11:00 to 12:30 o'clock. The afternoons will be free for reading, informal discussion, and recreation. Reference volumes and a generous assortment of background reading will be available for participants in the lounge on the sixteenth floor of the Senior Center. It is not expected that lively discussion will be restricted to the seminars. Members of the Bowdoin faculty in residence may, from time to time, be invited to join the alumni participants at meals and for the social hours, where there will be additional opportunities for the exchange and evaluation of ideas.

Calendar

Sunday, 15 August

Rooms in the Senior Center will be ready for occupancy at 12:00 o'clock noon.

5:45 p.m.

— Social hour in the Balcony Lounge

6:45 p.m.

— Opening dinner of the Alumni College

President Coles will welcome the participants, and Professor Brown will speak informally on the "ground rules" and hopes of Bowdoin's venture in continuing education.

Monday, 16 August through Saturday, 21 August

Beginning on Monday, the daily program (with exceptions as noted below) will be as follows:

7:15 a.m. to 8:45 a.m.

— Breakfast

9:00 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

— First discussion group in the Seminar Room (16th floor)

10:30 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.

— Coffee Break

11:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

— Second discussion group

1:00 p.m.

— Lunch

— Afternoon free for reading and recreation

5:45 p.m.

— Social hour (Balcony Lounge)

— Dinner

Members of the Alumni College will take their meals in the small dining room adjacent to the main dining room of the Senior Center. With the exception of breakfasts, which will be in cafeteria style, meals will be served by waiters or waitresses.

Special Events

Tuesday, 17 August: Participants will be provided with tickets for reserved seats for the evening performance of the Brunswick Summer Playhouse (Pickard Theater).

Wednesday, 18 August, and Friday, 20 August: Special lectures in the Main Lounge of the Senior Center (Speakers and topics to be announced).

Thursday, 19 August: Chamber Music by the Aeolian Players in the Main Lounge of the Senior Center.

Saturday, 21 August at 2:00 p.m. — Lobster Bake (Alumni House). Participants will have the option of taking their meals and occupying their rooms in the Senior Center through Sunday, 22 August.

Sports

Throughout the week, the college tennis courts on Pickard Field, the squash courts in the new gymnasium, and the Curtis Swimming Pool will be available for the participants. Guest cards to the Brunswick Golf Club will be given to those wishing to play on the golf course of the Club.

Registration Fee

An advanced registration fee of $50.00 should be paid before 30 April, 1965. This fee will be credited to the inclusive charge of $395.00. Wives, of course, are invited to join their husbands in the Alumni College program at no additional fee.

As soon as the roster of participants has been completed, those enrolled in the program will receive a dossier contain-

Response to the Alumni College Idea

An enthusiastic response thus far has enabled the Committee to provide for one seminar section. Additional discussion groups may be arranged if the number of applicants justifies an extension of the program. The deadline is 30 April, 1965.

Work in Progress

The new Gymnasium (to the left) will be dedicated on June 11 as part of Commencement Weekend.

The renovation of Winthrop Hall has been completed (see bottom left). Alumni should note the pleasing change in the number of window panes.

The addition to the Moulton Union shows good progress.

Alumni Council Meeting and Career Conference

The Alumni Council held its annual midwinter meeting at the College from February 25 through February 27. Nearly 70 Council Members, wives, and other guests participated in a series of committee and business meetings and an informative Saturday morning session with President Coles.

On Sunday and Monday, February 28 and March 1, the Council sponsored its fourth annual campus Career Conference, with more than 50 alumni and faculty experts serving as moderators and panelists in discussions of twelve different professions and occupations. Those who took part are listed below, moderators first and panelists afterwards:

The weekend reached a climax with two Monday evening events: the Alumni Council's annual Dinner for the Senior Class and a Council-sponsored lecture. Overseer Charles T. Ireland, Jr. '42 was the principal speaker at the Dinner, held at the Senior Center, and Dr. Leonard W. Cronkhite, Jr. '41 delivered a lecture on "The Psychology of Space Travel" in the Pickard Theater. Both men were introduced by the President of the Alumni Council, Dr. John E. Cartland, Jr. '39.

Members of the Law Panel — Dana '35, Schretter '59, Morse '42, Vafiades '42, and Bevins '40.

At the Senior Dinner on March 1.

Dr. Alfred O. Gross - Still Going Strong

Professor Emeritus Alfred O. Gross H'52, known the world over for his ornithological studies and reports, retired from teaching twelve years ago. That has been his only real "retirement," however, for he continues to be as active as ever. Since 1952 he has written nearly 80 reports and articles, and he and Mrs. Gross have made two trips around the world, as well as others to Florida, Africa, Spain, France, Italy, Egypt, and Lebanon. In a lifetime of scientific research the Grosses have been to all fifty states, every Canadian province, Cuba, Haiti, Mexico, Costa Rica, Panama, Ecuador, and Colombia, some twenty European countries, Turkey and other Middle East nations, and Pakistan, Malaya, India, and Japan in Asia.

In 1950 and again in 1954, Dr. Gross served as an official United States delegate to International Ornithological Congresses in Sweden and Switzerland, respectively, and he has maintained his interest and activities in more than a dozen ornithological and wildlife organizations and programs. In forty-one years as Instructor, Assistant Professor, and Josiah Little Professor of Natural Science at Bowdoin, he wrote more than 200 articles and books on birds and lectured to hundreds of audiences. The pace he sets is as natural as flying is to an eagle, and he probably couldn't stop even if he wanted to.

Among his undertakings in the years before retirement were an all-out battle — a losing one — to save the New England Heath Hen from extinction in 1923-27, and a more successful fight for the State of Wisconsin Research Bureau to save the Prairie Chicken in 1929-30. From these two programs came a number of articles and reports which won him nationwide recognition.

Busy though Dr. Gross is, he has always had time for additional work. In 1935, just after his return from an Arctic expedition with Admiral Donald B. MacMillan '98, Bowdoin received an island in the Bay of Fundy as a gift from John S. Rockefeller. It wasn't long before Dr. Gross was directing the Kent Island Scientific Station, a position which he held in addition to his regular duties for nearly twenty years.

Largely through his efforts, the Station is equipped with scientific research instruments and a shortwave radio station for contact with the mainland. Bowdoin encourages its own students and other scholars and scientists to make use of the facilities, which are ideal for ornithological and marine research. Financial assistance is available to them through the Alfred O. Gross Fund, established by Dr. Gross and members of his family.

Professor Gross has a collection of more than 15,000 photographs and 10,000 feet of motion pictures — he develops most of his own films — showing birds in every land the Grosses have visited. In addition, he has accumulated one of the finest ornithological libraries in existence, consisting of more than 5,000 books and other publications about birds. In recent years he has turned over the bulk of it to the College as the Gross Library of Ornithology, housed in the Searles Science Building.

Dr. Gross is still going strong. In the past year, as usual, he had a number of articles on birds published, including a story on the Cattle Egret in the National Audubon Society Magazine and two scholarly reports of note. "Nesting of the Black-Tailed Flycatcher on Barro Colorado Island" appeared in The Wilson Bulletin, and "Notes on the Wedge-Tailed Shearwater at Heron Island, Great Barrier Reef, Australia" was issued by the Pacific Science Board of the National Academy of Sciences. His co-authors on the latter report were Professors James M. Moulton and Charles E. Huntington, both members of the Bowdoin Biology Department.

Already published or scheduled for publication this year are ten more articles and reports, including "A Visit to the Island of Mauritius, the Home of the Extinct Dodo," for the Audubon Magazine; "The Kiwi of New Zealand," for Florida Naturalist; and a biography of Admiral MacMillan for the Encyclopedia Arctica.

Dr. Gross is a native of Atwood, Ill. A graduate of the University of Illinois Academy in 1903, he received his A.B. degree from the University of Illinois in 1908 and his Ph.D. degree from Harvard in 1912. He and his wife celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in July, 1963. They continue to live at 11 Boody Street in Brunswick.

Professor Gross has received many honors, including an honorary Doctor of Science degree from Bowdoin in 1952 and election to the Presidency of the New England Bird Banding Association, the Massachusetts Audubon Society, and the Maine Audubon Society. He is also a Fellow and a Patron of the American Ornithologists' Union — the highest honor awarded by the most important ornithological organization in the United States.

To the Ladies - from the Society of Bowdoin Women

Bowdoin has always entertained Ladies at Commencement time. In September of 1806 a Boston newspaper, the Repertory, reported on the first Commencement at the College:

Notwithstanding the extreme disagreeableness of the weather, and the state of the roads in consequence, a numerous and respectable assembly honoured the performance with their attendance, — among whom were many strangers of distinction, and Ladies from this town and vicinity. At balls, given on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, no less than 120 Ladies were present. Several brilliant entertainments were given; and many patriotick toasts drank.

In the early 1920's the Society of Bowdoin Women was founded for the stated purpose of providing "an organization in which women with a common bond of Bowdoin loyalty may, by becoming better acquainted with the College and with each other, work together to serve the College in every possible way."

Many of you are already familiar with the history of the Society. We are grateful to the ALUMNUS for making space available in its March issue so that the Society can explain its program to all of you.

The Society of Bowdoin Women serves the College in four general areas. We have created, and each year augment, the Society of Bowdoin Women Foundation, an unrestricted endowment fund administered by the College for its general purposes.

We make gifts to the College for specific needs — for example, silver, glass, and china for the President's House and the Dean's House; a television set for the Infirmary.

Several years ago the Society established the Edith Lansing Koon Sills Lecture Fund in honor of Mrs. Kenneth C. M. Sills H'52, one of the founders of the Society and its only honorary member. The income of this fund provides a biennial lecture by a distinguished woman. The first speaker was President Margaret Clapp of Wellesley College (Mrs. Sills' alma mater); last year Dr. Hannah Arendt addressed an enthusiastic audience.

However, our principal area of service, and our principal pleasure as well, is offering hospitality to all Ladies visiting the Bowdoin campus at Commencement. When you arrive, we hope you will visit our Headquarters at the Gibson Hall of Music, where you are invited to register and where hostesses from our membership will be on hand to answer questions, to give directions, and in general to make all of you welcome.

On Friday, and again on Saturday, while the men are attending the Alumni and Commencement luncheons, the Society sponsors luncheons for women at the Gymnasium. The luncheons are open to all women visiting Bowdoin, whether or not they are members of the Society of Bowdoin Women. At the Saturday luncheon we are happy to invite the mothers and wives of the members of the graduating class to be our honored guests.

We urge all women to visit our Headquarters, to attend the Commencement luncheons, and to work with us in our programs to serve the College. Our work is supported by membership dues (one dollar), by contributions (unlimited), and by the enthusiasm and imagination of our members. If you would like to receive our mid-May letter, simply write to our Secretary, Mrs. Robert S. Stuart '44, 15 Meadowbrook Road, Brunswick 04011. This letter will remind you of our Commencement plans and also will enclose applications for membership and for luncheon tickets. Or you can always purchase tickets at our Headquarters or at the Gymnasium door.

The Society of Bowdoin Women extends to all of you who are interested in Bowdoin a most cordial invitation to "join the Ladies" at the College for Commencement this June. We look forward to welcoming you in person.

Longfellow Statue in Menton

IN AUGUST OF 1963 Artine Artinian '31, who at that time was Professor of French at Bard College, wrote to the Editor of the ALUMNUS as follows: "At Menton, where we spent two months of our sabbatical in France, I discovered a statue of Longfellow at a prominent public square, but I could find no official who could tell me when or why it had been erected. The Mayor himself became sufficiently interested to ask me to bring a photograph of the statue to the President of Bowdoin College, with the hope that the mystery could be solved on this side of the Atlantic!"

After a good deal of investigation and some translating help from Professor Eaton Leith, President Coles sent a letter to the Mayor of Menton, Francis Palmero, which said, in part — and here is an opportunity for you or some member of your family to see how rusty your high school or college French really is! — "Pourquoi ou comment ce buste de Longfellow se trouve-t-il à Menton nous reste encore un mystère. Notre poète ne fait mention d'aucune visite à Menton, pendant ses trois voyages en Europe, ni dans ses souvenirs Outre Mer ni dans sa correspondance. Notre Professeur de Littérature Américaine a fait des recherches à cet égard qui ont été jusqu'ici sans résultat.

"Le Conservateur de notre Musée de Beaux-Arts m'informe que le sculpteur de votre buste, James Henry Haseltine (1833-1907), était un artiste américain assez bien comme qui a fait ses études en France et en Italie et a passé la plupart de sa vie à Rome. Mais il ne trouve aucune relation entre Haseltine et Longfellow.

"Si un jour nous trouvons la clef de cette énigme je serai content de vous le faire savoir."

A few weeks later Mayor Palmero wrote to President Coles as follows: "Des renseignements que j'ai pu recueillir il résulte que ce monument a été élevé en septembre 1901 à la suite d'une délibération du Conseil municipal du 17 Mai 1901, dont je vous adresse ci-dessous les termes essentiels:

"M. le Maire expose au Conseil qu'une personne désirant garder l'anonymat offre gratuitement à la Ville un buste en marbre du poète américain Henri Longfellow, oeuvre d'un sculpteur américain de grand talent, à la condition que le buste, placé sur un socle au milieu d'un petit bassin alimenté d'eau restera à demeure fixe dans un endroit public.

"Le Conseil dit qu'il y a lieu d'accepter avec reconnaissance l'offre faite et décide que le buste offert sera placé dans le petit square formant angle à l'intersection des rues Pieta and de la République et charge M. le Maire d'exprimer tous ses remerciements au donateur."

"A noter que le sculpteur américain, auteur du buste, est M. J. H. Haseltine.

"Veuillez croire, Monsieur le Président, à l'assurance de mes sentiments les plus distingués."

The statue is signed by "J. H. Haseltine, Rome, 1869." The sculptor, James Henry Haseltine, was one of the expatriate American artists who took up residence in Rome. It is known that he carved a likeness of Longfellow in 1869 at a time when the poet and his family made the last of three visits to Europe and were in Rome.

WHETHER OR NOT the Roman Haseltine bust of 1869 is the larger-than-life-size one erected in Menton and if so how it got there from Rome, some 600 miles away, remain a mystery. Research in Bowdoin's extensive Longfellow archives by Professor Herbert R. Brown H'63 and an authority on the life and work of Longfellow, was fruitless. Bowdoin also called on some of the country's leading art historians and art reference libraries in an effort to trace the making and travels of the Haseltine bust, but each inquiry led only to a blind alley.

Professor Artinian, who discovered the Longfellow bust in Menton, joined the French Department at Bard College in 1935 and retired last June. He has an international reputation for his private collection of French literature of the 19th and 20th centuries and is a noted authority on Guy de Maupassant. In 1960 he discovered a long-lost handwritten manuscript of an essay by Marcel Proust which had disappeared years before. Scholars knew of its existence only through references to it in Proust's letters.

Professor Artinian and his wife are spending this year traveling, including five months in Mexico, where he "discovered" a Calle Almirante Peary in Acapulco. The street crosses Calle Almirante Horatio Nelson.

On The Campus

Undergraduate Scholarship

Seven students made the straight "A" list for their work during the first semester. Included are four sons of alumni — Tom Allen '67 (son of Charles Allen '34); Charles Barbour '66 (son of Charles Barbour '33); William Pennell '65 (son of Robert Pennell '09); and Joe Pierce '65 (son of Jotham Pierce '39). The other three are Fred Haynes '67, Don Krogstad '65, and Brian Murphy '65. Interestingly enough, Allen, Pennell, and Pierce all come from Portland.

Clayton Lewis '65 of Birmingham, Mich., has been awarded a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship for next year, and two other seniors, Gary Brator of Fairhaven, Mass., and William Fahrenbach of Glenview, Ill., won Honorable Mention. Of the more than 11,000 college seniors in this country and Canada who were nominated by faculty members, 1,395 were chosen and 1,242 more received Honorable Mention.

The Fellowships are awarded to top-ranking college seniors and graduates who are seriously considering careers in college teaching. Lewis is one of ten seniors taking part in the Undergraduate Research Fellowship Program at Bowdoin. He has also participated in an Independent Study Program in Mathematics under a grant from the National Science Foundation and in the Bowdoin Undergraduate Teachers, a program in which students help Brunswick teachers and gain experience which is helpful in considering teaching as a career.

Two hundred and twenty-seven undergraduates — well over one-fourth of the total enrollment — are on the Dean's List this semester. Included are 88 seniors, 55 juniors, 29 sophomores, 54 freshmen, and one Bowdoin Plan student.

Seventy-five of the men are from Massachusetts, 45 from Maine, 30 from New York, 16 from Connecticut, and 13 from New Jersey.

The Student Council Cup, awarded to the fraternity attaining the highest academic average each semester, is held currently by Theta Delta Chi, whose 72 members finished ahead of Alpha Rho Upsilon, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Nu, Phi Delta Psi, and the Independents, in that order.

The Peucinian Cup, which goes to the fraternity whose freshman members compile the highest average, is held by Phi Delta Psi, which was followed, in order, by the Independents, Chi Psi, Alpha Rho Upsilon, Sigma Nu, and Delta Sigma.

Milton (Mass.) High School has won the Abraxas Award, which goes each year to the preparatory school whose representatives (a minimum of three men) maintain the highest academic standing during their first semester at Bowdoin. Framingham (Mass.) North High School placed second, with Morse High of Bath and Swampscott (Mass.) High tied for third and Deering High of Portland fifth.

Eaton Leith Retires as Department Chairman

On March 8 Professor Eaton Leith announced his retirement as Chairman of the Department of Romance Languages, a position he had held since 1956. He continues to be Professor of Romance Languages. A member of the Faculty since 1936, he has taught a variety of courses in Spanish, French, and Italian and since 1946 has been Books Editor of the ALUMNUS. In January he was elected President of the Brunswick Area United Fund.

Eaton Leith

In 1959 an anonymous donor established the Eaton Leith Cup, awarded to that member of Delta Sigma Fraternity who "by his scholarship, character, and humanity best exemplifies those principles which Eaton Leith has sought to instill in Delta Sigma and those principles upon which Bowdoin College is established."

In 1962 another anonymous donor established the Eaton Leith Prize, awarded each year to a member of the junior class who has achieved outstanding results in the study of French literature at the College.

Sills Library at Deke House

On February 26 Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity dedicated the Kenneth C. M. Sills Library at its chapter house, honoring Bowdoin's eighth President. Mrs. Sills, who now lives in Portland, was the guest of honor, and the speakers included Professor Noel C. Little '17, Dr. Charles M. Barbour '33, and Professor Herbert R. Brown H'63.

Bowdoin and Rhode Island Polytech

Richard Bye '42, Vice President of R. R. Bowker Company in New York, which puts out Publishers' Weekly and Library Journal, wrote recently to his Alumni Fund Class Agent, John Williams, "My wife, who is from Oklahoma, never has had the reverent feelings about Bowdoin that some of us easterners do. She was confirmed in her doubts of its renown when she tried to buy some Ivy college buttons for my blazer at Altmans. (They were running a Christmas special.) The salesman, who was dressed like Princeton, asked her to spell Bowdoin, looked at her opaquely for a minute, called his boss for a conference, and then came back to say that he would try to order the buttons. His boss had pointed out to him that '... after all, we managed to get some from Rhode Island Polytech once!'"

Unusual Snow Shoveling

Twelve students had an unusual part-time job this past winter — they were a team that was responsible for the safety of the fuel supply for the Brunswick Naval Air Station, clearing snow and ice from the huge floating lids on fuel tanks at the Navy Fuel Depot in Harpswell. Weight from the ice would be enough to sink the lids if it were allowed to collect. Most of the tanks are more than 100 feet in diameter, and for an average snowfall it takes ten men over an hour to clear the snow from a single lid. The students were paid for the hours they worked. One of the leaders was President William DeWitt Hyde's great-grandson, William D. Hyde Jr. '65 of Portland.

Spring Tour for Debaters

Professor Albert R. Thayer '22 accompanied four undergraduate debaters on a four-day trip through Maryland, Virginia, and Pennsylvania during part of their spring vacation, as they gave a series of exhibition debates before more than 5,000 students and their teachers at five high schools. They based their demonstrations on the national collegiate debating topic for this year: "Resolved, that the Federal Government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed."

The students who went on the tour are

Peter Aranson '65 of Portland, Brian Hawkins '67 of Portland, John LaChance '68 of Framingham, Mass., and Gary Roberts '68 of Levittown, Pa.

The itinerary was as follows: Richard Montgomery High School, Rockville, Md., morning of March 29; Silver Spring (Md.) High School, 2 p.m. the same day; Wakefield High School, Arlington, Va., March 30, 10 a.m.; Walter Johnson High School, Bethesda, Md., March 31, 9:15 a.m.; and Woodrow Wilson High School, Levittown, Pa., the afternoon of April 1.

$139,750 in NSF Grants

The National Science Foundation has granted the College $139,750 in support of three 1965 Summer Institutes for secondary school teachers. They will be in Chemistry, Mathematics, and Marine Biology, making this the eighth consecutive year in which Bowdoin has conducted special summer programs with NSF support. Participation in the programs is nearing 1,000.

The Marine Biology Institute is the only one of its kind in the country supported by the NSF. It is directed by Professor Alton Gustafson both on the campus and at the Bowdoin Marine Station at Bethel Point, on land acquired through the generosity of Mrs. Harold T. Pulsifer of East Harpswell. Jutting out into Quahog Bay, one of the tributary waters of Casco Bay, the Station has become an increasingly useful teaching and research facility.

Bowdoin has developed with the NSF its sequential Summer Institutes in Mathematics, leading to a master's degree. The program is directed toward gifted teachers who are likely to exert leadership in the field by developing modern courses and writing new textbooks. Professor Richard Chittim '41 is its Director.

The Chemistry Institute is designed to help teachers working with or intending to work with Advanced Placement students. Professor Samuel Kamerling directs this program and also acts as Coordinator for all of the summer programs at the College. He expects 122 secondary school teachers to take part in the three Institutes, which will open June 28 and end on August 6.

New ALUMNUS Editor

Edward Born '57 of Schenectady, N. Y., has been appointed Editor of the ALUMNUS, effective July 1. He is currently Associate Director of Public Relations at Union College, where he has been since 1961. A native of Cleveland, Ohio, he prepared for college at the Cranbrook School in Bloomfield Hills, Mich. He was a Dean's List student and a James Bowdoin Scholar at Bowdoin and was graduated with High Honors in his major field, history. He was Editor of the Orient in his junior year and won the Class of 1875 Prize in American History as a senior.

New ALUMNUS Editor Ed Born '57 is shown here at the right as he accepted the Class of 1916 Bowl and the Class of 1929 Trophy from Alumni Fund Chairman Lew Vafiades '42 at a campus conference held last November. Mr. Born won both awards as the result of the outstanding job he did in the 1963-64 Alumni Fund, during his first year as 1957 Class Agent.

Mr. Born was an apprentice teacher of history and algebra at Cranbrook for a year and then was News Editor of the Wayne (Mich.) Eagle for a year while attending the University of Michigan, from which he received his M.A. degree in history in 1959. After six months of active duty with the Army, he was Editor of the Maple Heights (Ohio) Press for a year before joining the staff at Union. He and his wife, the former Bernice Strawinski of Detroit, Mich., have two young daughters, Mary Martha (3) and Kathryn Ann (2).

The present Editor of the ALUMNUS, who will put out the May and July issues before turning over the responsibility for the magazine, has enjoyed his long association — since the fall of 1950 — with this publication. However, he has for some time now been looking forward to the day when he might devote most of his time to his other position as Secretary of the Alumni Fund. That day will arrive on July 1.

In 1958 the Alumni Fund reached $147,000. In the years since 1958 it has shown steady growth to more than $240,000, and the goal for the current year is $275,000. In view of this growth and the projected rate of growth during the years ahead, it was decided to appoint a new Editor of the ALUMNUS in order to free the present Editor for the Fund.

Winter Sports Roundup

Bowdoin's hockey, basketball, swimming, and track teams improved their records in competition held between the start of the second semester and the end of the winter sports season. Results of first semester contests were reported in the January ALUMNUS.

Coach Sid Watson's hockey team finished with a record of 10 victories and 10 defeats, but several of the losses were to major college hockey powers. In the small college division of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, the Polar Bears posted an impressive 9-5 record that placed them near the top of the standings.

The icemen opened the second semester with five wins which, added to two just before the mid-January break, tied at seven the all-time Bowdoin record for consecutive hockey victories. The victims, in order, were Massachusetts (2-1), Williams (2-1), Amherst (12-4), M.I.T. (14-2), and New Hampshire (4-3 in overtime). The streak was snapped with a 2-4 defeat at the hands of Army. Then came a loss to New Hampshire (3-6) and the first loss to Colby (4-7) in the last five games between the Polar Bears and the Mules. The season ended with a 7-5 victory over an Alumni team.

The team's leading scorer was forward Ed Fitzgerald '66, whose 15 goals and 15 assists earned him a place on the United Press International All-New England small college squad. Forward Steve Wales '67 had 14 goals and 6 assists. Center Bill Allen '66 and defenseman Frank Yule '66 each had 19 points — Allen on 11 goals and 8 assists and Yule on 6 goals and 13 assists. Center Phil Coupe '67 flashed the red light 5 times and had 9 assists.

Goalie Dave Coupe '65, named to the UPI All-New England second team, racked up 422 saves out of 485 shots for an 87 percent average. Goalie Dick Leger '66 had 204 saves out of 234 shots for 87.2 percent.

Co-Captains Dave Coupe and Bill

Shown here, with some of their trophies and other "loot" acquired as the result of their activities in winter sports at Bowdoin are Tim Robinson '65, Bill Matthews '65, Dave Coupe '65, Alex Schulten '66, Dick Whitmore '65, and Gil Ekdahl '65.

Matthews '65, a defenseman, shared the Hugh Munro Hockey Trophy. They were also the only seniors on the squad, a fact which could brighten next year's prospects. Allen and Fitzgerald were elected co-captains of the 1965-66 team.

Coach Ray Bicknell's basketball squad ended its schedule with a 7-13 record that included the championship of the Blue Nose International Classic and a new all-time team scoring mark for a single game. Captain Dick Whitmore '65 capped a distinguished court career by becoming the second Bowdoin basketball player to score more than 1,000 points.

The hoopmen began the second semester by crushing Coast Guard 107-92 in the game that set a new Polar Bear scoring record. A victory over Wesleyan (69-51) was followed by losses to Colby (a 64-65 heart-breaker), Springfield (74-81), Maine (58-65), and Trinity (77-84). The next game was a 66-64 victory over Bates as Whitmore topped the 1,000-point mark, and the final game was a 68-74 loss to Colby.

Whitmore, a center, won the Paul Nixon Basketball Trophy. His three-year varsity total was 1,028 points — a figure surpassed only by Elford A. (Brud) Stover, Jr. '58, who scored 1,144 points. His outstanding performance as a scorer (426) and rebounder (244) this past season earned Whitmore a first-team vote on every ballot cast for the Associated Press All-Maine college team. His average of 21.3 points per game was the best in the state.

Forward Howie Pease '66, who was elected next season's captain, scored 208 points and was credited with 137 rebounds. Guard Brian Warren '66 poured in 185 points and guard Dan Tolpin '66, who was named to the AP's All-Maine second team, scored 133.

Coach Charlie Butt's swimming squad finished its dual meet season with a 4-4 record highlighted by an upset win over heavily favored M.I.T. The Polar Bear mermen began their second semester activities by defeating Trinity 58-37, with Charlie Gray '67 taking both the individual medley and the breaststroke. Harvey Wheeler '67 won the diving competition, and other firsts were turned in by Peter Stackpole '67 in the butterfly and Bowdoin's two relay teams. There was little for Polar Bear fans to cheer about in the next meet, won by Wesleyan 60-25, but Captain Tim Robinson '65 set a New England intercollegiate record as he won the 200 freestyle in 1:49.1 and also took the 100 freestyle. Wheeler and Mike Bothner '66 swept the diving, and Stackpole won the butterfly.

Although Robinson won both freestyles, setting a new Williams College pool record of 1:52.2 in the 200, Bowdoin bowed to Williams 63-32. Next came a 64-31 victory over Tufts, with Robinson winning the 50-yard freestyle and setting a New England record of 5:16.1 in the 500-yard freestyle. Stackpole set a Tufts pool record of 2:15.6 in the butterfly. Mike Ridgeway '67 won the 100-yard freestyle, Gray took the breaststroke, Wheeler and Bothner placed 1-2 in the diving, Bill Lynch '65 won the backstroke, and Bowdoin took the medley relay.

Bowdoin stunned M.I.T. 52-43 in the last dual meet as every swimmer turned in his best performance. The Polar Bear cause was helped by Coach Butt's winning strategy of entering Robinson in the 100 freestyle, which he won, and as anchor man in both relays. Wheeler and Bothner took the diving, Stackpole won the butterfly and was second in the individual medley, Ridgeway was second in the 50 and 100 freestyle events, and Karl Aschenbach '66 and Bill Beach '66 took important second and third places, respectively, in the 200 freestyle.

In the New England championships Bowdoin was seventh in a field of 14, with Robinson setting a new Bowdoin record of 1:48.7 in the 200 freestyle and Stackpole establishing a new Bowdoin record of 2:10.4 in the butterfly.

Several team members also participated in the national small college championships March 18-20.

The Robert B. Miller Swimming Trophy was awarded to Robinson, and the team elected Aschenbach as next season's captain.

The indoor track squad, coached by Frank Sabasteanski '41, wound up with a 1-6 record in dual competition. After the semester break, it defeated Vermont 67½-54½. Alex Schulten '66, some of whose achievements are recounted elsewhere in this ALUMNUS, set a new Maine college record of 62¾" for the 35-pound weight. He also established a Bowdoin record of 154'4" for the discus. John Tarbell '66 had firsts in the 50-yard dash and both hurdles. Tommy Allen '67 won the 600-yard run, and Andy Seager '66 took the high jump.

Next came a 46-67 loss to Massachusetts, although Schulten set a Hyde Cage mark of 59'11" in the 35-pound weight and Captain Gil Ekdahl '65 established a Bowdoin indoor pole vault record of 13¾". Ray Bird '66 won the low hurdles. Bowdoin lost its next meet, to Tufts 56-57, but Schulten hurled the weight 64'6½", one of the longest distances ever turned in by an American collegian. Bird contributed wins in the dash and low hurdles as well as a second in the high hurdles. Other Polar Bear victories were turned in by Allen in the 600, Ted Boal '66 in the two-mile, Ekdahl in the high jump, Dave Stocking '66 in the shot, and Tim Love '66 in the broad jump.

The Polar Bears lost to Bates 47-74 as Schulten won the weight and discus events, Bird took the low hurdles and the dash, John Coggins '66 won the shot, and Ekdahl took the pole vault. Bird and Tarbell paced Beta Theta Pi to victory in the Interfraternity Meet, and Kappa Sigma, trying for its seventh straight win, had to settle for second. The Jack Magee Trophy for the outstanding single performance went to Ekdahl of Chi Psi for his meet record of 12'8½" in the pole vault.

Schulten, who won the national collegiate outdoor hammer championship last year, added the IC4A national 35-pound weight title to his collection with a heave of 61'11¾". He then won the weight event as Bowdoin bowed to Boston University 48-64 in a meet that was also featured by Seager's first in the high jump, a win by Peter Beaven '66 in the 1,000, Coggins' victory in the shot, and Ekdahl's first in the pole vault. The Elmer L. Hutchinson Track Trophy went to Schulten.

Sergeant John Muise's rifle team was winless in five matches, the last four against Norwich, St. Michael's, Dartmouth, and M.I.T. One of the team's leading shooters, Mike Harmon '67, was elected captain for next season. Steve Munger '65 was this season's captain.

The skiing team's season included a third-place finish in the state meet. Points for Bowdoin were accumulated by Co-Captains Dick Forté '66 and Bill Hyde '65, Charles Cary '65, Bruce Found '67, and Cary Rea '67.

Summer Music School

Serious music students and advanced young instrumentalists throughout the country will have an opportunity to spend seven weeks this summer at the College, studying with one of the finest mixed chamber ensembles in the world at Bowdoin's first Summer Music School, to be held from July 5 to August 21.

Among the faculty in residence will be the Aeolian Chamber Players, chamber music quartet. Instruction will be offered in flute, clarinet, violin, piano, viola, cello, contrabass, oboe, bassoon, and French horn. Participants in the program will receive private lessons, take part in master classes, and perform in student chamber ensembles. There will be weekly concerts by the Aeolian Players, and Michael Rabin will appear as a solo violinist in the concert series.

The seven-week program will conclude with the College's first Contemporary Music Festival, featuring concerts by the Aeolian Players and the world premières of works by four noted composers.

The Aeolian Chamber Players organized in 1961 to bring high standards of performance to the repertoire for mixed timbre — strings, woodwinds, and piano. The founder of the group is violinist Lewis Kaplan, a member of the chamber music faculty of the Juilliard School of Music. The other three members are Gilbert Kalish, who has performed piano solo recitals throughout the United States and Europe; Lloyd Greenberg, clarinetist, a member of the Marlboro and Aspen Festival Orchestras and the St. Louis Symphony; and Thomas Nyfenger, flutist, who has served on the faculties at the Cleveland Institute of Music and Sarah Lawrence College.

Other faculty members will be Professor Robert K. Beckwith; Professor Elliott S. Schwartz, Bowdoin's composer in residence; and Louise Rogers, pianist and wife of Instructor John E. Rogers of the Music Department.

Music students interested in the program may obtain application forms by writing to Professor Beckwith at the Summer School of Music, Gibson Hall, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011. Arrangements will be made for auditions in various cities by the Aeolian Players, who will tour the United States during the spring. The tuition fee for the first six weeks of the program will be $250, and room and board will be $237. Partial scholarships are available, to be awarded on the basis of need and ability. The tuition fee for students during the final week, including the Music Festival, will be $30, and room and board will be $40. Special arrangements will be made for others who wish to attend only the Music Festival. Students will be housed in dormitories or in private residences near the campus, and meals will be provided at the College Mondays through Fridays.

The Contemporary Music Festival will include three concerts by the Aeolian Chamber Players and concerts by the best students of the Summer Music School. The climax of the week's activities will be the Aeolian Players' performances of newly commissioned works by Meyer Kupferman, Mel Powell, George Rochberg, and Morton Subotnick. The composers will attend open rehearsals and will offer seminars and informal discussions on their musical pieces.

Fundy's Birthday

On February 16 three people delivered a birthday cake to Professor Emeritus Manton Copeland at his home at 88 Federal Street in honor of the fifth birthday of the Manton Copeland Scholarship Fund, otherwise known as the MCSF or "Fundy." Fundy also received a letter from the Alumni Office, which said, in part, "It is a comforting thought that you will continue your romance with Bowdoin College into the centuries. We hope that you will share your birthday cake and celebration with your father. He deserves the best of everything, because he has made so many people happy."

During its first five years the MCSF grew to more than $12,900. This fact is important, to be sure, but it is impossible to tell people how much "Fundy" has meant to Professor Copeland during these five years. All of the correspondence that he has had with the donors has kept a youthful twinkle of happiness in his eyes, and news of a gift always makes him stand a little straighter.

Some alumni have seen the famous Copecabana on the shore at the Copeland summer home at Woods Hole on Cape Cod, where a sign reads, in part, "Come here alone, or with an understanding companion, in the early morning, or when the sun is setting over Penzance. Look below you, in front of you, and above, and try to understand what it all means. Come again and again because what you see is not all that you can see. Eventually you may reach the only possible conclusion. In any case you will dream better dreams, which is a key to happiness."

Manton Copeland long ago found the key to happiness — happiness for himself and also for others.

Geologists to Meet at Bowdoin

At the 56th annual meeting of the New England Intercollegiate Geological Conference, held in Boston early in October, Professor Arthur M. Hussey II of Bowdoin announced plans for the 1965 meeting, which will take place at the College on October 9 and 10. Some 250 to 300 professional geologists and students from colleges, state and federal surveys, and exploration firms in New England, neighboring states, and provinces of Canada are expected to attend.

Field trips will be led by Professor Hussey; Maine State Geologist Robert G. Doyle; Professor Marc W. Bodine, Jr., formerly a member of the Bowdoin faculty and now at Harpur College; Professors Philip Osberg and Harold Borns of the University of Maine; Professor Roy W. Farnsworth of Bates College; Professor Dabney W. Caldwell '48 of Wellesley College; and Professor Arthur Bloom of Cornell University.

Music

The busiest musical year in Bowdoin's history is drawing to an end — but only as far as the academic year is concerned. There will be an important summer program, described elsewhere in this issue.

On April 7 the Glee Club will present its annual home concert in the Pickard Theater. On the 15th pianist Richard Roberts will perform at the Senior Center, and on the 26th composer Henry Brant will lecture at the Pickard Theater. The month of May will feature a student recital on the 6th, a concert by the Aeolian Chamber Players on the 7th, and a Bowdoin Music Club program on the 19th. The Glee Club will sing at Lasell Junior College on April 10th and at the Boston "Pops" on May 13.

The Bowdoin Bachelors, one of the College's two double quartets, have released a new record, which includes 14 of the group's numbers, among them "Lida Rose," "Blue Skies," "Jesus Walked This Lonesome Valley," "Sentimental Journey," and "Our Love Will Die."

The album is available at the Moulton Union Bookstore at $4.25. Mail orders will be filled.

A Blue-Eyed Blonde

Miss Suzanne Svenson (18) of Portland, a student nurse at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, reigned as Queen of the 1965 Winter Houseparty on February 12-13, having been selected for that honor at a concert-dance in the Sargent Gymnasium. Her escort was Charles J. Kahill '65, also of Portland. More than 1,800 people filled every corner of the Gym — a record attendance — with music by The Rooftop Singers and The Kingsmen.

New Ford Foundation Grant

The Ford Foundation has made a grant of $6,190 to the College in support of a catalogue to be published early in the fall by the Museum of Art. It will deal with the Museum's collection of Colonial and Federal portraits, including the Thomas Jefferson by Gilbert Stuart and the Robert Feke painting of General Samuel Waldo. Other artists who will be represented in the catalogue are Thomas Sully, John Singleton Copley, Rembrandt Peale, Edward Green Malbone, John Trumbull, John Johnston, Joseph Blackburn, Joseph Badger, and John and Nathaniel Smibert.

Schulten's New Records

Alex Schulten '66 of Woolwich broke the Bowdoin 35-pound weight throw record three times during the winter. On January 30 he made a toss of 61' 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ " at the BAA Games in Boston, to surpass the former mark of 59' 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ ", held by Bill McWilliams '57. A week later, in a dual meet at the University of Vermont, he threw the weight 62' $\frac{3}{4}$ " and also set a new Bowdoin record of 154' 4" in the discus. On February 20, in a meet against Tufts at Medford, Mass., he threw the weight 64' 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ ".

Schulten holds a third Bowdoin record — 196' 7" in the 16-pound hammer throw — established outdoors last year, when he was a sophomore. McWilliams, whose records he has been busy breaking, has returned to the College to complete course work required before he can enter medical school in two years. He has been working with Schulten regularly and feels that Alex could possibly better the world hammer throw record of 231' 10", held by Harold Connolly — if he wants to put in the amount of time that Connolly and some Europeans do. "If you compare Alex's rate of development with that of others," he says, "he's probably got a better record of achievement for the time he has invested than any other thrower in the world."

Bearce Book Fund

Since Professor George D. Bearce died on January 18, there have been nearly fifty contributions totaling more than $600 to the George D. Bearce Book Fund at the College.

The Fund is open to contributions from both alumni and friends. Gifts may be made through the Alumni Fund.

Schulten, who first threw the hammer as a freshman at Bowdoin, broke the State of Maine hammer record at the age of 19, won a position on the 1964 All-American team, and was a finalist for the 1964 Olympic team. His father, T. Tarp Schulten, is President of the Bowdoin Fathers' Association this year.

Bass Scholarship

Members of the Bass family have established the W. S. Bass '96 and J. R. Bass '00 Memorial Scholarship Fund at Bowdoin, the income from which will be used to provide scholarship aid to deserving students from Wilton.

Willard Bass was President of G. H. Bass and Company, the well known Wilton shoe firm, from 1925 until his death in 1956 and was an Overseer of the College for 26 years. John Bass was Treasurer of the Bass Company for many years, until his death in 1963.

Forensic Festival at Bowdoin

On March 12 and 13 debaters, orators extemporaneous speakers, and interpretive readers from 14 colleges and universities gathered at Bowdoin to take part in the New England Forensic Festival. Bates won the "Sweepstakes Trophy," followed by Holy Cross, Southern Connecticut, and Bowdoin.

The others, 1925, 1930, 1935, 1940, 1945, 1950, and 1960, will hold their outings and dinners on Saturday. In addition, the Classes of 1922, 1924, and 1963 will hold informal reunions on June 11 and 12.

There will be a special Old Guard Headquarters, courtesy of the College, in Room 1 of West Coleman Hall. All members of the Classes from 1889 to 1909 are invited to make this their campus headquarters.

Books With A Bowdoin Flavor

JOHN GOULD, The Parables of Peter Partout, with drawings by F. Wenderoth Saunders: Little, Brown, and Company, 1964; pp. 171; $3.95.

John Gould of the Enterprise, "a weekly paper for all of Maine," has saved out a batch of letters-to-the-Editor written by an open-eyed farmer named Peter Partout, who delights in life and the people who make it worth your trouble. In a time when the pace is too fast for most of us to look out windows or into cellar doors or even at one another, the candid, uninhibited, and frequently hilarious observations of M. Partout warrant our attention.

A parable has been defined as an earthly story with a heavenly message. If these stories and recollections of Peter Partout are correctly called parables, then we must remember that John Gould's idea of heaven has its roots (and most of its branches) in Maine. These three dozen letters are earthly, selecting their characters from the folks near home and their stories from the neighbors' adventures. Partout is a bit of a gossip, but then, why tell the Editor news that everyone has known for years? If you want to discover how to see sunsets in the cellar or what becomes of a man who rows a Navy dory standing up or why it took so long to train Ambrose Neville's dog, then you'd better get a copy of Gould's book at once!

Mr. Saunders' drawings add to the happy humor of the whole collection. Especially good is his rendering of poor Thornton Esterbrook's living room after his parlor heater had blown out the side of the house. By the way, there is a painless didacticism about that particular episode that you'll enjoy.

I recommend that you do not read the book at one sitting, for like good apple pie or home brew, if you go at it all at once, it's gone and the fun is spoiled. Space out the letters over several evenings. Shut off the television and let yourself drift back to Lisbon Falls and hear the letters as you read them. Grateful I am that John Gould didn't try to capture the Maine dialect orthographically, as some writers painfully have done. It's much better that the reader let his imagination take care of the spoken word.

The Parables of Peter Partout is a good book. It sets out to make your evening enjoyable, and it does just that. John Gould, assisted by his good friend Peter Partout, has a sharp eye for description and a well-tuned ear for laughter. This combination results in a happy collection of bits and pieces about Maine people and their adventures north of Kittery.

FRANCIS RUSSELL, The Great Interlude: McGraw-Hill Book Company, 1964; pp. 212; $5.00.

Some months ago I received a letter written from the jungles of Thailand. The writer, a student of mine some ten years ago, was enjoying, amidst the somewhat primitive conditions of a construction company's camp, a sentimental journey to the Boston of the 1920's, a Boston of his father's time rather than his own, but seemingly the closer in time and in nostalgia as he was far away in distance and in circumstances.

The vehicle for this journey was Francis Russell's The Great Interlude, a book describing, as the subtitle puts it, "neglected events and persons from the First World War to the depression." Written by a Bostonian and largely about Boston, it brings into vivid sharpness an era which those who lived through it find has blurred with the crises which followed, and which those who never knew it have heard of only as, to repeat the title, an interlude. As Russell himself so aptly puts it, it was "the twentieth century starting twenty years late," — in other words, the opening decade of a new era, lying neglected between the cataclysmic end of the 19th century's "old world" with World War I. and the 20th century's "new world" of depression, international crises, and the atom bomb.

This interlude, whether "great," as the title puts it, or halcyon, or forgotten, or simply overshadowed, is described in this book through carefully chosen incidents and personalities. Those who know Russell's writings, his newspaper articles (I recall some delightful ones about the old Roxbury Latin School in the former Boston Evening Transcript of many years ago), his historical and critical essays (which have appeared in numerous periodicals), or his books (the latest, Tragedy in Dedham, on the Sacco-Vanzetti case), know that he writes with a rare felicity. With an economy of words and effort he can make vivid a person or place, evoke memories which revive feelings long past and half forgotten, and interpret or explain events with originality and clarity, often giving the reader a new understanding or a new point of view.

His is an intensely personal style; he reveals, as in such a case is inevitable, a great deal about himself because he puts a great deal of himself into what he writes. This must be and is especially true in such reminiscences as make up this book. Not everyone will, of course, react to them in the same way. Some, like my friend in Thailand, will be charmed by the pictures he evokes; others will be disturbed in some particular sensitivity by racial or political overtones. This, in my opinion, is as it should be. Mr. Russell is never bland, although the smoothness of his style might at first fool some readers. But those who knew him at Bowdoin or, as I did, at Roxbury Latin School, where for a time we were classmates, know him as a provocative and stimulating person. His writing reflects both these qualities.

The Great Interlude is made up of twelve essays which have been chosen with care and an instinctive sense of rightness to illustrate the spirit of the time and the place, the Boston of the 1920's. They open with a description of the pre-World War I officer training camp at Plattsburg and close with a description of James Michael Curley, the last of the old city bosses. In between, Russell deals with such varied topics as the influenza epidemic of 1918, the Boston police strike, Carlo Tresca, the last anarchist, the James Joyce cult, and the racial changes which ebbed and flowed over his boyhood home on Dorchester Hill. These and the others should charm anyone who knew the area and the era or who has ties to them or who merely likes to discover an almost forgotten but not unimportant page of our past.

MILTON M. GORDON, Assimilation in American Life: Oxford University Press, New York, 1964; pp. 276; $2.50.

Professor Gordon's Assimilation in American Life is both interesting and useful. Although the ultimate problems with which he is concerned are prejudice and discrimination, his approach to them is indirect. Many recent studies by sociologists and psychologists have emphasized personality dynamics and have concentrated on small-group behaviors. Gordon moves to a larger area. He examines the "social structure of our racial, religious, and national groups and their various inter-relationships," and having done so, and having presented a number of interesting and more than plausible hypotheses, he closes the book with a consideration of the implications of these ideas, not only for the problems of prejudice and discrimination, but also for our general set of democratic values. It is here that his ideas are especially "useful," as they indicate quite clearly and logically what government and private institutions can and can not do in relation to prejudice, discrimination, and integration.

In recent months and years, our nationwide attention has been so deeply concentrated on highly visible Negro-white "incidents" in Selma, Montgomery, and other cities that the less visible tensions relating to other minority groups — religious, racial, and national — have been out of the spotlight. Many seem to feel that the "melting pot" really melted and that, apart from the extreme and dramatic contrasts, such as Negro-white, the rest are rapidly becoming "just Americans," essentially middle-class, with almost identical attitudes, wants, ideologies — culture. These same impressions lead to the assumption that after two or three generations a point has been reached where, since there is a common culture, spread by means of our schools and our mass communication system, the behavior and attitudes of persons of Polish, Irish, Jewish, English, Catholic, German, Italian, and Protestant ancestry will soon be the same and, accordingly, that they will interact with one another with complete freedom, without prejudice or discrimination.

The author does not accept this easy generalization. He discusses the general topic of assimilation and specifically examines three types that have been considered and often advocated in this country: Anglo-Conformity, where there has been an attempt to mold all newcomers to the pattern of the culture of the "early-Americans," divesting them completely of their own culture traits; the Melting-Pot, where there has been the assumption that some sort of amalgam should be produced, preserving the cultural characteristics of all those groups that went into it; and, finally, Cultural-Pluralism, which somehow should bring about the retention of the important cultural characteristics of ethnic groups — thus preserving their identities as groups, and yet, at the same time, synchronizing their behaviors in the consensual activity of American society.

After an analysis of the several forms of assimilation, the author returns to consideration of cultural pluralism and finds, with much support from studies that have been made in this field, that, indeed, assimilation has taken place and that groups in contact have mutually accepted and taken over many attitudes and behaviors. The important point that Gordon makes is that of the entire spectrum available in the assimilation process, ethnic groups — religious, racial, national — are most likely to accept, go along with, and conform to the more "official" and formal types of behavior. Gordon maintains, and with considerable empirical support, that the "melting-pot" does not completely "melt" and that ethnic group members, although assimilating attitudes and behaviors of the over-all national society, still maintain very close relations on the primary, intimate, clique-like level, essentially within their own group.

What this means is that much of the behavior of members of these "subsocieties" is "ethnically enclosed." Their religious activity, family relationships, recreation, and close friendships are limited to the range of their ethnic group. Although our official, formal, job, and political interactions with one another may be free, easy, and open, without thought of prejudice and discrimination, our close, personal, clique relations remain tied with our ethnic group, whether we are Negro, Jewish, Polish, or Protestant.

This is an interesting and stimulating book, with many ideas for one to think about.

ELLIS O. BRIGGS, Farewell to Foggy Bottom: David McKay Company, New York, 1964; pp. 306; $4.95.

Farewell to Foggy Bottom, with a foreword by the Honorable Christian A. Herter H'48, is certainly a book to be read by all. Particularly is it of value to a young or budding Foreign Service Officer (if he can thereafter go over parts of it with a mature Officer for full evaluation and discussion, so much the better). The book is not, obviously, intended to constitute a Foreign Service text book, in the general acceptance of the word. But it well may be a "must" for all those who are sincerely interested in our country's domestic and foreign headaches. In Farewell to Foggy Bottom Mr. Briggs has not sat himself down with jealous intent to write a detailed account of his career, as one might one's memoirs; rather he has supplemented his more recent conclusions with a considerable number of pages from articles previously published, joining the whole together to form a narrative of reasonable homogeneity. This procedure has both advantages and disadvantages, but he has done a pretty good job of it.

The first section deals in a hard-hitting fashion with the author's considered conclusions, based on long years of Top Level experience both in the field and at the Department of State, regarding the Foreign Service — and particularly with respect to the Top Level strata. He sets forth in no uncertain terms ways in which improvements may be made. By this he means decidedly more effective, and in what he says he is deadly serious. No slippers-and-pipe mood here — he becomes at once a not-so-old Ancient Mariner who stoppeth not one of three, but the whole assembly, letting the chips land wherever the wind blows them. The second part of the book (and here he is very decidedly "en pantouffles") is written in a more relaxed and lighter vein. All of it is good entertainment, touched with wise saws and what this reviewer likes to think is Yankee wit.

In parts of this book, however, as the author himself undoubtedly would be the first to admit, there are places in the narration which the reader will find somewhat wordy, over-exuberant, a bit too explosive and overdone for effect. At times there seems to be more accent on the array of adjectives and expletives than on the conclusions which too colorful descriptions clutter up more than they set in relief. One may feel that the nearest approach to perfect humor is that which winks solemnly at one from just under the surface of a few well chosen words. But let us bear in mind that Mr. Briggs is "off duty" and enjoying himself, as he has every right to do.

And now, some of the highlights of this intriguing volume:

Mr. Briggs does not like the Peace Corps. He doesn't analyze it, but obviously he has little patience with it. Does not the reader feel, instinctively and in the absence of first-hand observation, that he is shooting-from-the-hip and a bit too fast at that? The Peace Corps has no illusions that alone it can revolutionize the heart and economy of the world's poor and underprivileged; but is honest idealism, even when supported by little else than all too modest remuneration, so terribly bad?

With regard to Foreign Aid, one must agree with much that he says. Money never did and never will buy lasting friendships. Did you, reader, ever loan or give money to a friend and have him feel quite the same toward you thereafter? "Pain avalé et vite oublié."

One is glad to note that he does admit quite freely that at least the Marshall Plan salvaged a good bit of war-torn Europe. When he says that many of our foreign establishments are over-staffed and frequently so cluttered up with representatives of our other agencies that the Ambassador is hard put to it to keep things under control, he is undoubtedly correct. When he declares that an under-staffed office is invariably more efficient than an over-staffed one, he is probably quite incorrect. There are occasions and circumstances when an under-staffed office can do a very good job, but this obviously can not be the most desirable arrangement. As Mr. Briggs well states, far too many and miscellaneous Federal agencies are climbing onto the diplomatic bandwagon; and the reason is simply that they believe by so doing their representations will have more prestige and hence will more quickly attain achievement. Top-Level dealing, in business or diplomacy, if it can be engineered, usually brings results. But all this can drive a Chief of Mission crazy, since he alone must answer to whatever situation resolves.

Regarding the superiority of career diplomats as opposed to political appointees, he is, as all the world knows or should know, dead right. Once in a while a political appointee succeeds amazingly well, but the number is far from legion. Remember, here the fault is that of the White House and not that of the Department of State. "Foggy Bottom" is definitely "in the clear" in this respect. This reviewer recalls serving as a Secretary of Legation — years ago — where the Minister was a political appointee. This kindly man had brought many votes to the Party in power. As a reward, he became Chief of Mission in a small but important American republic, whose language, customs, history, and mentality he knew nothing about and cared less about. The staff kept the ball rolling for him while he spent much of his time writing humorous dispatches to Washington, poking caustic fun at the government to which he was accredited. Socially and apart from his official status, he was a very likable gentleman. But he was no diplomat, and probably knew that he was not and worried precious little about it. By latest count, only two-thirds or less of our Ambassadors and Ministers are career men.

Mr. Briggs is right again when he says that, in too many instances, good men have been transferred far too rapidly. The State Department will admit the fact, but qualify their admission by explaining that frequently unexpected and last-moment developments leave them no choice. Nevertheless, Mr. Briggs has plenty of firm ground for complaint. His voice is loudest and most vehement when he cries out against entrenched Bureaucracy. Whose voice does not? But Bureaucracy has long existed and probably always will, not only in government but in other highly administrative activities. When more than two top administrators get their heads together and have the authority, the infant Willie Bureaucracy is quietly conceived. If he has half a chance, he quickly grows into a robust individual, to be contended with by all those without the favored circle. Of course, he never uses his own and real name, since he does much better under the cognomen "Policy."

With what the author says regarding our aptitude for failures in Latin America almost everybody here at home — and many abroad — will agree. These young and vital republics, young in ways of stable government but old in culture, have long been a stumbling block for all Administrations (the Latins know us so much better than we know them; it is well-nigh pitiful at times!).

Sections IV and V, "Communist Czechoslovakia" and "Imprisonment of Bill Oatis," are at once splendid and outstanding in every respect. Best of all, perhaps, is that masterly Section XIV, "The Korean Armistice — A Decade Later." One finds Mr. Briggs' words touched with inspiration and a certain unconscious grandeur. Farewell to Foggy Bottom could readily make its way in this cold world, alone and unaided, with but these three sections between its covers.

The reader, of course, will not fail to appreciate such Franklin-like side remarks as:

"One parts with reluctance from shopworn but comfortable prejudices."

"A robot mind has no place in diplomacy." "Never let a weak ally make decisions for you."

"(Dictator Duvalier of Haiti) is a comic figure only to those out of reach of his jungle claw."

"Governments do not often perish because other governments disapprove of them."

As a fringe-benefit observation to be noted by the reader in the course of this book, let him perceive one additional and not too incidental fact: the frequency with which "John Barleycorn" appears from nowhere; he quietly slips his arm through that of the exhausted diplomat, and they move resolutely forward as one. In some mysterious way, as if by magic, when the dire need arises to hasten the drying of the Ambassador's perspiring garters or to resuscitate a wilting Secretary of State far from home, good old honest "John," cool and inviting, can always be counted on to put in an appearance. Known by many different names, in various guises and owing allegiance to virtually all flags, his humor is ever the same. A long, amber-colored thread of cheer, alcohol in some form or other seems destined to be woven deep across the rich fabric of diplomacy.

To conclude our examination of this delightful book, it is suggested that the reader give due consideration to Mr. Herter's excellent but somewhat discreet preface, bearing in mind the while that he himself has not yet loosened his collar and sat down to write his "valedictory" to government service.

The American Foreign Service Journal in its review of Farewell to Foggy Bottom (issue of December, 1964) is largely laudatory in its comment and follows Mr. Herter's line of thought. In terminating its remarks, this semi-official publication says, in part:

"One lays down the book with a feeling that this man loved his country, served it with unflinching and self-sacrificing devotion and was attached to the Foreign Service with a passion which flared in hot and biting anger at times, because of excessive zeal. . . ."

If "excessive zeal" during a man's career does not prevent him from rising to the top of his profession, where he serves outstandingly for a good number of years, need one be too apprehensive about such a "weakness"?

KARL L. RANKIN, China Assignment: University of Washington Press, Seattle, Wash., 1964; pp. 364; $6.95.

It is a reasonably safe prediction that throughout our lifetime Communist China will be a source of great danger and the sower of continuing discord in the world. This statement would be equally true if the present totalitarian dictatorship were fascist rather than communist. And it would be well to keep that point in mind. What we are witnessing is the rebirth of a great power, but a power potentially far greater than any the world has ever known or imagined. The unsettling effects of this process on the world distribution of power would be disturbing enough in the most favorable of circumstances. (Witness the re-emergence of German power under Hitler's guidance.) But in this case it is complicated by the turmoil in Southeast Asia.

Any book that will add to our understanding of the China problem must be welcomed by scholars, if not by the general reading public. As a record of the origin of current U. S. China policy, Ambassador Rankin's book is a valuable contribution. But as an aid to understanding the present situation, it is dated. It tells the story, in enormous detail, of how we got into the present situation, but offers no clue to the manner of getting out of it. The book ends with Ambassador Rankin's departure from Taiwan in January, 1958, more than seven years ago, leaving us with (in his view) China still a satellite of Moscow and our policy goal the elimination of the Peiping regime.

Nevertheless, Ambassador Rankin has given us a valuable record of his long service in Taiwan during the formative years of U. S. China policy. His unusually long assignment of more than seven years began only months after Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Government retreated to Formosa from the mainland.

From a dilapidated Embassy chancery — on the wrong side of the tracks — with a tiny staff, Rankin saw the American presence in Taiwan approach 10,000 officials before he left, an expansion that he was not at all happy about. His long tenure "permitted me to see as much of the whole picture" of Sino-U. S. relations "as any American dealing with Chinese affairs."

A long-time citizen of South Bridgton, Maine, Karl Rankin (LL.D. Bowdoin 1960) was a career diplomat. His colorful past included some three years (1922-25) doing famine relief work in Russia and internment by the Japanese during World War II. He has long been known as a frequent spokesman for strong military and diplomatic support of the Nationalist regime.

He was directly in the eye of the several Asian whirlwinds that swept American public opinion in the 1950's — the "loss" of China, the "leashing" and "unleashing" of Chiang Kai-shek, "Truman's War" (Korea), Quemoy and Matsu, among others — but one would scarcely know from reading his book that he is dealing with matters so bitter and controversial that many of the wounds opened then have yet to heal. His tone is calm and reasonable throughout — with the exception of his remarks on the tendency toward Empire-building by U. S. officials on Taiwan that resulted in fourteen different lines of authority — yet he leaves no doubt where he stood and what he stood for.

It is clear that Mr. Rankin's concept of the job of an Ambassador goes far beyond merely reporting to Washington and acting as the American President's representative in the host country. It could be said without stretching the truth too far — if this book is sufficient evidence — that he was the architect of the main elements of U. S. China policy. He not only formulated recommendations for Washington but advocated them strongly and persuasively, to the Department and to almost anyone who would listen. One gets the curious feeling, from time to time, that these are the memoirs of the Ambassador of the Republic of China to Washington, rather than vice versa.

China Assignment is not an easy book to read. The writing is straightforward, unambiguous, and relatively free of "officialese." But the format is unfortunate. Made up principally of dispatches to the Department, memoranda of conversations, interviews, and so forth, speeches given, and letters written, it is necessarily repetitive, disjointed, and, at times, dull. Needless to say, it is almost too much to find these faults compounded by the inclusion of Mr. Rankin's guest lists, courtesy calls, invitations, and comments on the plumbing and interior decoration. It is definitely not a book to curl up with, but it is a fascinating glimpse of a forceful, intelligent, devoted man influencing the formation of policies that have come to be increasingly questioned if not damned.

"From where I sit," we are likely to say, "this is how it looks." And we usually say it with decisive finality as if that is all there is to it. Americans in the world today, vexed and troubled by the situation in which they find themselves, are especially given to sweeping condemnation of those who refuse to support NATO or SEATO, who have been aided by the "free world" but who seem to be slow to defend it, who negotiate with Red China, who are "neutralist" in their policies and professions. All this seems terribly wrong from where we sit. That we would do well to stop and consider how it may look from where someone else may happen to sit seldom occurs to us. That it had better occur to us if we are to act wisely in the crisis of the present is the message of Sihanouk Speaks.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, formerly King, then Prime Minister, and now Chief of State of Cambodia, has led his country in its struggle to obtain and then maintain its independence. Alone among the states of Indochina it has kept itself relatively unified, peaceful, independent, and prosperous. Under Prince Sihanouk's leadership his country so far has been saved from either communization from within or conquest by the Viet Minh. It is vitally important to us that it should continue to be saved. If so, we would do well to consider how the world looks from where Prince Sihanouk sits.

Professor Armstrong seeks to help us do this. "Sihanouk Speaks," he tells us, "is primarily an attempt to see the world through another man's eyes, another man with different problems, a different historical background, a different culture, and a different perspective." It is a remarkably objective book. The author keeps himself in the background and contrives it so that it is Sihanouk himself that we are listening to. The larger part of the book is made up of carefully selected, arranged, and presented passages from Sihanouk's writings, speeches, and interviews. There are short chapters on "Cambodia and Its Prince" and on "Sihanouk and History" which put things in perspective for us. We see the long struggles over the centuries which have made our present allies, the Thais and the Vietnamese, the natural enemies of Cambodia's Khmers. We are given an insight into the frustrations and disappointments of the long struggle for independence. We come to understand the sensitiveness to protocol and the significance of what seem to be deliberate slights.

Most of all, however, Professor Armstrong lets Prince Sihanouk speak for himself. He explains his attitude toward communism. "It is necessary to specify that although I am prepared to be 'the friend' of Red nations to the extent that they conduct themselves as friends, respectful of our sovereignty and our regime, I am not a partisan of Communism in my country. . . . It is the youth, the rising generation, who, the Communists well know, will finally settle the question: Constitutional Monarchy and socialism or a 'Democratic' Communist Republic." He recognizes that American aid can be of great assistance to Cambodia, but Americans "forget the proverb that says, 'The manner of giving is worth more than what is given.' . . . Cambodia is trying to abandon American aid so that it will no longer have to fear its being stopped." He appraised the conditions necessary for success. "No success is possible," he wrote during the struggle for independence, "if the populations in question do not take part with conviction in the struggle, that is to say if these populations do not believe that this struggle is leading toward their well-being."

"What characterizes the policy of the Anglo-Saxons, with respect to us," Sihanouk once wrote, "is their total ignorance of our mentality, of our situation, and of our hopes." It is this that Professor Armstrong seeks to change. We can learn much if we can but see how it looks from where Prince Sihanouk sits.

ATHERN P. DAGGETT '25

DAVID B. WALKER, A Maine Profile: Some Conditioners of Her Political System: Bureau for Research in Municipal Government, Bowdoin College, 1964; pp. 55.

Dr. Walker's monograph concerning some of the characteristics of Maine that affect its political system is the 25th issue in the Government Research Series published by the Bureau for Research in Municipal Government. Furthermore, this year represents the 51st anniversary of the Bureau, which was established at Bowdoin by Professor Orren C. Hormell H'51 and received from him much of its continuing leadership. Through its publications and the personal efforts and influence of those associated with it, the Bureau has exerted a significant influence upon the conduct of public affairs in Maine, both state and local. In this sense the activities of the Bureau constitute an important part of the contribution that the College makes to the welfare of the general community of which it is a part.

This useful study by Dr. Walker is divided into two separate parts. First there is an analysis of a number of economic and social factors which it is held have been a major determinant of the "semi-one-party system." While it can be agreed that most of these characteristics have tended to favor the Republican Party, one might place more emphasis upon the fact that changes in population, urbanization, and the economy were tending to upset the established order.

The second major portion of the monograph concerns the formal governmental system of the state. This section includes a detailed commentary on the problem of legislative representation and indicates that the method of apportionment is relatively equitable and that the 1964 reapportionment will tend generally to favor urban and, to an extent, Democratic voters.

Apart from the matter of representation, Dr. Walker quite correctly concludes that the government structure has generally tended to support conservative manifestations. Indeed, in his frame of reference the victory of the Democrats throughout the state in the last election, including their control of both Houses of the Legislature, would have to be explained in terms of the influence of the national tickets and not in terms of local changes in either economic, social, or political factors.

Alumni Clubs

Secretary Ed Born '57 reports a very successful meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Albany on Friday, October 30, at Schrafft's Restaurant. Twenty-three alumni and wives attended the social hour and dinner and greeted the guest speaker from the College, Professor Athern Daggett '25. In writing a note of appreciation to Professor Daggett, Ed said, "Your talk was most informative and did much to dramatize to the alumni and guests present the significance of the Senior Center Program."

Attending the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. John Hopkins '27, James Colton '31, Mr. and Mrs. John Manning '33, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald York '37, Gordon Potter '39, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wheeler '40, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Coe '52, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Welch '54, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Paul '55, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Born '57, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Hovey '57, Mr. and Mrs. John Ossolinski '62, and David Klingaman '62.

The Club adopted a constitution and selected a nominee for the Distinguished Bowdoin Educator Award. In addition to those present, there were indications of interest in future meetings from another 20 alumni.

The Albany Club held a subfreshman meeting on January 28 at the home of Club President Lew Welch '54. In addition to the President and the Secretary, Roy McNiven '41 and John Ossolinski '62 were present. There were fourteen subfreshman guests from the Albany-Schenectady area, and the College was represented by Associate Director of Admissions Robert Mellow and Football Coach Peter Kostacopoulos.

ANDROSCOGGIN

Professor Athern Daggett '25 and Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50 represented the College at the initial monthly luncheon meeting of the Androscoggin County Bowdoin Club at Steckino's Restaurant in Lewiston on Tuesday, January 12. The group met for a noon luncheon, which adjourned shortly after 1:30 p.m.

President John Wheaton was host; Vice President Fred Hall presided; Bob Clifford introduced the principal speaker, Professor Daggett; and Secretary Don Roux collected the luncheon fees and additional dues. The following men were present: Abbott '57, Barnard '50, Beale '35, Clifford '59, Daggett '25, Dennis '31, Hall '59, Kingsbury '34, Paul '19, Payne '54, Roux '55, Sacco '55, Schonland '21, Webber '27, and Wheaton '58.

Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason was the luncheon speaker on February 9, and Professor William Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center, spoke on March 9. News Director Joseph Kamin will be the guest speaker on April 13 and Professor Herbert Brown H'63 on May 11.

The Club officers are completing plans for a spring dinner meeting and ladies' night on Tuesday, May 18, when President Coles will be the guest of honor and principal speaker.

CLEVELAND

Club President Cal Vanderbeek '49 reports a meeting on Friday, January 15, at the Cleveland Skating Club in Shaker Heights. "Our guest, Pete Kostacopoulos, is certainly an engaging person, and we all enjoyed his commentary on the highlight movies of the 1964 football season. The College has made an excellent choice in a man of his caliber for the new head coach of football. We are impressed by his personality and knowledge and look forward to a visit from him whenever he is headed our way."

Present at the meeting were six alumni and four wives, including Bob Burton '43, Hal Foster '33, Jim Nevin '53, Dave Roberts '62, Cal Vanderbeek, and Dick Woods '37.

COLUMBUS

The Reverend Roger Nichols '45 presided at an informal dinner meeting of Bowdoin alumni at the Jai Lai Restaurant in Columbus, Ohio, on Thursday evening, November 19. Notices were sent to all alumni in the central Ohio area, and the arrangements were made by Jon Brightman '60 and Jim Bradner '63. Seven alumni attended: Nichols '45, Damon '48, Barnard '50, Weston '51, Apollonio '53, Brightman '60, and Bradner '63.

The special guest was Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50, who spoke informally about the latest campus news and discussed the prospects of a new Bowdoin club in the region. All present voted to form a club, and the following were elected its first officers: President, Roger Nichols '45; Secretary, Jon Brightman '60; and Council Member, Carl Apollonio '53. The Alumni Council voted official recognition to the newly-formed group in February.

Alumni interested in the activities of the Bowdoin Club of Columbus are invited to write the Secretary, whose address is 395 East Broad Street, Columbus.

KNOX-LINCOLN-WALDO

The Club held its annual fall stag meeting on Thursday, November 12, at the Knox Hotel. Special guests were subfreshmen from local schools. Council Member Dave Verrill '50 reported on the recent activities of the Alumni Council, and Assistant Director of Admissions Walt Moulton '58 spoke on Bowdoin admissions. The principal speaker was Professor Dodge Fernald, Chairman of the Psychology Department and Coach of Freshman Soccer.

President Rex Garrett '35 has announced the next spring dinner and ladies' night: Thursday, June 17.

LONG ISLAND

News Director Joe Kamin and Football Coach Pete Kostacopoulos represented the College at the fall dinner meeting of the Long Island Club on Wednesday, December 2, at the House of McLoughlin in Roslyn. Following a social hour and dinner, Joe spoke on the latest news from the campus, and Pete showed highlight movies of the 1964 football season.

The Long Island Bowdoin Club and the Kiwanis Club of Westbury were joint sponsors of a Bowdoin Glee Club concert at Westbury High School on Sunday evening, March 28.

MICHIGAN

Members of the Bowdoin Club of Michigan, their wives, and guests attended a meeting at the Detroit Country Day School in suburban Birmingham on Tuesday evening, November 17. Club Convener Rod Snelling '53, Headmaster of the School, was the host.

Following a social hour at the Headmaster's home, the 22 alumni and guests proceeded to the school dining room for a delicious buffet supper. The guest speaker, traveling on combined alumni club and school admissions visits, was Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50, who brought the latest news from Brunswick.

Present for the meeting were the Stuart DeMotts '18, the Hilliard Harts '21, the Alden Smiths '25, the Cy Simmonses '26, the George Cutters '27, Bill Randall '45, Stanley Dole '47, Pete Barnard '50, John Butler '50, Bill Campbell '51, the Rod Snellings '53, the Wally Riches '56, and the Nick Watterses '60, as well as Mrs. Stanley Dole, widow of the late Overseer Stanley Dole '13.

MINNESOTA

Barney Barton '50, Secretary of the Bowdoin Club of Minnesota, reports, "The Club held a dinner meeting at Barney Barton's home on December 2, while Assistant Director of Admissions Walt Moulton '58 was visiting local schools. We were happy to hear the results of Walt's visits and to learn about current happenings on campus. The following alumni attended the meeting: Cobb '26, Scholefield '32, Ivory '37, Barton '50, Fairfield '53, T. Dwight '54, Clark '56, Paton '57, Thresher '59, and Corsini '61.

"On December 30 we sponsored a Christmas-week luncheon for subfreshmen at the American Life and Casualty Company, where Club President Jim Scholefield '32 is Executive Vice President and was host. Undergraduates Lloyd Thompson '68 and Jon Hageseth '67 were the featured speakers at the meeting; they gave our 13 guests a quick rundown on life at the College. Alumni present were Scholefield '32, Barton '50, Nightingale '51, and Fairfield '53."

NEW YORK

A group of eight young alumni who are doing postgraduate work in the New York City area met Coach Charlie Butt for an informal luncheon at the Columbia University Men's Faculty Club on Saturday, January 9. The group was called together by Gary Yamashita '63. Following the luncheon Charlie showed color slides taken at the Tokyo Olympics last fall and brought the group up to date on current campus happenings.

Younger alumni in the New York area who wish to be added to Gary's list may contact him at Apartment 77, 215 W. 91st Street, New York, New York.

ST. PETERSBURG

Dr. Alton Pope '11, who is making the arrangements for the monthly luncheon meetings this season, reports that the Bowdoin Club of St. Petersburg met on Thursday, January 14, at the Hotel Pennsylvania. The following attended: Haley '07, Webster '10, Pope '11, Barbour '12, Kennedy '13, McMurtrie '13, Newcombe '14, Tarbox '14, Fish '15, McNaughton '17, and Derby '18.

The club voted to make the final luncheons on March 11 and April 1 ladies' days at the Wedgewood Inn. President Coles will be the guest of honor on April 1.

Class Agent Paul Niven reports that 1916's Reunion Committee is at work planning for the Fiftieth in June of 1966. Bill Ireland is General Chairman, Winthrop Bancroft is Assistant General Chairman, and Edward Hawes and Paul Niven are Vice Chairmen. The Committee will soon be reporting further details to members of the Class.

Red Elliott, completely retired as of about a year ago, and his wife spend six months of each year at their cottage on Lake Winnepesaukee in New Hampshire and the other six months in their Baltimore home. They have obtained a nice home site in Laconia, N. H., and will build on it if Red can sell his Baltimore house. If he can accomplish this deal, there will be three Sixteeners living in retirement in New Hampshire — Mac Dyar at Charlestown, Larry Cartland at Claremont, and Red at Laconia.

1918 Secretary, Lloyd O. Coulter

In March John Bachulus wrote, "Still kicking and prodding educated class delinquents in connection with anything that will better Bowdoin."

Dr. Wilfred Brewer was married on September 23 to Mrs. Barbara Ross Hiester of Bath. They are living at 310 East 70th Street in New York City, where Wilfred has offices at Kennedy Airport.

On February 25 Jim Mitchell of Bangor received an honorary doctor of laws degree at a Centennial Founders Day convocation held at the University of Maine. The citation read upon that occasion said, in part, ". . . on several occasions he has been chosen by his colleagues to serve as president of the county bar association, as an officer of its library, and in other capacities; he has also been elected a fellow of the American Bar Foundation and the American College of Trial Lawyers; in addition, he served as a member of the Maine State Board of Bar Examiners for 17 years.

"Those who have become acquainted with Mr. Mitchell know many of these things about him. They are on the public record. His friends know, too, that he is quiet, gentle, effective. Many of his closest friends do not know that for more than 35 years he has given of his time and professional knowledge — days that add up to weeks, and months that add up to years — to handle an endless variety of legal matters involving the University of Maine. In spite of his great efficiency he never gets around to sending a bill!

"In recognition of your outstanding contributions for the betterment of your profession, your dedication to the high ideals of the practice of law, and for your thoughtful and loyal assistance to this University, the Trustees are pleased to confer upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws."

1923 Secretary, Philip S. Wilder
12 Sparwell Lane
Brunswick

Jim Kunkel is in fashion with other members of 1923, in that he was in the hospital last fall. His visit was for a gland operation.

Jim hopes to get back to Brunswick sometime soon to see the many changes on the campus. Both of his sons are married, and he reports, "Except for a delightful dog, we are back where we started."

Geof Mason was a bearer at the funeral of Al Christie last December. Jack Renier and Dick Willis also represented the Class at the service.

Cliff Parcher has been elected Chairman of the Board of Badger and Browning and Parcher, Inc., Boston advertising firm, following 16 years as its President. He continues to be active in the company on a full-time basis.

Karl Philbrick has been elected Executive Vice President and a Trustee of the Eastern Trust and Banking Company in Bangor, where he continues to be a trust officer.

On January 25 George Varney took the oath of office as Maine's 10th District Court Judge. He presides in Kittery, in Sanford, and in Biddeford-Saco. At the opening ceremony George said the motto of his court would be, "Never pass judgment on anyone until you have at least walked a mile in his shoes and carried his burdens."

1924 Secretary, Clarence D. Rouillard
209 Rosedale Heights Drive
Toronto 7, Canada

Red Cousins has been elected President of the Portland Society of Natural History and the Maine Audubon Society.

Buck and Florence Dunphy sailed on March 5 for Casablanca, Spain, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Lebanon, Syria, Israel, and Egypt. They plan to return early in May.

Dick Lee writes, "Traveled to England, Ireland, and France last September. Bumped into Herbie Brown in London and also into some Englishmen driving on the left."

Mac McMennamin plans to return in June for our informal reunion. He has postponed his retirement to August 6. Mac reports the birth of a new grandson, Danny McMennamin, last December 1.

Mal and Edna Morrell took a Florida vacation near the end of the winter — for a month or so.

In January the Brunswick Area United Fund presented a citation to Mal in recognition of his service as a Director since 1960. The citation said, in part, ". . . we want you to know that we hold you in high esteem, deep respect, and warm affection. You are, indeed, without peer; you are truly as dedicated, hard working, inspired, and respected a citizen as any in our beloved community."

Frank Plaisted is still raising cattle and helping one son get started in his new distributorship for the Union Oil Company. Another son will be graduated from Portland State University in Oregon in June and will then go on to graduate work. He is married and has a son.

Honorary Class Member Peg Stanwood is President of the Brunswick branch of Altrusa International. Its civic project for this year is a social center for retired persons.

At Christmas time Charlie wrote, "So Lieia and I have an 'extended' family geographically, but shrunken at home. Shrunken, that is, until the vacations roll around. This summer many young people came from the four corners, and a merry melange ensued — on the beaches, but also at nightly twist parties. (Le twist, le bluejean, and le eoca-eola are coin of the realm.) We did, all the same, manage some interesting weekend trips this summer to various parts of Tunisia: cork forests upon the mountains at Ain-Draham in the northwest near Algeria; silver-white sands at Kelibia, out on Cap Bon; turreted walls and towers of ancient Sousse hard by the ultra-modern hotels of Monastir; Roman ruins far out in the former 'bread-basket' of ancient Rome in the Medjerda Valley; colorful Arab souks in the old 'medinas' and crumbling 'Casbas.' The family also spent five weeks in Italy and Laneiano in late August and September.

"I managed a week myself in mid-September. This was a gathering of the Sargiaemo elan during the annual 'festa' of the city of Lanciano, with the city gaily decorated and ablaze for three successive nights of music, feasting, dancing, processions, and fireworks."

Charlie's address is USAID/Tunis, c/o American Embassy, Tunis, Tunisia.

ALBERT WALTER TOLMAN '88

Albert W. Tolman, Bowdoin's senior alumnus in point of age and also in point of class, died on March 5, 1965, in Portland at the age of 98. He was a familiar figure at Bowdoin Commencements, leading the procession in recent years, often in company with Dr. Charles Lincoln '91. Last June, when he could not be present, he sent President Coles a letter which read as follows: "Heartfelt greetings from the Class of 1888 to all the Classes and particularly the Class of 1964. Sincere congratulations to President Coles and to the Faculty for the completion of another year of enduring accomplishment. May Bowdoin's torch of knowledge continue to light the way for future generations."

Born in Rockport on November 29, 1866, Mr. Tolman prepared for college at Portland High School and following his graduation from Bowdoin studied at Harvard College, from which he received a second A.B. degree in 1889. Two years later he earned a master of arts degree at Bowdoin. He taught Greek, rhetoric, elocution, and English at the College from 1889 until 1894 and spent the fall of 1895 studying at Andover Theological Seminary. He was admitted to the bar in 1899 and practiced law in Portland until 1912, when his interest in writing crowded out his interest in law. He was the author of the Jim Spurling series of books for boys and during a period of thirty-five years sold some 700 stories and articles to fifty or more publications, including Boys' Life, The American Boy, The Boy's Magazine, The Country Gentleman, and Youth's Companion. He also helped edit a ten-volume series on vocations under the direction of Bowdoin President William DeWitt Hyde.

Mr. Tolman's formula for longevity was exercise. During most of his lifetime he took a long walk each day and also did setting-up exercises. He carried a notebook with him and was always jotting down ideas for stories. Surviving are two sons, Albert W. Tolman, Jr. '25 of Houston, Texas, and Edward M. Tolman '27 of New York City; three grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Psi Upsilon Fraternities.

HUGH MACCALLUM '97

Hugh MacCallum, a retired Congregational minister, died in Winter Haven, Fla., on February 23, 1965, at the age of 93. Born on April 7, 1871, in Barrhead, Scotland, he studied at Bangor Theological Seminary before entering Bowdoin and also studied at the Yale Divinity School in 1900. Following his graduation from Bowdoin magna cum laude in 1897, he was ordained into the ministry in Waldoboro, where he was for two years pastor of the old North Church. He then served as a minister in Derby, Conn., for six years; in Walpole, Mass., for four years; and in Simsbury, Conn., at the First Church of Christ, Congregational, for ten years. In 1920 he accepted a call to the First Congregational Church of Everett, Mass., where he remained until being named Pastor Emeritus in 1938.

A member of the Masons for sixty-seven years and also a member of the Pilgrim Club and the Fortnightly Club in Boston, Mr. MacCallum had for many years been spending the winter months in Florida and the summer months in Needham, Mass. He is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Jessie Beckwith of New London, Conn., Mrs. Janet Jordan of Manchester, Mass., Mrs. Ruth Blanchard of Needham, and Mrs. Margaret Nutt of Mendham, N. J.; and nine grandchildren. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa at Bowdoin.

SUMNER SEWALL Honorary 1944

Sumner Sewall, former Governor of Maine and a pioneer in commercial aviation, died suddenly at his home in Bath on January 25, 1965. Born in that city on June 17, 1897, he prepared for college at the Westminster School in Connecticut and studied at both Harvard and Yale. During World War I he was a lieutenant in the Army Air Corps and, as a pilot with the 95th Pursuit Squadron, was awarded two Distinguished Service Crosses, the Croix de Guerre, the French Legion of Honor, and the Belgian Order of the Crown. In 1920 he helped organize Colonial Air Transport, a pioneer Boston-New York airline. As its General Traffic Manager he sold this country's first commercial air passenger ticket and obtained the first air mail contract.

Mr. Sewall was a Director of United Airlines from 1933 to 1945. He was elected to the Maine House of Representatives in 1934 and to the Maine State Senate in 1936. He served for two terms as President of the Senate and in 1940 was elected Governor of Maine, an office which he held for four years. In 1945 he became President of American Overseas Airlines. In 1946-47 he served as Military Governor for Wuertemberg-Baden, one of the three states in the American Zone of Germany following World War II. In recent years he had devoted himself to business affairs, primarily the presidency of the Bath National Bank.

Mr. Sewall held honorary degrees from Bowdoin, Colby, the University of Maine, and Westminster. The citation for his Bowdoin Doctor of Laws degree, conferred on June 24, 1944, said, in part, ". . . by family and character the best that Maine produces, now in the last months of a brilliant administration in which he displayed leadership of a high quality; courageous advocate of international cooperation and insisting in season and out of season that this nation must play its proper part in world affairs. . . ." He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ellena Evans Sewall, whom he married on March 16, 1929, in Bath; two daughters, Mrs. William Mackey of Grosse Pointe, Mich., and Mrs. Robert Charles of Washington, D. C.; two sons, Nicholas S. Sewall of Bath and David Sewall '56, also of Bath; and two sisters, Mrs. John K. Jayne of New Canaan, Conn., and Mrs. Fred Hector of Fargo, N. D. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity at Yale.

Admissions and Testing

BEGINNING NEXT FALL Bowdoin will drop the Writing Sample and require three College Board Achievement tests for entrance. The decision to do so has been arrived at reluctantly in the face of the growing number of applicants and the diversity of schools and programs now reviewed for consideration each year by the admissions staff.

While stiffening requirements for admission testing, the College has tried to make them as liberal as possible in the framework of the requirement. The Writing Sample may be substituted for one Achievement test; a student who scores over 600 on a test (SAT or Achievement) is exempt from further testing in that area; Bowdoin will accept College Board tests for admission whenever taken, not just in the senior year. Actually, the Admissions Office now receives Achievement tests from about 80% of its candidates, since most of the colleges with which Bowdoin has common candidates require them. Candidates who have questions about required tests should write or call the Director of Admissions.

Since many alumni counsel prospective candidates for Bowdoin, we are printing the complete text of the Secondary School letter which will be sent to guidance counselors across the country. Three principles should be noted:

1. Achievement tests should present a balanced picture of the candidate's strengths and weaknesses, not just his strengths;

2. testing should be taken at the end of his course work, not a year or two later (in the case of biology, this could be as early as the sophomore year);

3. test scores over 600 bring automatic exemption at Bowdoin from further testing in that area.

Implied but not explicitly stated is the requirement for Early Decision candidates to take the SAT and three Achievement tests by the end of their junior year — a suggested pattern of testing is March SAT and May Achievement tests to avoid six hours of testing in May. A word of general advice: because of the heterogeneous requirements by colleges for differing combinations of tests with varying deadlines, candidates and parents are too frequently at sea about structuring tests to cover all admission possibilities, including those which develop after test deadlines. The following pattern is used by many schools: Junior year, March SAT and May Achievement; Senior Year, December SAT and Writing Sample and January Achievement tests.

Given below is the text of the Secondary School letter:

To Our Secondary School Colleagues:

Beginning next year Bowdoin will require three College Entrance Examination Board Achievement tests in addition to the Scholastic Aptitude test for admission. The Achievement test requirement replaces the Writing Sample, although a candidate may substitute the Writing Sample for one of the Achievement tests (preferably English) if he wishes.

Since we join in the rising tide of concern over the proliferation of testing required of secondary school students, we feel some explanation of our decision is necessary. We feel there are four major reasons why we must require Achievement tests:

(1) as secondary school programs become more diverse in content and structure (cf: tracks, honors, accelerated, gifted, X, advanced placement), we need an objective measure of course content beyond the transcript;

(2) as Bowdoin applicants come from a wider geographic area and from schools of varying excellence with which we have had little or no previous experience, we need an additional measure of academic performance beyond the transcript;

(3) as we seek applicants from a wider economic and social base, we need an additional objective measure of performance beyond the Scholastic Aptitude test;

(4) as the class ranks and CEEB SAT results of our applicants become more homogeneous (in the Class of 1968, 92.7% ranked in the upper 20% of their high school class; over 50% had 600+ SAT's), we need an additional objective measure to differentiate among candidates.

We hope you feel that these reasons are valid; we recognize the danger inherent in having one test serve a variety of purposes, and we wish to stress that the Achievement tests will be only one criterion of admission. As always, we will continue to put major importance on the candidate's academic record in high school and the relationship between this and his ability as shown by available standard test information, including the SAT's. We anticipate that the primary use of the Achievement tests will be to help interpret the transcript.

In counseling candidates about Achievement tests, we hope guidance counselors will not fall into the trap of recommending only those tests which measure the candidate's areas of strength. We prefer a candidate to present a balanced set of tests, including English, a foreign language, and either mathematics, natural science, or a social science, depending on his intended college study.

We would particularly like to emphasize the desirability of taking the proper Achievement tests at the termination of the course of study rather than in the senior year after a one or two year lapse. In order to encourage such testing, Bowdoin will accept Achievement tests for admission whenever taken in secondary school and will automatically exempt students presenting Achievement test or junior SAT scores of over 600 from further CEEB testing in their senior year.

To summarize:

(1) beginning in September, 1965, candidates for admission to Bowdoin should present the CEEB SAT and three Achievement tests (preferably English, a foreign language, and either mathematics, a natural science, or a social science);

(2) the Writing Sample may be substituted for one Achievement test, preferably English;

(3) Achievement tests taken at the termination of a course at any point in secondary school will be accepted for admission;

(4) a candidate presenting CEEB Achievement or junior SAT test scores over 600 is exempt from further testing.

"Whose Inner Eye Is Always on a Distant Peak"

Members of the faculty and staff gathered in the Moulton Union Lounge on May 11 at a special coffee hour in honor of Leroy D. Cross, who will retire at the end of June after 23 years of service as the Faculty Secretary. In President Coles' words, "This is a family gathering to honor a man who has done us honor for many years."

In behalf of Mr. Cross's Bowdoin friends, President Coles presented to him a Japanese print of Fujiyama, inscribed as follows: "To Leroy Dudley Cross, whose inner eye is always on a distant peak." He also received a group of books on mountaineering, a hobby at which he has become an expert, and a gift with which to make additions to his extensive collection of literature on that subject.

Although the Faculty Secretary is retiring as Faculty Secretary, he plans to continue as a part-time book dealer, specializing in volumes on mountaineering. He will also continue his work as Assistant Editor of The New England Quarterly and as Treasurer of the First Parish and the First Parish Church in Brunswick.

Speaking for himself, his two Bowdoin brothers, and his University of Maine sister — as well as for many other alumni who have come to know the Faculty Secretary through the years — the Editor pays this brief tribute to his father for a lifetime of hard work well done and for a notable example of setting the welfare of others ahead of his own.

Publicly Held Corporations

by Charles T. Ireland, Jr. '42

President of the Alleghany Corporation

WHAT I PROPOSE TO DISCUSS with you this evening under what you will shortly see to be the totally misleading caption of "Publicly Held Corporations" is one of the most bitterly attacked and defended areas of American life: BIG BUSINESS.

By "BIG BUSINESS" I refer to those several hundred major corporations which, in aggregate, own two-thirds of the industrial capacity of the United States, and which, therefore, constitute its main supply line, whose affairs are theoretically run by imposing boards of directors duly elected by millions of stockholders, and whose record of contribution to our national munificence has been, on balance, magnificent.

The record of achievement to which I refer would appear to be beyond debate: consistently rising profits of a magnitude clearly confounding the Marxists; a high rate of capital formation, a substantial part of which is internally generated; a rising curve of man hour productivity; a production record embracing victories in two major wars and a high state of readiness in the cold war, even while creating an endless abundance of consumer products; and a Herculean capacity to finance its partner BIG GOVERNMENT through taxation without materially stifling economic movement or decision-making throughout the complex.

These factors are the plus side. On the other hand, the system is criticized, among other things, for imperfect distribution of final product, for definite monopolistic trends even while calling itself "people's capitalism," for crushing small business, for being unable — fully — to control periodic swings of prosperity and depression, and perhaps, finally, for being simply too big.

The system and the executives that inhabit it have never wanted for either praise or condemnation, depending on the particular public emotional cycle of the time. In the 1870's a Reverend Mr. McClintock, in a burst of prose whose warmth was exceeded only by its inaccuracy, prayed that the late Daniel Drew of Erie fame "... may long be spared to enjoy the fruits of his industry, and to share in advancing the kingdom of Christ on earth, not merely by his Christian use of the large wealth of which God has made him steward, but also ... by his living example of peaceful but active piety." Of course, by the turn of the century the Titans of the system were held in a more realistic light, then ascended to preposterous adulation in the twenties, descended into an abyss in the thirties; but since the war and in different form — the Titans qua Titans are no longer with us — it would appear that the heads of the system, in all their comparative anonymity, are held in a kind of respectful curiosity by the public — which is perhaps the healthiest possible angle of vision.

THIS BRILLIANTLY SUCCESSFUL BUT CONTROVERSIAL big-business economic system has been criticized for bearing within itself a host of inconsistencies, as indeed it does. In the first place, the system usually describes itself in terms which are archaic. (1) The system is said to be a capitalistic one based on private property and individual initiative, with the supporting capital the fruit of individual savings. Actually, in traditional terms, the system is somewhere between capitalism and socialism, industrial property is about as private as a jeep in a divisional motor pool, and individual personal savings play no substantial direct role in capital accumulation. (2) The system generally decries the presence of BIG GOVERNMENT (while existing in part on Government contracts) and BIG LABOR, even though it could not successfully exist in present form without both — nor they, without BIG BUSINESS. (3) The Wall Street community and the Stock Exchange will conduct a survey of stockholders, and after an appropriate amount of expense, borne in part by the corporations they are surveying, will announce triumphantly that there are now several million more stockholders or "owners" of American business than there used to be; and the public relations men swing fulsomely into rapturous phrases about people's capitalism. The point is that while it is fine for several reasons to have more and more Americans holding a financial interest in a major sector of their economy, this status should in no way be confused with ownership as the term is commonly understood. To own something is to have some degree of control over it. Except in rare instances, about 12 out of 3,000 possibilities in a given year, ownership of a stock interest gives the small stockholder no meaningful voice whatsoever in "his" corporation. (4) The system refers to itself as a free enterprise system, the connotation being that prices for products are determined by the free action of the marketplace. Actually, administered prices in big business are the method of the modern era, and while competition can be fierce within industries, the competition is not so much in terms of price as in terms of packaging, advertising, and general promotion. (5) The mores and patterns within the managerial ranks of the big corporations are not consistent. At the top or near the top of the ladder the competition is Machiavellian, the responsibilities are clearly defined and heavy, the pressures are ulcerous, and the necessity for being right is vital. In the middle and lower managerial ranks the influence of management consultants, industrial psychologists, personnel directors with pseudo-sociological backgrounds, and a host of other assorted barnacles is strongly felt in the general philosophy that harmony, not strife, is the goal, that the committee approach is the road to right decisions without individual pressures being necessary or desirable, and that the "best" manager is the one who terminates his concern with company affairs at five o'clock and repairs elsewhere — home perhaps — to enjoy the good and well-rounded life. This is a philosophy of management which, were it ever to prevail universally, would lead only to stagnation and eventually an atmosphere of genteel mediocrity.

In the middle and lower managerial ranks the influence of management consultants, industrial psychologists, personnel directors with pseudo-sociological backgrounds, and a host of other assorted barnacles is strongly felt in the general philosophy that harmony, not strife, is the goal, that the committee approach is the road to right decisions without individual pressures being necessary or desirable, and that the "best" manager is the one who terminates his concern with company affairs at five o'clock and repairs elsewhere — home perhaps — to enjoy the good and well rounded life.

Several of these topics I have touched on could obviously stand much more fulsome treatment than I can give them tonight and than you might want me to give. I think, though, that it is important for each of us, whether or not a member of the big-business community or ever intending to become such, to know as much as possible about this fascinating and vital sector of our national life, having as it does the power, in part, to direct all of our lives in one way or another with both national and international ramifications. I suggest too, and more specifically, that for those of you who are planning to join BIG BUSINESS soon, it is particularly important throughout your entire career for you to develop as much knowledge as possible, not just about your own company but about the entire business sector. Read the books about business life by both defenders and attackers; keep alert to the big picture, if you will, and the social and political directions in which BIG BUSINESS and its partners BIG GOVERNMENT and BIG LABOR are moving. It will be difficult for you to do this in your early years, beset as you will be by the immediate practical problems, but if you don't start early, the odds are you will never start, and as you will see in a moment, it is important that you do so because you are desperately needed as eventual leaders.

PERHAPS THE MOST CENTRAL AND IMPORTANT PROBLEM of BIG BUSINESS today, and one that seems destined to become even more critical, is the matter of CONTROL, that is, who has the power to control BIG BUSINESS in America? What kinds of persons or institutions have the power, whether or not it is used, to call the turn on major national economic and business decisions affecting the several hundred major "publicly-held" American corporations that constitute BIG BUSINESS? I am not now addressing myself to the larger overall matter of the management of the American machine by a loose, uneasy, but workable alliance of BIG GOVERNMENT, BIG BUSINESS, and BIG LABOR. That would be a tremendous topic well beyond the scope of these remarks. Rather, I am here confining myself to the smaller but still vital topic of control within the private sector itself. It is "vital" because the way in which this control is exercised and by whom has a decided bearing on the resolution of other intriguing business topics I have touched upon, and has a direct bearing on the existences of us all.

Very roughly speaking, and with apologies to economists or economic historians present, I suggest that from the middle of the nineteenth century until, let us say, the late 1920's it was not difficult to determine who had the power of control over many of our major corporate entities. (We are all aware, I am sure, of the familiar history of THE FOUNDER who, in due course, incorporated his enterprise but who, perhaps with a very few associates, still maintained absolute dominion or control over his business, now simply enshrouded in a new legal form; and how with the passage of time and the death of the Founder, more and more stockholders joined the enterprise, but where descendants of the Founder, although now owning less than a majority of the stock, still maintained what we call "working control" through an elaborate network of interrelationships with management (i.e., the officers of the corporation), the investment banking community, and others — particularly where all other stockholders were scattered.)

But in general, commencing in the late twenties and carrying through to date, the pattern has changed to what

Charles T. Ireland, Jr. '42 — or Chick Ireland as he was known in college and continues to be known — has for the past four years been President of the Alleghany Corporation, of which he had previously been Executive Vice President. He was Secretary of the New York Central Railroad Company from 1954 until 1959 and was also an officer or director of more than 55 subsidiary and affiliated companies of the New York Central.

A summa cum laude graduate in May of 1942, Mr. Ireland was captain of the varsity tennis team, Maine state singles champion in that sport, Editor of the Orient, Editor of the Bugle, and a member of the Student Council. During World War II he was a captain in the Marine Corps and saw action at Saipan, Tinian, Iwo Jima, and Roi Namur. He was awarded the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, the Navy Cross, and the Purple Heart.

In 1948 Mr. Ireland was graduated from Yale University Law School. After three years with the New York law firm of White and Case, he was named Counsel of Alleghany — at the age of 30. Earlier this year he was elected Chairman of the Executive Committee of Investors Diversified Services, Inc., which is controlled by the Alleghany Corporation.

A member of the Bowdoin Board of Overseers since 1961, Mr. Ireland delivered this talk on "Publicly Held Corporations" at the Alumni Council's annual dinner for members of the graduating class, held at the Senior Center on March 1.

A better guarantee is to do all possible to see to it that the very best available manpower America can produce winds up in the managerial positions of power from which critical decisions are routinely made. These should be men of an extremely broad gauge, nurtured in the humanist tradition, seasoned in the tradition of responsive balanced judgments. For these roles I am looking to you as the very best possible material to be found anywhere.

All through your business careers — those of you who choose them — you will be locked in combat with the TECHNOCRATS. If not exactly a struggle between light and darkness, it is at least one between light and myopia — and all of us will be affected by the result. It is no less than critical who the winner shall be! My best wishes to you!

we call "management control"; that is, with death and inheritance taxes the descendants of the Founder and their descendants no longer own enough stock to direct the affairs of the company, but are pretty much in the same status as all other widely scattered stockholders who have no more practical control over management than those of us sitting here have over the Kremlin. The legal myth continues, of course, that the stockholders elect a Board of Directors and the Directors elect the officers, that is, management, but as a practical matter the management, in the absence of extremely well-financed and organized opposition, is really in control of itself. This is what I meant earlier when I indicated that the formal title of these remarks, "Publicly Held Corporations," is quite misleading.

BUT AN EVEN NEWER PATTERN OF CONTROL has begun to emerge in the past few years in what I shall call "Fiduciary Control." This is the control of major corporations that the great life insurance companies, the pension trusts, and the mutual funds are more and more capable of exercising, if they so chose — which by and large and up until now they have declined to do.

This new condition is the result of several factors. (1) Equity financing, that is, the issuance of common stock by major corporations for purposes of raising capital funds, is slowly drying up; capital expansion is now more customarily financed from retained earnings. Therefore, although there are more and more small stockholders in America (the people's capitalism, as the Stock Exchanges are so fond of proclaiming), there is less and less stock for them to own. (2) Since the war, with a steadily rising level of prosperity among the populace, the funds available for investment by insurance companies, pension trusts, and mutual funds have swollen to enormous proportions and must be invested somewhere. Since these are, by and large, relatively conservative institutions, their investments tend in the main to be made in the blue chip sector of the American economy, i.e., the several hundred major "publicly held" corporations holding more than two-thirds of industrial America to which I have been referring as BIG BUSINESS. (3) The interrelationship of these independently initiated phenomena means, in horrendous oversimplification, that relatively obscure individuals — functionaries of the insurance companies, pension funds, and mutual funds, who are themselves the management of entities in which they own nothing — have the capability within the private sector of enforcing decisions of far-reaching consequence to all, and without the slightest necessity of deferring to the wishes — even if such could be ascertained — of the millions of alleged owners of American BIG BUSINESS. Again, this is why the phrase "publicly held" corporations is, in its full suggested traditional connotation, so misleading.

But do not misunderstand me. I am not objecting to concentration of control per se. In fact, operating as we are — a large unit productive system — the concentration of decision-making power, while the system disgorges enormous wealth to virtually all, is perhaps, in whatever form, inevitable. Certainly it is if the counterpart companions of BIG BUSINESS are to be BIG GOVERNMENT and BIG LABOR.

But I am concerned — and we should all be concerned — about who controls, or what standards control, the controllers. That is, if the alleged owners of American business have virtually no direct voice in its affairs, what guarantees have we that these nameless, faceless, decision-making functionaries, whether they be management of the operating corporations themselves or managers of the entities having the ability to control the operating corporations, will take their stands consistent with the public interest, as the public sees such interest to be within the democratic framework?

At the moment there are only two guarantees, if you want to call them that. It is said, even by markedly liberal students of the system, that there exists in America today a so-called public consensus — a loose code of publicly accepted standards of business mores — which if violated would bring corrective action by BIG GOVERNMENT. That is, for a wild, extreme example, if AT&T began to market in volume secrets garnered from wiretapping, so goes the theory, public consensus would crystalize into outraged public opinion which would bring swift corrective action by BIG GOVERNMENT. But, less the fanciful circumstances of this example, this reliance is likely to be slow, uneven, and uncertain in result.

A better guarantee is to do all possible to see to it that the very best available manpower America can produce winds up in the managerial positions of power from which critical decisions are routinely made. These should be men of an extremely broad gauge, nurtured in the humanist tradition, seasoned in the tradition of responsive balanced judgments. For these roles I am looking to you as the very best possible material to be found anywhere.

BUT IF YOU THINK, as you might logically do, that you will routinely inherit the kingdom of economic heaven, you are mistaken! Commencement speeches of Board Chairmen and Presidents to the contrary notwithstanding, you are in severe competition with the technicians, i.e., the engineers of all stripes, the business school graduates, the specialists in transportation, the men with "practical" training. This may strike you as a surprising opinion in the light of the aforesaid commencement prose, but too often such oratory has illegitimate origins.

All through your business careers — those of you who choose them — you will be locked in combat with the TECHNOCRATS. If not exactly a struggle between light and darkness, it is at least one between light and myopia — and all of us will be affected by the result. It is no less than critical who the winner shall be! My best wishes to you!

ROTC Cadet Major Jim Lister '65 and Librarian Richard Harwell with the sword which Chamberlain carried during the Civil War and a bugle of the 20th Maine Regiment.

On April 12 the College observed the 100th anniversary of General Joshua L. Chamberlain's receipt of the formal surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia at Appomattox. The highlight was a public lecture by Louis D. Rubin, Jr., Professor of English at Hollins College and a native of Charleston, S. C., who spoke on the subject "Honor Answering Honor" — a phrase used by Chamberlain to describe the dramatic exchange of salutes at Appomattox between himself and General John B. Gordon of the Confederate forces.

Professor Rubin told the Pickard Theater audience that the Civil War Centennial celebration fizzled out because that war "is not over yet." The observance should have been the occasion for "a serious and concerted inquiry into the meaning of our country's past." Instead, he said, it became "a gaudy pageant aimed at the tourist trade, and with just enough serious historical inquiry involved to maintain appearances."

To enjoy re-enacting the battles of the Civil War, he continued, "one has to perform for oneself a feat in historical relativism. One has to say, and believe, that though the cause for which the South fought was wrong, in that time and place it did not seem wrong, and therefore one need not think of the race issue in connection with the Civil War.

"Alas, such a mental equation has, for many of us, become increasingly difficult. For we see, operating in the nation today, the same attitudes, the same approximate lineup of forces, that produced the Civil War in the 1860's. And if one has moral convictions of justice and injustice concerning the present difficulties, it is extremely difficult not to think of them when contemplating the conflict of 100 years ago. Thus one's reaction is likely to be that of shying away from the Centennial, and from the historical investigation of the military campaigns of the Civil War."

Among the special guests at the observance were Miss Eleanor Allen of Washington, D. C., a granddaughter of General Chamberlain, and Mrs. L. Winfield Smith of Brunswick, who was Chamberlain's secretary in his later years. Another granddaughter, Miss Rosamond Allen of St. Petersburg, Fla., was unable to be present.

In connection with the centennial observance, Librarian Richard Harwell supervised preparation of a special exhibition of memorabilia relating to Chamberlain, a graduate of Bowdoin in 1852 and after the Civil War President of the College for 12 years. Included were two gifts from Emery W. Booker of Brunswick — a bust of the General and the huge First Division flag which was flying at Appomattox.

Chamberlain's sword, epaulets, and gauntlets and the bugle of his 20th Maine Regiment were all on loan from Captain and Mrs. David L. Patten of South Duxbury, Mass. Captain Patten is a great great grandson of General Alexander Campbell of Cherryfield, one of the original Overseers of the College.

In connection with the April 12 observance, Mr. Harwell edited a pamphlet entitled "Honor Answering Honor," in which he wrote, "It was General Chamberlain who, by a single, simple gesture of dignity and compassion, gave character and meaning to the ceremonies of formal surrender on April 12, who made them, not anticlimax, but valediction."

Included in the pamphlet was a previously unpublished letter written by Chamberlain to his sister, Sarah, on the day following the surrender.

Summer Reading for Sub-Freshmen

A three-man committee of the Faculty, made up of members of the English, Sociology, and Biology Departments, has selected the following books for the summer reading program for members of the Class of 1969, who will enter Bowdoin in the fall: The Other America by Michael Harrington, Sister Carrie by Theodore Dreiser, and King Solomon's Ring by Konrad Z. Lorenz. Some of the readers of the ALUMNUS might like to acquire these books for their own summer reading, although none of you will have to discuss them at a fraternity house with faculty advisers and upperclassmen in the few days preceding the first classes of the fall semester!

Renovation of Winthrop Completed

Early in April the residents of Maine Hall moved into Winthrop Ends, the first of the three oldest dormitories to be remodeled. The renovation was started last August when workmen of the George A. Fuller Company removed the entire inner structure, leaving only the original red brick walls and the roof. Small-paned windows, like those of Longfellow's day, were installed, and the rooms have white shutters similar to the ones he used. The building's exterior was restored to its original appearance, as designed by Samuel Melcher in 1822, but the interior is as modern in atmosphere as the Senior Center.

The living area is set up as two-room two-man suites, with one room for study and the other for sleeping quarters. Study desks, chairs, and a combination lounge chair-day bed make up the furnishings in the study rooms, and built-in dressers and closet space are features of the bedrooms. There are reception rooms located on the first floor of each End; radiators with individual heat control; a master heat control for the entire building, based on outside weather conditions; fire resistant doors on all rooms; tile floors; and circular recessed ceiling lights.

Winthrop is Bowdoin's second oldest dormitory, Maine Hall having been built in 1808. In its early years it was called New College, but it was renamed in the 1840's for John Winthrop, the first Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. As was true of the other dormitories in Bowdoin's early years, it was divided in the middle by a fire wall, creating for all practical purposes two buildings under one roof. A student lived in either the North End or the South End.

In the early days of the Ends, students developed loyalties to the sections in which they lived. Lively rivalries arose between opposite Ends of a dormitory, and also among the Ends of different dormitories. Indeed the Ends of Winthrop once earned the nicknames "Sodom and Gomorrah."

In newly renovated Winthrop, the Ends continue as separate units. Seven men, including a student proctor, live on the first floor, and eight men occupy each of the three upper floors in each End. The building has living space for a total of 62 students.

Work-Study Program

Some 25 undergraduates are employed this spring under the Work-Study Program of the Federal Economic Opportunity Act. They are working on 16 separate projects involving departments of the College. All of the jobs are directly related to the work of the College, but they are supplementary to regular operations as planned and budgeted for the current year.

The program of Work-Study employment is also supplementary to Bowdoin's regular financial aid program, which this year involves about $300,000 in direct grants; more than $10,000 in long-term loans, including those made under the National Defense Education Act; and some $75,000 in campus employment. More than one-third of the student body is involved in this regular program.

Merit Scholars

Seven high school seniors in six different states have earned Bowdoin College Merit Scholarships in a nationwide competition, and two other members of the incoming Class of 1969 have been awarded National Merit Scholarships. All nine will enter the College next fall.

The Bowdoin College Merit Scholars are Wayne K. Austin of Portland, Portland High School; Timothy O. Devlin of Pasadena, Calif., Pasadena High School; Bruce S. Griffin of Haverhill, Mass., Haverhill High School; Frederick G. Lieb, Jr. of Brandenburg, Ky., St. Andrew's School, St. Andrew's, Tenn.; Allan V. Luster of Chicago, Ill., Hyde Park High School; William K. Moberg of Gorham, Gorham High School; and Douglas A. Pearce of Snyder, N. Y., Amherst Central High School.

The National Merit Scholars are Michael J. Guignard of Biddeford, St. Louis High School; and John C. Lawlor of Dover, N. H., St. Thomas Aquinas High School.

These nine men are among a record total of 1,900 high school seniors who survived a competition which started last year among 750,000 students in more than 17,000 secondary schools.

Another NSF Summer Grant

With the support of a $72,630 grant from the National Science Foundation, the College will sponsor, from June 22 to August 12, a summer mathematics seminar of major importance for some 60 graduate and postgraduate students. The program is an "Advanced Science Seminar in Homological Algebra." It will be the first seminar of its type in the country on homological algebra, which is becoming increasingly important in abstract algebra, topology, and other fields.

Professor Dan E. Christie '37, Chairman of the Mathematics Department, will be Director of the Seminar, which had its origin in discussions among members of the Department, more than half of whom are specialists in algebra. Nearly 50 predoctoral students with one or more years of graduate work in mathematics and at least 12 postdoctoral mathematicians will take part in the Seminar.

The post-Ph.D.'s will serve as both students and teachers, offering review and work sessions for the graduate students and taking part in a research colloquium in homological algebra and its applications. In the colloquium they will work as an advanced research team and hear presentations by some of the country's most noted algebraists.

Three New Emeritus Overseers

Three members of the Board of Overseers have retired as active members and have been elected to Emeritus standing. They are Neal W. Allen '07 of Portland, Dr. Rufus E. Stetson '08 of Damariscotta, and Chester G. Abbott '13 of Falmouth. Mr. Allen, an Overseer since 1941, is President of F. O. Bailey Company and has three Bowdoin sons and one straight-A grandson, Thomas H. Allen '67. Dr. Stetson, an Overseer since 1942, was for 30 years a physician and surgeon in New York City, returning to Maine and his native Damariscotta in 1951. He has two Bowdoin sons and one Bowdoin grandson, William W. Stetson, Jr. '66. Mr. Abbott was elected to the Board of Overseers in 1944 and was President of the Board from 1957 to 1961. He is Chairman of the Executive Committee of the First National Bank of Portland, of which he was President from 1950 to 1960. In 1945 he received Bowdoin's Alumni Service Award.

Wilbert Snow Wins New Award

On April 24 Wilbert Snow '07 became the first recipient of the Distinguished Bowdoin Educator Award, presented at the annual campus meeting of the Bow-doin Teachers' Club. Established by the Alumni Council, the Award consists of a framed citation and a prize of $500. All Bowdoin alumni in any area of education are eligible except those working at the College.

Professor Snow taught English at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., from 1921 until 1952. Before 1921 he taught at New York University, Bowdoin, Williams, the University of Utah, Indiana, and Reed and also for a year was Reindeer Agent and a teacher of Eskimos in Alaska. He was recently re-elected Chairman of the Middletown Town District School Board, on which he has served for more than 25 years. In 1955 Middletown named a new elementary school in his honor. Lieutenant Governor of Connecticut for three years, he was also for two weeks, between administrations, Governor of that state. He is the author of many books of poetry and various articles filled with the flavor of Maine.

A Castle Conference

Professor James M. Moulton of the Biology Department is one of 15 leading scientists from throughout the world who will gather at a 900-year-old castle, Burg Warttenstein, in Austria on June 13 for nine days of exchanging ideas and information. The 15 men, all of whom are leaders in fields involving animal communication, will attempt to extend man's understanding of how insects, fish, amphibians, reptiles, birds, and mammals exchange information.

The meeting is one of several sponsored this year by the Wenner-Gren

Foundation for Anthropological Research. Each of the scientists at the castle will have read material supplied by the other 14 before going to the meeting. Professor Moulton will deliver a paper entitled "Some Problems in Animal Communication: Ears, Directional Sensitivity, and Acoustical Behavior of Fishes." He has done research in the waters off the Bahamas, around Bermuda, and near Australia. One of his most recent trips was as a member of the scientific crew aboard Atlantis II, an ocean research ship of the Woods Hole (Mass.) Oceanographic Institution. On a 35-day trip that covered some 5,000 miles, he and 14 other scientists investigated plankton and fish population in the North Atlantic to determine the "faunal zones," areas of dense animal life. He has been a member of the Bowdoin Faculty since 1952.

Seeing America—from Garage to Garage

by David H. Leake

A bailing-wire auto with a rag-tag engine has brought comedy, near-tragedy, and an intimate glimpse of America to seven foreign students at Bowdoin.

The car is "SUBU," a sickly 1959 station wagon with the last four letters of the name "Suburban" missing from its rear fender. "SUBU" has traveled 85,000 miles, has collected its share of dents and scratches, and has managed recently to survive the loss of one valve and a piece of piston.

"We know more garage dealers in the United States than we do in our own countries," says one of the owners, Marius J. Jitta of Wassenaar, Holland. And the others sadly agree.

With great temerity and a lot of luck, they have ridden "SUBU" safely to garages in all parts of New England, New York City, and Washington, D. C.

On their most recent trip — deep into Canada — "SUBU" developed the valve and piston problem, and if it hadn't been for fantastic good fortune, the travelers might have had to hitchhike home.

According to her registration — "SUBU" is a cantankerous female! — the car belongs to Sten Gustaf Luthman of Stockholm, Sweden. But in actuality her battered engine and assorted parts are the property of six of the 12 Bowdoin Plan students whom the College and her fraternities are sponsoring this year.

In addition to Jitta and Luthman, "SUBU" has been worried over and nursed back to health by Daniel Portmann of Lucerne, Switzerland; Johan F. Sudmann of Aasane, Norway; and two other residents of Sweden, Bo Erik L. Hedlund of Malmo, and Nils-Arne Holmlid of Lysekil.

The nearly disastrous junket to Canada was made during Bowdoin's "break" between the end of final exams and the beginning of the second semester. The "paper owner" of the car — Luthman — decided to stay behind, so he was replaced by Hiromi Haruki, another Bowdoin Plan student, from Kyoto, Japan.

They began the northerly trip by heading south — to Boston, Mass. — then northwest, to Rochester, N. Y., and entered Canada at Niagara Falls.

During the early part of the trek they had only the normal side trips for minor repairs on the erratic "SUBU." Outside Boston, the luggage rack came loose. In Rochester, "SUBU" became temperamental and refused to start for nearly two hours.

Niagara, Portmann said, was "darn cold," even by Swiss standards. And in Toronto they had to take "SUBU's" battery to bed with them to protect it from the weather.

"On Sunday, the fourth day of the trip, we left Toronto on the Queen Elizabeth Highway," Portmann said, "heading for Montreal. Jitta said some friends his family hadn't seen in five years lived in Whitby, a town along the way, and we debated stopping to see them."

"If we didn't stop, we might make up some valuable time, but it wouldn't be right to take Marius so close to his friends without visiting."

They took the Whitby exit off the highway, and then their trouble began.

As the car slowed on the exit, the engine began to shake. "'SUBU' stops, engine stops, too," Jitta moaned.

Making their way gingerly, they reached the only garage in Whitby that had a Sunday mechanic and asked him to find the trouble. Jitta called the family friends to ask if they could take them in.

His friends drove to the garage with their car, picked up four of the Bowdoin Plan students, and left Portmann and Sudmann to look after "SUBU."

"Shortly after they left," Portmann said, "the mechanic removed the head of the engine. He looked at the valves, inspected the rings, and told us that all would have to be replaced. And the head had a crack to boot."

How much to fix it? "More than it's worth."

In their despair, the two sought to call the rest of the group to tell them the bad news — and then they realized they didn't have Jitta's friends' name, telephone number, or street address — in a town with some 7,500 inhabitants.

After wandering around Whitby a short time, they decided to stop at the next house, describe the friends' car, and ask where its owners lived. They walked up, rang the bell, and Jitta opened the door!

"We talked over our situation," Portmann said, "and decided the only thing to do was to turn "SUBU" over to a junk yard. But when we called the police department, they said we couldn't dispose of an American-registered car without the owner's signature — and Luthman was back at Bowdoin."

Their luck took over again. Jitta's friends had a friend who owned a garage, and they called him in to look at "SUBU." He diagnosed her illness as one bent valve and one chipped piston, and told them he could "patch her up" for $32.

"On Monday," Jitta said, "he drove all the way to Toronto for the parts, and began to work on 'SUBU' at 3 p.m. He finished at 8 p.m. We paid him and left right away, so we wouldn't have to impose on the family a second night."

"How lucky we were," Portmann reflected. "If 'SUBU' had decided to quit anywhere else, we might have been stuck with a broken-down car we couldn't get rid of, or a bill we couldn't have paid."

They chugged into Montreal at 5:30 a.m. in the middle of a blizzard. Portmann, who had driven all night, said the storm made travel "less than pleasant."

After a night's rest in Montreal, they finally managed to get back to Brunswick — a day after classes resumed. "SUBU" has been repaired once more, and once more they are low on resources.

Will they spend the rest of the school year touring within New England?

"Well, no," said Portmann. "We want to see as much of the United States as we can before we return to our homes this summer, so we're planning a trip to Florida during spring vacation."

And they will probably make it — if "SUBU" will only stay healthy.

The Return of "SUBU" — or "That tiger tail plugged up the gas line."

After the first writing and since the end of spring vacation, the question that has been on everyone's lips (everyone, that is, who inhabits my solitary corner of "Leake's Lair," in a hidden panel in the wall of Ham House) has been, "Did 'SUBU' make it to Florida and back again in one piece?"

I am happy to report exclusively to the ALUMNUS that she has been seen again in the Brunswick region.

Dan Portmann reports that Marius stayed behind this time, and Sten Luthman made the journey with the other five. "We had a real smooth trip down," Dan said. "We only had to replace a gasoline filter, for less than three dollars."

In Florida things got a little sticky — especially when they ran out of gasoline ("The gauge stopped working a while ago") in downtown Miami, and again when they followed a motorcycle policeman through an illegal U-turn — for which he promptly pinched them. He let them go later without a ticket.

Back home again, they figured the queasy car had travelled 4,800 miles on 21 quarts of oil, and averaged about 14 miles per gallon.

As for "SUBU" she refused to start for two days — she decided she had earned a rest.

Books With A Bowdoin Flavor

A. MORTEN LUND, Inside Passage to Alaska: J. B. Lippincott Company, 1965; pp. 128.

Whether you're a swashbuckling popcorn'n TV-chair sailor, or a serious salt with a 20-foot dreadnought you're itching to take on a cruise, you're bound to enjoy this sea story.

Inside Passage to Alaska is a 128-page adventure produced by Sports Illustrated as a narrative guide book for those who have the time (four weeks), the money ($681 for fuel alone), and the inclination to sail wild waters through scenery Morten Lund says "is unmatched on the North American continent."

For his trip, Sports Illustrated gave him an expense account, a 24-foot Norseman outboard hull, twin 60-hp. Mercury Outboard engines, and a request that he come back with a book. They also gave him Philip Portrey and Clyde Banks, "two of the best cruising men in the Northwest."

To rate this treatment, a fellow just has to be a pretty fair writer and a little knowledgeable, to boot. There's seldom a point in Inside Passage where Morten Lund is anything but.

Before you set course to read it, however — which is easily done in a one-night calm — try to obtain some accurate maps of the Washington-British Columbia-Alaska shore. If you don't, you'll be in for some frustrating moments.

My only dissatisfaction — and my only negative criticism — is with the maps used as accompanying illustrations. For that's all they are. They are very prettily hand-drawn (not by the author) outlines of the route, which lose the reader at many an interesting bend or side-trek, simply because many places don't appear.

As I've said, the book is an enjoyable one-nighter. The reasons for this are two: many pictures and large print. The photos, most of which are impressive, range from icebergs to whales, to man-mountain countryside. The type is apparently large enough to be read below-decks in a choppy sea (Let-t-t's seee, n-n-oo-ow. What-t-t d-d-did Lunddd d-do h-ce-re?).

Despite this, however, it's not a "See Spot run!" book, but enjoyable reading with some vivid descriptions of places along the way, as some random selections will attest:

"Here is heaven or what must pass for it among cruising yachtsmen: mile after mile of mountains climbing out of ocean, rock wall going six, seven, eight thousand feet straight up, finally, to snow caps. . . . Sometimes you sail in your own private labyrinth, sometimes run with a fishing boat or two, sometimes steam along with three or four cruising rigs — outboards, inboards, auxiliaries — bow waves splashing white against the walls of slate-gray rock on either side."

"In Seymour Narrows, bluffs of buff and orange to starboard were backed by sloping hills; behind the hills lay a white, dark-edged cloud. In our path, gulls hove on to the chop like a small white fleet; a black duck came spinning off the wave tops, barely clearing the crests."

"At first we went bucketing along through the neck-jerking, bottom-basting chop of the Johnstone at 25 mph. Then the waves got squarer and we came down to 15 or so, and then 10. The chop was building and the spray breaking back over the bow, spattering thick salt on the windshield. We came down to 7."

The book covers the trials, tribulations, and just plain fun to be had along the Passage, beginning when you go straight out of Seattle and around the San Juan Islands.

Lund's descriptions of places along Vancouver Island — including where to eat and sleep — and scenic spots throughout the route are enough to stir the sightseer's soul. But his sojourns with whales, sharks, and wind-whipped waters are something else again.

Get the book — for enjoyment, adventure, or the untamed sinews of your heart.

DAVID H. LEAKE

Author

MORTEN LUND '50 is now a free-lance writer and film director in New York City. After his graduation from Bowdoin he worked for Time and Show magazines, was a reporter for Sports Illustrated, and was general editor of Ski magazine.

Reviewer

DAVID H. LEAKE, a 1964 graduate of Boston University, is a writer in the News Services Office at the College. He is the author of "Seeing America — from Garage to Garage," which appears on pages 7 and 8 of this issue of the ALUMNUS. He is also "The Spirit of Bowdoin College" who wrote the entertaining "A Letter to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow" in the September, 1964, issue.

Alumni Clubs

BOSTON

The Bowdoin Club of Boston held its annual spring dinner meeting and ladies' night on Friday, March 19, at the Hotel 128 in Needham. President Richard Wiley '49 presided and welcomed alumni, wives, and other guests. He thanked committee chairmen and workers who had helped make the year so successful and reported that the Club's newsletter had increased both interest and dues receipts.

Alumni Council Member John Lawrence '37 reported on the Council's midwinter meeting. Upon his suggestion the gathering gave a warm round of applause to John Gazlay '34, a Past President of the Club and a prime mover in the revival of Bowdoin interest in the Boston area.

Mr. Lawrence also reported as Chairman of the Nominating Committee. The following were elected officers for 1965-66: Robert Forsberg '53, President; Robert Delaney '55, First Vice President; John Williams '42, Second Vice President; John Morrell '52, Alumni Council Representative; Richard Wiley '49, Past President; Dean Ridlon '57, Secretary; and Paul Revere, Jr. '53, Treasurer.

Elected for one-year terms as Directors were Richard Berry '45, David Conary '59, Edward Goon '49, Charles Hartshorn '41, Richard Johnstone '44, Barrett Nichols '54, Norman Nicholson '56, John O'Brien '55, Val Ringer '42, Gaynor Rutherford '36, Douglas Stenberg '56, John Lawrence '37, Neil Cooper '58, and David McGoldrick '53.

Mr. Wiley also voiced appreciation to Jack Gazlay and extended the Club's greetings to Overseer and Mrs. Everett Pope '41 and Alumni Secretary and Mrs. Peter Barnard '50.

The first speaker, Professor Robert Beckwith, Chairman of the Department of Music, spoke about musical activities at the College, including a new curriculum, an expanded concert series, the Bowdoin College Summer School of Music, the Bowdoin College Music Press, continued expansion of the music library, and the possibility of a special institute to honor an outstanding American composer.

The second speaker, Marvin Sadik, Director and Curator of the Museum of Art, outlined some of the exhibits that have been shown at the Bowdoin Museum in recent years: French Impressionists, Leonard Baskin, Baroque paintings, British India, and the Negro in American painting from 1710 to 1963. The catalogue from the Baskin exhibition has become a collector's item, and the catalogue from the Negro in American painting exhibition is being expanded into a book. Exhibits to come include the works of William Blake, Renaissance medals, and Winslow Homer at Prout's Neck. Mr. Sadik also reported receipt of a grant from the Ford Foundation to publish a catalogue of Bowdoin's Colonial collection.

The final speaker was President Coles, who observed that colleges may soon become patrons of music and art as they have become patrons of poetry. He mentioned three new books by members of the faculty and said that the new computing center is off to a good start, with Myron Curtis '58 returning to the campus in July to become its Director.

The new members of the faculty include vigorous and interested teachers. Fraternities are using the Amherst report to help improve their prospects for the future. The Senior Center Program has begun well. There will be summer programs in music and National Science Foundation Institutes, as well as Bowdoin's first Alumni College, to be held in August.

The President concluded his remarks with thanks to Mr. Wiley and the other officers of the Boston Club for their devoted work in behalf of the College. Mr. Wiley thanked the speakers and presented to each a pewter bowl, engraved with the recipient's initials. He announced the last two luncheon meetings of the season and reminded all of the Pops Concert on May 13 at Symphony Hall.

Incoming President Forsberg concluded the meeting and surprised the retiring President by reading the text of a citation which was presented to Mr. Wiley along with a Bowdoin desk chair.

CAPE COD

The fall stag dinner meeting of the Cape Cod Bowdoin Club was held at the Bourne Mill Restaurant in Buzzards Bay on Tuesday evening, December 1. A social hour was followed by dinner, and the Club entertained as special guests interested local subfreshmen.

Dean of the College Nathaniel Kendrick was the principal speaker, and Football Coach Peter Kostacopoulos showed film highlights of the 1964 season and commented on them.

CHICAGO

Club Secretary Hal Fish '25 reports, "The College has done well by us this year, and our three most recent meetings have been of high merit. A moderately large turnout of Bowdoin men and wives appeared at the Chicago Yacht Club on December 28 to welcome Professors Jim Abrahamson '26 and Jim Storer, both of the Economics Department. On January 14, at the Lake Shore Club, the new football coach, Peter Kostacopoulos, presented a fine movie program of last year's football season.

"Our third meeting was held at the Chicago Yacht Club on March 24 with Coach Charlie Butt as speaker. His presentation concerning the Olympic Games in Tokyo last summer included more than 100 beautiful color slides and generated unusual interest. This meeting was unusual in that nearly half of those present were fairly recent alumni. The speaker demonstrated a rare combination of the quiet humor of Herbie Brown and the incisiveness of Wilmot Mitchell. Other clubs take notice: here is a most able ambassador of Bowdoin!"

COLUMBUS

Coach Charlie Butt was the guest of the new Bowdoin Club of Columbus on Wednesday evening, March 31. The group met at the Olentangy Inn for a 6:30 social hour, followed by dinner.

At its midwinter meeting on February 26, the Alumni Council formally voted to recognize the Columbus Club and to seat Carl Apollonio '53 as its first Representative Member.

CONNECTICUT

The Connecticut Club concluded a season of monthly luncheons on Thursday, April 15, with Placement Director Samuel Ladd '29 as the speaker. Overseers Frederick Perkins '25 and Charles Barbour '33 were the speakers in February and March, respectively. Luncheon Chairman Bob Spencer '60 announces that the luncheons will be resumed on the third Thursday of each month, beginning October 21. The group will continue to meet at the University Club, 30 Lewis Street, Hartford.

Secretary Bob Smith '60 and Past Secretary Hap Standish '51 were instrumental in promoting a Glee Club concert in the auditorium of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company's building in suburban Bloomfield on Saturday, March 27. Many local alumni and friends of the College turned out to welcome the Bowdoin singers. Proceeds of the concert were added to the Connecticut Club's Scholarship Fund.

CONNECTICUT SHORE

Under the enthusiastic and able leadership of Hugh Mitchell '19, Paul Laidley '36, and Charles Campbell '39, the new Bowdoin Club of the Connecticut Shore has gotten off to a strong start. An organization meeting was held on Friday evening, December 11, at the Longshore Country Club in Westport. Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50 spoke informally about the latest news from the campus and described the possibilities and purposes for a Bowdoin Club in the area, one that might serve 225 to 250 alumni, most of whom live between Hartford and New York City.

The dozen alumni present greeted the idea enthusiastically, discussed it in detail, and agreed to form a new club and petition the Alumni Council for formal recognition. Hugh Mitchell was elected President, Charles Campbell Secretary-Treasurer, and Paul Laidley Representative Member on the Alumni Council. Subsequently the group elected Gordon Knight '32 Vice President and the following members of the Executive Committee: Weston Rankin '30, William Hart '39, Peter Mundy '53, and Gorham Scott '29. The Alumni Council voted to recognize the new Connecticut Shore Club at its midwinter meeting on the campus on February 26.

A second meeting was held on Friday evening, March 5, also at the Longshore Club. College Physician Daniel Hanley '39 and Senior Center Director William Whiteside represented the College. Despite bad weather, 37 men turned out for a social hour at 7:00 and dinner at 8:00. Dr. Hanley talked about the 1964 Tokyo Olympics, and Professor Whiteside spoke of the new Senior Center Program. "Dan and Bill put on a great show," President Mitchell reports. "All were delighted to see them and to hear their interesting talks. Everyone was enthusiastic and had a good time."

James Zarbock '39 has been appointed Chairman of the Prospective Students Committee. His group met Assistant Director of Admissions Walter Moulton '58 at the Longshore Club on May 4 to begin making plans for next fall.

Secretary Campbell, on the eve of his resignation to accept a new position in Germany, mailed a notice to all alumni in the area. It listed the Club's officers, members of the Executive Committee, and members of other committees, set forth the Club's constitution and by-laws, and announced the spring dinner meeting and ladies' night on Thursday, May 6, at the Longshore Country Club, when Professor and Mrs. Herbert Brown H'63 and Professor and Mrs. Jerry Brown were special guests.

MICHIGAN

Wally Rich '56, Assistant Convener Without Portfolio, reports, "Coach Charlie Butt brought news of the College to the Bowdoin Club of Michigan on Tuesday, March 23, when the spring dinner meeting was held at the Detroit Country Day School, with 15 people present. The numbers attending are small but growing each meeting. Everyone who partakes of the hospitality of Rod Snelling '53, Headmaster of the Detroit Country Day School, makes a point of returning.

"Charlie Butt's slides and descriptions of life on campus were encouraging, and everyone was pleased to hear that the Senior Center Program is enthusiastically accepted and a stimulant to the whole educational program at Bowdoin.

"After giving the news from the College, Charlie showed his magnificent slides of the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. His pictures and comments were so vividly presented that everyone felt the thrill and grandeur of the Tokyo Games. We are all indebted to him for his excellent program."

MILWAUKEE

Convener Tom Bradford '37 reports a meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Milwaukee on Friday evening, December 4, at the home of Dr. F. Jackson Stoddard '35, the Club's Alumni Council Member. Four alumni and two wives gathered to meet Assistant Director of Admissions Walter Moulton '58, who was in the area visiting schools. (The meeting must have been successful because it lasted until 1:00 a.m.!)

NEW YORK

Director of News Services Joseph Kamin, Coach Edmund Coombs '42, and Co-Captain of Football Robert Harrington '65 were the guests at a New York Bowdoin Club reception and cocktail party on Thursday, December 3. Alumni, wives, and guests gathered in the Butler Room of the Columbia University Club between 5:30 and 8:00. Mr. Kamin spoke informally about the latest news of the College, and Mr. Coombs showed highlight films of the 1964 season and commented on them.

The New York Club held its 96th annual dinner on Friday, February 5, at the Princeton Club, with almost 150 alumni present. Club President William Pierce '28 presided and introduced those at the head table: President Coles, Professor Athern Daggett '25, Edward Fuller '28, Edward Tevritz '26, Benjamin Shute '31, Austin MacCormick '15, Roliston Woodbury '22, and Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50. Mr. Fuller then presented an inscribed silver tray to the Club's Alumni Council Representative Member, George E. Griggs, Jr. '44, in recognition of his years of faithful service as Secretary and as Council Member. John Hupper '50 read the necrology, and there was a moment of silent tribute for those members of the Club who had died since the last meeting.

Treasurer Gordon Linke '50 gave a brief report. Mr. Griggs spoke of the recent activities of the Alumni Council. John Craig '41, President of the Long Island Bowdoin Club, announced a Glee Club concert in Westbury on March 28, and Council Member at Large Robert Porter '34 announced another concert at Summit High School, which had to be cancelled later.

President Coles spoke about the faculty, the student body, the Capital Campaign, the opening of the Senior Center, and the attitudes of today's undergraduates — both at Bowdoin and at other colleges and universities.

Professor Daggett, the other principal speaker, talked about the Senior Center and the program being conducted there. He remarked that many special visitors have been brought — and will be brought — to the Center, and then described his reactions to conducting one of the initial Senior Seminars during the fall semester.

Mr. Tevritz, the Chairman of the Nominating Committee, reported, and it was moved and voted to accept the slate as read. The principal officers for 1965-66 are President, George Sewall '32; Vice Presidents, James Blunt '31, Robert Porter '34, John Shute '36, William Allen '39, Charles Campbell '39, Stevens Frost '42, and Roscoe Ingalls '43; Secretary, Harold Sewall '51; Treasurer, Gordon Linke '50; and Alumni Council Member, George Griggs '44. In charge of special plans and programs for the coming year are George Sewall (97th annual dinner), Alfred Schretter '59 (downtown luncheons), James Fawcett '58 (spring smoker), Daniel Dayton '49 (Amherst and Williams games gatherings), and James Cochran '62 (Army game gathering).

ROCKY MOUNTAIN

Oscar Swanson '30 reports a meeting in Denver on Monday, March 15, when Coach Ray Bicknell was a special guest from the College: "The Bob Chandlers put on a very nice cocktail party and buffet supper. We greatly enjoyed Ray's color slides of the campus. We held a short business meeting and

INFORMAL VIRGIN ISLANDS CLUB

The first annual meeting of the Bowdoin Alumni Club of the Virgin Islands was held on March 10 at the Pineapple Beach Club, St. Thomas. Seth Larrabee '39 was elected Convener, and Eb Ellis '44 was appointed Secretary-Treasurer. In addition to Seth and Laura Larrabee, Eb and Jean Ellis, and others, Joe Haenn (Drexel '48) and his wife and partner, Joan, were present. They gave an illustrated talk on snorkeling and scuba diving in and about the Virgin Islands. Unable to attend this first alumni club banquet but due to be on hand for future gatherings were Henry Wood '16, Garth James '32, and James Woodbury '49.

A fall luncheon meeting at the Trunk Bay Beach Club, St. John, is tentatively scheduled, and a specific date and announcement will be mailed to all member alumni by Convener Larrabee. The cost of $15 per person will include all transportation and entertainment.

elected Joseph Roberts '95 President, George Mason '41 Secretary-Treasurer, and Oscar Swanson '30 Alumni Council Member."

ST. LOUIS

The Bowdoin Club of St. Louis held a dinner meeting on Monday evening, March 29, with Coach Charlie Butt as the special guest from the College. Alumni and wives and eight subfreshman guests gathered at the Diplomat Motel. Present were Bob and Dot Blake '47, Jack Brace '50, Jack and Carolyn Goldman '37, Ben and Jean Greely '53, Ed and Betty O'Neill '38, and Steve and Ann Rule '58.

Steve Rule reports that he was re-elected Convener and Council Member and that the Club approved annual dues of $3.00. Preliminary plans were made for an October meeting, "at which the order of business will be to consume several barrels of lobsters and steamer clams from Maine."

Steve continues, "With business out of the way, Charlie Butt spoke briefly about recent events at the College, including the Senior Center, the new gym, and other buildings. We then enjoyed seeing his slides of the campus, including one taken in the little grove at the south side of the Library, all ice awash with water. This evoked the cry, 'It's spring!' After seeing these pictures, we traveled by means of Charlie's slides to Tokyo and had a most enjoyable tour of the Olympics and other sights."

ST. PETERSBURG

Acting Convener Alton Pope '11 reports that 11 alumni attended the luncheon on February 11, and that there were 53 present, including many wives, at the luncheon on March 11 at the Wedgewood Inn in St. Petersburg.

The final luncheon of the season (also a ladies' day) was held on Thursday, April 1, at the Wedgewood Inn. Dr. Pope says, "Twenty-seven, including the ladies, were present. In a brief business session, we agreed to start our 1965-66 program with a luncheon on the second Thursday in December. We will meet every month thereafter on the second Thursday, concluding with the April luncheon. The March luncheon will be a ladies' day.

"President Coles' very comprehensive talk on Bowdoin today was enthusiastically received and brought out some interesting discussion. We all deeply appreciate his coming to us."

WILMINGTON

Campbell Cary '46, who organized the meeting, reports a gathering of 44 alumni, wives, and friends at the University Club in Wilmington on Thursday, April 1. The group met for a social hour at 6 and dinner at 7 and entertained as special guests from the College the Bowdoin Bachelors, who were on a post-spring-concert-tour trip to Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Washington.

Mr. Cary wrote, "The Bachelors did an outstanding job, both in their remarks about the College, from the undergraduates' viewpoint, and in their musical performance. All agreed that hearing the students' side of the picture is a most pleasant change from the usual approach. I am amused that there are now three segments of the College: the undergraduates, the faculty, and the administration. The Bachelors should be complimented upon the very effective contribution they made to our meeting, and I hope that other clubs will have the same opportunity we had."

Three of the Bachelors spoke informally and answered questions: Ed Leydon '66 on fraternities, Dick Fontaine '65 on the Senior Center program, and Ted Davis '67 on undergraduate social life.

News Of The Classes

1826 The memory of John Russwurm was honored on March 13 in New York City, when the Seven-Up Company of St. Louis, Mo., presented to 75 publisher-members of the National Newspaper Publishers' Association walnut plaques bearing a facsimile of page one of Freedom's Journal, the first Negro newspaper in this country, and published by Russwurm.

The day before, on March 12, a new public school in New York City was named after Russwurm. It is located near the site where Freedom's Journal was first published.

The Russwurm Scholarship at Bowdoin has been awarded to Virgil H. Logan, Jr. of Dayton, Ohio, who will enter the Class of 1969 in the fall.

1895 Joe Roberts has been elected to another term as President of the Rocky Mountain Bowdoin Club.

1898 On March 25 the Maine Legislature presented, by proxy, to Percival Baxter a bronze plaque which has since been mounted in the State Museum. Created by sculptor Jan Hanna of Camden, the plaque has a relief showing Mount Katahdin from the west. The dedication praises "a lifetime devoted to the creation and giving of this 200,000-acre shrine of wild natural beauty, Baxter State Park. By its action, the 102nd Maine Legislature makes perpetual this grateful tribute to a great man's love of his state and of his fellow man."

Forest Commissioner Austin H. Wilkins, Chairman of the Baxter State Park Authority, read a letter from Percival which said, "This recognition warms my heart, for it speaks for all the people of our state, to whom I give my heartfelt thanks. Nothing could be finer or more friendly. I love the land of Maine and its people."

Joe Davis expects to go to his summer home on Cliff Island in Casco Bay in May to plant some trees.

Class Secretary Chris Toole reports that Harvey

Ellis spent a few weeks in the hospital during the winter but that he is now at home.

Lib and George Pullen left their home in Chapala, Mexico, in May to spend the summer in Maine.

Class Secretary Chris Toole spent three days in Atlantic City, N. J., late in March as a delegate for Hotel Greeters. His wife, Reta, had a bad fall early that month and broke an arm.

1909 Acting Secretary, Jasper J. Stahl
Waldoboro

There was only one lonely word of regret that no notes on 1909 were published in the March number of the Alumnus. Well! Send your material along, and we will try to make a very little into an awful lot.

Bob Pennell's son, William, a senior at Bowdoin, was one of seven men to receive all A's at the end of the first semester of the current year. The old saying that History repeats itself must be bunk.

Colonel Oramel Stanley has been elected First Vice President of the Pejepscot Historical Society in Brunswick.

A Dr. Morris Sanders is collecting biographical material on Dr. Sumner Jackson. Some of you will recall your classmate "Jack" as the onetime Superintendent of the American Hospital in Paris, whose life came to a tragic and untimely end at the close of World War II. Dr. Sanders served on the Hospital staff with "Jack" in Paris. Inasmuch as "Jack" and your agent grew up together, the latter has been collaborating in a small way.

Reed Ellis is still active in the Rangeley area. He was in Brunswick to see the last Bowdoin-Maine game in history. Reed was a 125-pound end on the Bowdoin Varsity which beat Maine on a rainy Saturday in 1908. At the end of the game, he recalls, his uniform weighed more than he.

A gift has been received from our classmate Dorothy Marsh, honoring the memories of Harold N. Marsh, Max P. Cushing, and Justice Harold H. Burton.

Carl Stone has had a recent bout with destiny at the Maine Medical Center. No complications. Complètement rétablé.

Dr. Clarence Scamman has been a sojourner in the Deaconess Hospital in Boston. He is planning to spend the summer at Surry on Blue Hill Bay in Maine.

114 Atlantic Avenue
Boothbay Harbor

Meredith Auten was recently named the "Senior Citizen of the Year" by the Cass City (Mich.) Chamber of Commerce.

Raymond Hathaway's grandson, Russell B. Graves, who is in the Army in Germany, was married to a German girl on April 3 in Berlin. They will return to the United States in September and will live in Rumford, R. I. Shirt's address is 11 Akin Avenue, South Yarmouth, Mass.

At the March town meeting Class Secretary Bill MacCormick was elected a Trustee of the Boothbay Harbor Memorial Library for a five-year term.

The Monday Club of Boothbay Harbor, a 70-year-old literary group, has selected Class Secretary Bill MacCormick as its "Man of the Year." Students at the local high school wrote essays on Bill in a contest held in connection with his selection.

Farmington

On March 31 Class Secretary Luther Whittier wrote, "I recently received a letter from Bill Spinney stating that on December 31 he retired as Trust Officer at Title Insurance and Trust Company at Los Angeles, Calif. However, he plans to return to the trust business later this year as Vice President and Trust Officer, with the duty of creating and heading a new trust department which will be set up according to some original plans of his. As I recall it, Bill retired about 11 years ago and was then hired for another position with the bank. Now, after his second retirement, he is to start on another lap at 76.

"I had a letter from Duff Wood yesterday. He is down to his winter home in Tavernier, Fla., and he and Sue were planning to be in Miami yesterday at a Bowdoin meeting with President Coles.

"Here in the Legislature in Augusta I have met a large number of Bowdoin men whom I had never met before. I hope we get through here in time for me to make Commencement."

Larry Hart writes that he continues to enjoy his work in raising funds to meet the annual deficit of the Addison Gilbert Hospital in Gloucester, Mass. Larry's other job is as Secretary of the Gloucester Fisheries Association.

Walter Lane, a veteran, regular contributor to the Alumni Fund, mailed his check last year in plenty of time to be enrolled in the 1963-64 Fund. He received no acknowledgment from the College. When he sent his check this year, he called this fact to the attention of Class Agent Paul Niven. Paul promptly asked Bob Cross '45, Secretary of the Fund, to check into the matter. Bob did, and wrote Walter a nice note, reporting Walter's 1964 check had never been received at the College. "This happens every once in a while," wrote Bob. "The classic example was a contribution of $1,000, which lay in the dead-letter office in Washington for nine months." Moral to Sixteeners: mail your gift early to this year's Alumni Fund!

Gordon Olson retired in December of 1960. He and Nan continue to live at 9 Bay State Road, Belmont, Mass. Gordon reports, "I play some golf with a group of retired friends at the Oakley Country Club when the weather is right. In the winter we howl a bit.

"My last son, John Wesley Olson, is a junior at Belmont High School and will be knocking on the doors of Bowdoin for admission. I hope he can make it."

Members of 1916 will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Jessie P. Thomas, the widow of Harry Thomas, on April 28. Surviving are a son, Professor Harry S. Thomas, Jr. of Orono; a daughter, Mrs. Priscilla T. Rines of Gorham; and six grandchildren.

23 McKeen Street
Brunswick

In April Albert Bartlett reported that he would not be able to attend our 45th in June, as he had expected, because of the necessity for a business trip to Japan and another to the Philippines. As a result, he wrote, "Peggy and I are leaving Los Angeles on May 6 for Honolulu and Tokyo, where we will remain probably about two or three weeks; then on to Taipei, Hong Kong, and Manila. My job in Manila will probably take me another ten days to two weeks, and as this has blown all possibility of being in Brunswick in June sky-high, I intend, when finished in Manila, to continue on to Thailand, India, Pakistan, Iran, Iraq, Syria, Egypt, Greece, Italy, Austria, France, and England, getting back to New York sometime in July, I hope."

"Once back in New York, I still intend to take my New England vacation, so will probably pick up a car there and drive up to Maine."

On March 25 Paul Mason of Bath received a Superior Accomplishment Award and a certificate which read, in part, "This certificate and check will show, in part, the appreciation of the Post Office Department and the supervisors of this office for the fine work and cooperation you have shown."

Paul has worked in the Post Office in Bath for 27 years.

From now on I can look at the plaque and think of past games and players."

Ed continues to be a member of the faculty at The Gunnery in Washington, Conn.

Evariste Desjardins wrote in April, "Last fall I managed to buy myself a six-months old pacer. He is engaged to race in August of 1966 out in Ohio and then in Maryland. His name is, of course, of the modern vintage, being Ringo Lobel. I wouldn't advise you at this point to bet on him when he does race, as we have too much to teach him. Maybe you could save your money until then. I wouldn't advise you to buy stuff on credit, either, on expected winnings, because they may have to keep the lights on for him to see his way in."

Evariste is Manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, 77 Winthrop Street, Augusta.

Dick Thayer has been re-elected Chairman of the Marblehead (Mass.) School Committee. A writer named Frank Murphy said of Dick in his column "Single Sez" in the Salem Evening News for April 5, "Few Yachting Capital residents who see the jaunty Thayer handling the gavel at school board sessions or trying to sell voters a new construction program from the floor of a town meeting assembly realize it, but Dick Thayer was one of this nation's top amateur hockey players 34 years ago."

"The official guide of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States indicates that Dick Thayer was a member of the Boston Olympic Hockey club which represented America in the world's championships at Krynica, Poland, in February, 1931."

"A total of ten countries — Great Britain, France, Hungary, Rumania, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Austria, Sweden, and the United States — were entered in the world tourney that year. The University of Manitoba Grads, representing Canada, won the title by defeating America, 2-0, in their final game."

"Following the championship series, the U. S. team played exhibition games in Poland, Germany, and Sweden before returning home. The Americans were undefeated in their exhibition series, and this 1931 club was the first ever to play a series of exhibitions in Europe."

After a year at the College he studied for four years at the University of Virginia. He became an underwriter in the insurance field in New York in 1932. During World War II he served in the United States Merchant Marine for three years.

Mr. Marsh is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alice Smith Marsh, whom he married on June 28, 1930, in Orange, Va.; a son, Peter D. Marsh; and a sister, Mrs. Annette Jaffrey.

ELMER BRADFORD DREW '30

Elmer B. Drew, who for twenty-five years was employed by the John Hancock Life Insurance Company in Worcester, Mass., died in a Boston hospital on April 13, 1965. Born on September 20, 1907, in Boston, he prepared for college at the Huntington School and following his graduation was a salesman with the Hoover Company, was engaged in special work in woodworking, and was a draftsman, before joining John Hancock, from which he received a twenty-five year service pin in 1963.

A Mason, Mr. Drew was active in Boy Scout work and was a Scoutmaster in Brunswick while he was a student at the College. He had lived in East Harpswell for the past five years. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Wadsworth Drew, whom he married on April 6, 1934, in Boston, Mass.; a son, Bradford W. Drew '57 of Washington, D. C.; and a sister, Mrs. Harold Collins of East Harpswell.

WILLIAM GRAVES BOGGS, JR. '52

William G. Boggs, Jr., a sales representative with the United States Steel Corporation for nine years, died on February 28, 1965, in Ambler, Pa. Born on September 27, 1930, in Pittsburgh, Pa., he prepared for college at Shady Side Academy in that city. At Bowdoin he was President of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity and was elected permanent Secretary-Treasurer of the Class of 1952. Following his graduation he joined the United States Marine Corps, in which he served for four years as a jet pilot, being released to inactive duty in 1957 as a Captain. He then joined U. S. Steel, with which he held a variety of sales assignments in Chicago and Philadelphia.

Mr. Boggs is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Ewart Boggs, whom he married on September 10, 1955; two sons, William E. Boggs and Thomas C. Boggs; a daughter, Linda C. Boggs; a brother, Philip C. Boggs '56 of Pittsburgh, Pa.; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Boggs of Sewickley, Pa.

HERBERT CHARLES SCRIBNER Medical 1914

Dr. Herbert C. Scribner, who last June received a fifty-year service pin from the Maine Medical Association, died in Bangor on March 18, 1965. Born in Brewer on February 9, 1889, he prepared for college at Bangor High School and attended Holy Cross College before entering the Maine Medical School at Bowdoin, from which he received his M.D. degree in 1914. He interned at the Eastern Maine General Hospital in Bangor and was later appointed to its staff and also that of the Bangor State Hospital. During World War I he served for two years as a captain in the Army Medical Corps.

From 1922 until 1952 Dr. Scribner was a Penobscot County Medical Examiner, in addition to practicing general medicine and surgery in Bangor. He was for seventeen years Secretary of the Penobscot County Medical Association. Surviving are two sons, Charles Scribner of Hartford, Conn., and Dr. Robert L. Scribner of Melrose, Mass.

Elijah Kellogg of the Class of 1840 was known and beloved by more than fifty years of Bowdoin students. They often walked down to his church in Harpswell on a Sunday afternoon to hear him preach. They read his juvenile books, the “Whispering Pine” and “Elm Island” stories. Hundreds of them memorized his stirring declamations, “Spartacus to the Gladiators,” “Pericles to the People,” “Regulus to the Carthaginians,” and others.

In 1915 the late Wilmot B. Mitchell '90 wrote in the Bowdoin Orient concerning Kellogg as follows: “He held no college office, but for more than fifty years no man was more loved by Bowdoin men than he. From the day he came to Brunswick in the autumn of 1836 and presented himself, as he says, ‘a sedate and diffident youth, between the two maple trees which, like friendship and misfortune, flung their shadows over the steps of Massachusetts Hall, and sued for admission to Bowdoin College,’ even to that winter’s day in 1901 when the students went down to Harpswell to his funeral, Bowdoin boys felt that he was their friend, a man after their own heart.”

“ . . . the students knew him as he farmed and fished. They knew him as a man so generous that he was often himself hard pressed. They chatted with him in the college rooms and heard him speak at Sunday chapel services, at Y.M.C.A. meetings and Commencement dinners. They found that he loved boys, that he was happy in their companionship, that he liked to talk about their work and their sports, and tell tales about his own college days. They found that he, perhaps more than any other man they had ever known, was all the time at heart a boy himself.”

At the Bowdoin Commencement in 1890, the 50th anniversary of the graduation of his class, Elijah Kellogg was invited to speak. He concluded his remarks with these words: “I stand here today like an old tree among the younger growth, from whose trunk the bark and leaves have fallen and whose roots are drying in the soil. Then I could stand where the roads divide that lead to Mere Point and Maquoit, and hear the roar of the Atlantic in one ear and the falls of the Androscoggin in the other. Today I have not heard a word, except the two words ‘Bowdoin College.’ But there is no decrepitude of the spirit. Moons may wax and wane, flowers may bloom and wither, but the associations that link the student to his intellectual birthplace are eternal.”

Elijah Kellogg was talking about all Bowdoin men throughout the history of the College — from the Class of 1806 through the Class of 1965, from the Class of 1966 on into the years and decades ahead. “ . . . the associations that link the student to his intellectual birthplace are eternal.” R.M.C.

Commencement — 1965

A couple of beautiful June days provided the background for Bowdoin's 160th Commencement on Friday and Saturday, June 11 and 12. There were a few clouds Friday and a few more on Saturday, but the weather was generally sunny and warm, with low humidity. As evening approached, one felt the need for putting on additional clothing. This was especially true at the Class Reunion outings, most of which were held at the shore. A big yellow moon was a happy coincidence for the evening activities. All in all, the combination was difficult to match, and the turnout of alumni and friends was a good one.

At the Commencement exercises themselves, on Saturday morning, 177 men received A.B. degrees, nine more were awarded master of arts degrees, and five people accepted honorary degrees, as follows: Joseph L. Fisher '35, President of Resources for the Future, Inc., Doctor of Science; Crawford H. Greenewalt, Chairman of the Board of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, Doctor of Laws; Keyes D. Metcalf, Librarian Emeritus, Harvard University, Doctor of Literature; Katharine E. O'Brien, Chairman of the Mathematics Department at Deering High School in Portland, Doctor of Humane Letters; and Ellison S. Purington '12, Vice President of the Hammond Research Corporation in Gloucester, Mass., Doctor of Science.

Dr. Metcalf, incidentally, is the son of Isaac S. Metcalf of the Class of 1847!

Senior Honors

One senior, Donald J. Krogstad of New Hyde Park, N. Y., was graduated magna cum laude, and 36 others received their degree cum laude. Forty-seven of the 177 graduates received special recognition for outstanding work in their major subject, with four being awarded Highest Honors, 11 High Honors, and 32 Honors.

Distribution of Majors

Twenty-seven seniors majored in Economics, 25 in Psychology, 23 in History, 19 in Mathematics, 18 in Government, 14 in Biology, 7 in Chemistry, 7 in English, 6 in French, 6 in German, 6 in Latin, 6 in Physics, 6 in Sociology, 3 in Philosophy, 2 in Music, 1 in Art, and 1 in Classics.

Bowdoin wives watch the Class of 1960 play the Class of 1955 in the traditional Commencement softball game at Pickard Field.

A member of 1955 reaches first base safely on an apparent 1960 error.

Shown here, with their faculty advisor, Professor Albert R. Thayer '22, are the students selected as Commencement speakers: Louis A. Fourcher and Gary C. Brador, both of Fairhaven, Mass.; Philip C. McIntire of Glens Falls, N. Y., the alternate speaker; Donald J. Krogstad of New Hyde Park, N. Y.; and Jonathan C. Raymond of Needham, Mass. Fourcher won the Goodwin Commencement Prize for the best part.

Bowdoin's Newest Honorary Graduates

JOSEPH L. FISHER '35 — President of Resources for the Future, Inc., Doctor of Science. "From his keen awareness of the gravity of the crises in world populations and economic conditions surrounding the 'complexity of the world energy and minerals economy,' its food, and its agriculture, he hopes to build understanding on solid facts, to search out lasting solutions rather than temporary panaceas."

CRAWFORD H. GREENEWALT — Chairman of the Board, E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, Doctor of Laws. "Chemist, engineer, executive, musician, machinist, ornithologist, and author. Personifying the liberally educated man, you have by your example demonstrated your own frequently and lucidly expressed precepts of personal freedom and incentive, of high achievement, of individuality in large enterprise, just as you have decried conformity."

KEYES D. METCALF — Librarian Emeritus, Harvard University, Doctor of Literature. "Not content with three successive successful and distinguished careers as Librarian of Oberlin, of the New York Public Library, and of Harvard, you have since your presumed retirement a decade ago continued to give of yourself, of your wide experience, and of your quick perception in the planning and design of modern libraries from Canberra to County Cork, and from Lima to London."

KATHARINE E. O'BRIEN — Chairman of Mathematics Department, Deering High School, Doctor of Humane Letters. "Beyond her duty as head of mathematics in Portland's Deering High School, she is on the Faculty of the University of Maine in Portland, and makes time to range widely in writing, from articles on 'The Logarithmic Function' to bountiful light verse. In her poetry, her rare mind and spirit shine through as she describes the reward of a teacher's 'proud moments to remember.'"

ELLISON S. PURINGTON '12 — Vice President, Hammond Research Corporation, Gloucester, Mass., Doctor of Science. "Inventor extraordinary, wizard in electronics circuitry, native of Mechanic Falls, member of an old Bowdoin family, after your brilliant undergraduate career and graduate work in Physics at Harvard University, your research in ordnance in the First World War and your writing of early training manuals for radio technicians presaged your later contributions."

ROTC Commissioning

At the 15th annual ROTC commissioning exercises, held on Friday morning, Captain Edward E. Langbein, Jr. '57 presented second lieutenant's commissions to 29 seniors. A decorated veteran of the conflict in Vietnam, he told the new officers that they should never regret their decision to be a member "of those forces which insure our nation's continued free existence." He went on to say, "Public esteem of the military profession reflects current events, such as the activities in Vietnam or the Dominican Republic right now, and every action seems to draw as much abuse as applause."

"What, then, is the value of military service? Let me answer that question with another question. What is more important than defending the freedom of your country? Every other activity and profession is dependent on our continued success."

Dedication of New Gymnasium

On Friday afternoon at 2:15 the new gymnasium was dedicated. The main speaker, Yale University Director of Athletics DeLaney Kiphuth, said that Bowdoin and Yale are both striving "to preserve, against increasingly serious obstacles, the ideal of amateurism in American athletics."

"Much of the rest of the country calls this effort de-emphasis of athletics, and by this they scornfully mean that we don't care about this area of college life," he said. "On the contrary, an enthusiasm and conviction about the values of sport for the college community are strongly indicated."

Mr. Kiphuth stated that a comparison of a list of leading collegiate football powers last fall showed that not one of them "spends institutional funds on athletics. All support is derived from gate receipts, and their programs are expanded or restricted on the basis of these receipts." But at Bowdoin "the entire program is routinely budgeted out of college funds." The leading football powers, he said, have intercollegiate teams in seven to nine sports, while "at Bowdoin you have 15, with squash about to be added."

The new gymnasium was one of the objectives of the $10 million Capital Campaign. It contains some 50,000 square feet of space and increases the total gymnasium area to about 67,000 square feet.

Adams Hall Plaque

Also on Friday afternoon, at a ceremony in front of Seth Adams Hall, the College dedicated a plaque commemorating the former Medical School of Maine, which was housed in Adams from 1862 until the School closed its doors in 1921. Established in 1820, it graduated more than 2,100 physicians.

1915's 50th Reunion Gift

1915 Class Agent Francis P. McKenney of Deerfield, Mass., announced at the Commencement Dinner that members of the Class were giving the College a 50th Reunion Gift of some $25,000, to be used for the Robert P. T. Coffin North Bay Reading Room in the Hawthorne-Longfellow Library. Professor Coffin was a member of 1915.

1940's 25th Reunion Gift

Members of the Class of 1940, through their spokesman and Class Agent, Dr. Ross L. Wilson of Menlo Park, Calif., took delight in reporting a record-breaking 25th Year Class Gift of some $44,000, representing the total giving of members of 1940 to the Capital Campaign and the Alumni Fund. Of this $44,000, the Class had voted the evening before to designate its 25th Reunion Fund of some $32,000 for three different purposes: $1,000 for an ice-making machine for the Alumni House (with the hope that the ice cubes manufactured might come out in the form of the numerals "1940"); $16,000 to establish the Class of 1940 Memorial Fund, "the income from such fund to be used for the assistance of students or for such other purposes as the President and the Governing Boards may from time to time deem more useful"; and $15,000 to establish the Robert M. Cross Alumni Activity Fund, in recognition of the 15 years of service to the College of the Secretary of the Alumni Fund. This Fund is to be used "to further the activities of one of the most important facets of the College community, the Alumni Office."

The 1964-65 Alumni Fund

Alumni Fund Chairman Lewis V. Vafiades '42 of Hampden reported a new Commencement-time record of more than $226,000 (the previous record, set in 1963, was $220,000) and predicted that the Fund would pass the $250,000 mark by the end of the month, when it would close officially.

New Members of the Governing Boards

The Board of Overseers elected five new members: William B. Mills '29 of Jacksonville, Fla., President of the Florida National Bank and Vice President of the St. Joe Paper Company; Marshall Swan '29 of Barrington, R. I., a partner in the Providence law firm of Swan, Keeney, and Jenckes; William H. Gulliver, Jr. '25 of Wellesley, Mass., senior partner in the Boston law firm of Powers, Hall, Montgomery, and Weston; Major General Robert N. Smith '38, Director of Intelligence for the Strategic Air Command; and Arthur K. Orne '30 of Wilmington, Del., who will soon become Senior Financial Representative in Germany for the International Department of the Du Pont Company.

Charles A. Cary '10 retired as an active member of the Board of Trustees and was elected a Trustee Emeritus. A retired Vice President of Du Pont, he had served on the Governing Boards since 1947. Elected a Trustee to succeed him was Frederick P. Perkins '25 of West Hartford, Conn., Senior Vice President of the Aetna Life Insurance Company.

Memorials

The new library building, scheduled for completion in the fall, has been named the Nathaniel Hawthorne-Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Library in memory of these two members of the Class of 1825. The reading room on the second floor of that building has been named for Franklin Pierce of the Class of 1824, the 14th President of the country. A reading room on the first floor honors Melville W. Fuller of the Class of 1853, who was Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court from 1888 to 1910.

A conference room on the second floor of the west end of the Hawthorne-Longfellow Library is named the Fessenden Room in memory of William P. Fessenden of the Class of 1823, Secretary of the Treasury under Abraham Lincoln. The special collections suite is named in honor of the late Harold L. Berry '01, prominent in Portland banking and real estate circles, and the current periodicals room is the William John Curtis 1875 Room in memory of a Brunswick native and noted New York lawyer.

The late Paul Nixon, Dean of the College from 1918 to 1947, is honored in the naming of the Faculty Lounge Conference Room of the Library. The late Robert P. T. Coffin '15, Bowdoin's Pulitzer Prize-winning poet, author, and professor, is memorialized with the designation of the North Bay Reading Room in his honor. The main entrance and lobby will be designated in memory of Stuart F. Brown '10, who was for many years Treasurer of the Whitinsville (Mass.) Spinning Ring Company. The cataloguing room is named in memory of Gerald G. Wilder '04, Librarian from 1916 to 1944, and the bibliography and card catalogue area has been designated in memory of George T. Little '77, Librarian from 1883 to 1915.

The Librarian's Office is designated in honor of the members of the Class of 1914, and the Newspaper Room in honor of the members of the Class of 1938.

The Senior Center faculty residence has been named Chamberlain Hall, in honor of General Joshua L. Chamberlain of the Class of 1852, who was Governor of Maine, President of Bowdoin, and a Civil War hero. The dining room-lounge building at the Center is Wentworth Hall, in honor of Walter V. Wentworth '86 of Old Town, an Overseer from 1929 until his death in 1958. A lounge-dining area and adjacent terrace on the first floor of the Senior Center dining room-lounge unit are named the Hutchinson Lounge and the Hutchinson Terrace in memory of Charles L. Hutchinson '90, a prominent Portland lawyer.

The entire first floor of the Senior Center residential tower has been designated in honor of the late Henry Q. Hawes '10 and Mrs. Hawes, who a year ago gave the College real estate in California valued at more than $2.1 million. The sixteenth floor music lounge in the tower is a memorial to Harrison K. McCann '02, founder of the McCann-Erickson Advertising Agency, of which Mr. Hawes was a Vice President.

The balcony lounge in Wentworth Hall is named in honor of the late Wilmot B. Mitchell '90, who was Edward Little Professor of Rhetoric and Oratory from 1897 until 1939, and the Director's study in Chamberlain Hall is designated in memory of Dr. Cecil C. McLaughlin '23 of Worcester, Mass., a senior surgeon for many years at City Hospital in Worcester.

When a new Arctic museum is established in Hubbard Hall, it will be named in honor of the late Admiral Robert E. Peary '77 and Admiral Donald B. MacMillan '98. After the College's administrative offices have been moved to the Hawthorne-Longfellow Library, the current President's Office in Massachusetts Hall will be named in memory of Joseph McKeen, Bowdoin's first President, who served from 1802 to 1807.

At the new gymnasium a plaque will be placed in the training room in honor of Jack Magee of Brunswick, Director of Track and Field Athletics, Emeritus, and there will be a plaque in the coaches' conference-projection room in memory of Henry J. Colbath '10, who still holds the Bowdoin record of 4 minutes 21 seconds in the mile run. He was a teacher and track coach at The Hill School in Pottstown, Pa., for many years.

The office of the Director of Athletics in the gym is being designated in honor of Mal Morrell '24, Director of Athletics since 1927.

Elections and Honors

Earle S. Thompson '14 of New York City received the 1965 Alumni Service Award at the Commencement Dinner. An Overseer from 1937 to 1947 and a Trustee since then, he is Chairman of the Board of the Allegheny Power System. The citation described him as a "quiet and effective worker for the College, always generous of his time and talents."

Roy A. Foulke '19 of Bronxville, N. Y., has been elected President of the Board of Overseers, succeeding Sumner T. Pike '13 of Lubec. Mr. Foulke is a retired Vice President of Dun and Bradstreet, Inc. The new Vice President of the Overseers is Louis Bernstein '22 of Portland, a lawyer who has served Bowdoin in just about every possible capacity except as a faculty member.

The Governing Boards cited Philip G. Clifford '03 of Portland, also a lawyer, for his record of 50 years as an Overseer. He received a Diploma of a Half Century of Service.

The Haldane Cup was awarded to Steve Ingram '65 of Rehoboth, Mass., an outstanding scholar-athlete and one of the finest of Bowdoin men.

George T. Davidson, Jr. '38 of Conway, N. H., is the new President of the Alumni Council, and Dr. John F. Reed '37 of Wethersfield, Conn., is its new Vice President. Secretary Peter C. Barnard '50 and Treasurer Glenn R. McIntire '25, both of Brunswick, were re-elected.

Alumni Fund Chairman Lew Vafiades '42 reports a new Commencement-time record of more than $226,000 at the Dinner on Saturday afternoon.

Alumni Council officers: Secretary Peter C. Barnard '50, 1964-65 President John E. Cartland '39, 1965-66 President George T. Davidson, Jr. '38, 1965-66 Vice President John F. Reed '37, and Treasurer Glenn R. McIntire '25.

The new Members at Large of the Council are Willard B. Arnold III '51 of Waterville, Donald F. Barnes '35 of New York City, Dr. Leonard W. Cronkhite, Jr. '41 of Marblehead, Mass., and Stephen F. Leo '32 of Alexandria, Va. L. Robert Porteous, Jr. '46 of Portland has been appointed to a five-year term as a Director of the Alumni Fund.

Alumni Council Honors Four

In a weekend of honors, it was a special pleasure to watch two men become Honorary Members of the Alumni Association at the Friday luncheon. They are Harry G. Shulman of Brunswick, area correspondent for the Portland Press Herald, Evening Express, and Sunday Telegram and for 35 years a friend to Bowdoin men; and Joseph D. Kamin, Director of News Services since 1961. In addition, the Class of 1940 elected Harry an honorary member that evening.

The Council also awarded special certificates and Bowdoin mirrors to two members of the Alumni Office staff: Miss Dorothy E. Weeks, for 20 years of faithful service, and Alumni Fund Secretary Robert M. Cross '45 for 15 years of service.

Mitchell Scholarship

At the Commencement Dinner President Coles announced the establishment of the Wilmot Brookings Mitchell Graduate Scholarship, made possible through a fund set up by Hugh A. Mitchell '19 of Westport, Conn., in honor of his father. Professor Mitchell taught at Bowdoin from 1893 until his retirement in 1939. Known to generations of Bowdoin men and their families as "Mitch," he died in 1962 at the age of 94.

The first recipient of the Mitchell Scholarship is William J. Fahrenbach of Glenview, Ill., who was graduated cum laude, with Honors in English. A grant is to be awarded each year "to a member of each graduating class who has majored in English and intends to teach English, the winning candidate to be selected on the basis of character as well as superior ability and talent for teaching."

Positions of Honor

The Commencement Marshal was William E. MacIntyre '45, the Alumni Marshal Harold W. Anthony '55, the Faculty Marshal Professor Nathan Dane II '37, the Assistant to the Faculty Marshal Professor Roger Howell, Jr. '58, and the Senior Class Marshal Michael M. Anello.

The Reverend Joseph C. MacDonald '15 was the Commencement Chaplain, the Reverend James MacNaughton, Jr. '45 the Commencement Dinner Chaplain, Richard H. Downes '60 the Precentor at the Dinner, and Randall M. Greason (the son of Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason, Jr.) the Commencement Page.

Awards to Seniors

Eight members of the Class of 1965 were elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa — Richard T. Andrias of Needham, Mass., Clayton R. Lewis, Jr. of Birmingham, Mich., William H. Lynch of Forestdale, R. I., Philip C. McIntire of Glens Falls, N. Y., Jotham D. Pierce, Jr. of Portland, Jeffrey R. Prince of Newton, Mass., Gerald F. Rath of Lewiston, and Jonathan C. Raymond of Needham, Mass. One member of the Class of 1966, John L. Esposito of Portland, was also elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Nine seniors achieved distinction as straight "A" students during their final semester: Thomas C. Chase of Kittery, Peter W. Elliott of North Reading, Mass., Donald J. Krogstad of New Hyde Park, N. Y., George H. Lewis of Bar Harbor, Brian R. Murphy of Melrose, Mass., William M. Pennell, II of Portland, Jotham D. Pierce, Jr. of Portland, Asa P. Smith of Royal Oak, Mich., and Craig L. Whitman, Jr. of Cambridge, Ohio.

Krogstad won the Lucien Howe Prize for "the highest qualities of conduct and character," and Nathan Dane III of Brunswick won the Colonel William Henry Owen Premium, as "a humble, earnest, and active Christian."

Andrias won the Roliston G. Woodbury Award, based upon the qualities of scholarship, leadership, and extracurricular activities. Chase won two prizes — the Leonard A. Pierce Memorial Prize and the George W. McArthur Prize. The former is given to the senior with the highest scholastic average among the men who are going on to law school, and the latter goes to the senior who attains the highest academic average among the recipients of prematriculation scholarships in the class.

Chandler's Band

Once again Chandler's Military Band and Orchestra, Inc., played at Commencement. Formed at about the time of the Civil War, it has played at nearly every Bowdoin Commencement since then. Under the leadership of Maurice E. Lane of West Falmouth since 1960, it has in its membership music teachers, a brick mason, a railroad accountant, an eye specialist, business executives, a secretary, school teachers, and two postal employees.

Anniversary Years

Six members of the faculty celebrated reunion anniversaries of their own at Commencement. They are Warren B. Catlin (55 years), Thomas C. Van Cleve (50 years), Herbert R. Brown (40 years), Malcolm E. Morrell '24 (40 years), Edward C. Kirkland (35 years), and Richard L. Chittim '41 (20 years).

1950 enters the Cage in noisy triumph.

Foulke '19, the new President of the Overseers; and Sumner T. Pike '13, who completed four years as President at Commencement.

Dr. Ross L. Wilson '40, on from California with his family, reports 1940's record-breaking 25th Reunion gift of more than $44,000, contributed to both the Alumni Fund and the Capital Campaign.

Precentor Dick Downes '60, "the great white father," in action.

Alumni Office staff members Dorothy E. Weeks and Robert M. Cross '45 were honored at the Friday luncheon.

Director of News Services Joseph D. Kamin and newspaperman Harry G. Shulman of Brunswick became Honorary Members of the Alumni Association.

British Education and Some Possible Lessons for the United States

by Roger Howell, Jr. '58

IT IS ALMOST INEVITABLE that those who have experienced different systems will be led to compare them. In the field of education, comparison of British and American methods has a long history; yet it is a comparison fraught with difficulties because, in many ways, the two systems are philosophically quite different. In view of this, it would be well if I were to indicate from the very beginning the line which my argument will take and the limitations which should be remembered in connection with my comments.

Generally speaking, I have been very impressed by the British educational system from what I have seen of it in five years of living in Great Britain. I think that we have much to learn from it; I feel this strongly enough to suggest that perhaps we should rethink some of our basic principles, particularly our fascination with democratic, egalitarian education and our fondness for what we so mistakenly call "education for life."

I should also stress the limits imposed on my experience in making this assessment and admit that there is an element of prejudice involved in what I will say. I have had personal experience of British university education at Oxford as a student, a teacher, and a dean. My contact with the schools has been far more limited; the vast majority of my impressions of school education have been gained through contact with the products of those schools, either as my own contemporaries or as students. I have had a chance to observe personally work at a minor Public School and at a grammar school. Of the new universities, I know a little from friends who teach in them. There is one further limitation: I shall be discussing mainly the arts rather than the sciences. I admit to a woeful ignorance of scientific instruction in Britain and in the United States, and can only plead in mitigation that I do know something of historical studies there.

As suggested, I intend to argue that the British system and approach have much to commend them. I should like it understood, however, that I do not feel able to give an unqualified endorsement to British education, and it would be well to set out first those features of it which I find objectionable. These objections seem to me to be less to the philosophy of education than to the way in which it operates within a particular social context.

In the first place, the social imbalance involved in the British system as now constructed is a serious and often a limiting factor to be considered. One major feature here is the part played by the so-called Public Schools. Some of these schools are admittedly very good, but some of the best known and most influential ones are not so good as their reputation suggests and have exerted an undue and not wholly beneficial influence on the country.

I think that both Eton and Harrow are to be placed in this category. Their influence on Great Britain is undoubted; one need look no further than the educational background of cabinet ministers to see this. Something of this influence is indicated in the remark of Stanley Baldwin on forming his cabinet that "one of my first thoughts was that it should be a cabinet of which Harrow should not be ashamed." Harold Macmillan was to make a similar, though far less serious, comment with respect to Eton: "Mr. Atlee had three Old Etonians in his cabinet; I have six. Things are twice as good under the Conservatives."

Despite the predominance of Eton and Harrow, there is no clear proof that they are the best schools in the country; several other schools, such as Winchester, are certainly superior. What is more serious is that many Public Schools are plainly bad. The cramping, distorting atmosphere evoked in Alec Waugh's The Loom of Youth is unfortunately as true today of many Public Schools as he felt it was of his own pre-World War I Sherborne. What is particularly pernicious about this is the ability of the Public Schools to place their graduates in Oxford and Cambridge. It is obvious that Public School leavers represent only a small proportion of the total school population; yet they form a majority of the Oxbridge population. In 1957 the Kelsall Report showed that half of the Oxbridge students came from Public Schools. The Robbins Report of 1961 showed that 53% did, and the latest available figures give a similar percentage. It seems clear to me that what is involved here is a social cleavage and not one that represents intelligence. Those who come from families whose economic position allows them to indulge in private education have a far better chance of getting to Oxford or Cambridge than those of equal intelligence from a lower social class. Again, statistics point this up. Between 1920 and 1961, the number of students at British universities doubled; but all through this period the proportion which came from working class families remained at a fairly constant one-fourth, and of these only 22% went to Oxbridge.

I WANT TO STRESS CAREFULLY WHAT IT IS THAT I AM OBJECTING TO. It is clear that British education is dominated by elitist thinking, but it is not this exactly which seems to me to be at fault. What is wrong is that this elitist attitude is at present to be taken in a very social sense. Even the sorting of English children at eleven-plus into academic sheep and goats by state examinations is not above reproach on this point. Recent sociological studies have persuasively suggested that this supposedly educational division works on social lines to the extent that it works on any lines at all.

A second factor which also should be noted on the negative side is the predominance of Oxford and Cambridge in the sphere of higher education. This is something which goes well beyond the social question. Oxbridge has a reputation which in some respects is plainly unjustified. It is widely assumed to be the best, and it is clear that in some fields it is not (as, for example, in the study of local history, where the institute devoted to this subject at Leicester operates on a level unknown elsewhere in England).

This predominance may, in fact, be breaking down. One of the most exciting aspects of British education is the opening of eight new universities. They are creaming off some of the best of the younger Oxbridge teaching talent, and, at least in the case of the University of Sussex, they are attracting a significant number of candidates who, ten years ago, would have gone automatically to Oxford or Cambridge. But, even granted this, a worrying question lingers: once the initial period of enthusiasm is past, can they break the monopoly of Oxbridge any more than the civic universities of the 19th and 20th centuries have done? It seems clear that they must do so if British higher education is to be expanded in any meaningful way. Some, such as the Cambridge historian Peter Laslett, have gone so far as to suggest that, for the sake of British education generally, Oxford and Cambridge should be eliminated as undergraduate institutions and converted into something resembling an Institute of Graduate Studies. I am not sure that I would agree with this, but there is a real problem involved unlike anything we have in this country. The so-called superiority of the Ivy League is child's play in comparison.

One should also note a damaging side effect here, and that is the limited number of university places available. Britain has taken such a restricted elitist line in regard to university entry as to cut seriously into the training of potential leaders. UNESCO figures show that Great Britain ranks fourth from the bottom among all western nations in the number of university places per head. Only 4% of school leavers in Great Britain go on to university.

With these unfavorable comments in mind, we should now turn to consider those features of the British system which commend it. I make no pretence of compiling a complete catalogue; I only wish to isolate several aspects which seem particularly important to me. The first feature I would point to is a commitment to streaming classes, to separating the academically able from the less able. If I do not approve of the selection system of the eleven-plus in England, I certainly do approve of the philosophy behind it. I admit that schools in the United States have made some progress in this direction, especially in the last few years. But our few cautious steps are no more than a beginning, and there is much that still stands in the way. In some respects, we are still laboring under the delusion that equality is a fact — and it is plainly not a fact in terms of ability. That astute Frenchman de Tocqueville long ago suggested that inequality of intellect would be the last troublesome vestige of the Old Regime, but that democratic societies would submerge it in the course of their relentless drive for equality. For many years, our educational policy seems to have been devoted to fulfilling de Tocqueville's prophecy. We have now begun to move away; we must move even farther. It is, of course, nonsense to believe that the B.A. is part of everyone's birthright, but we often act as if we thought it were. This reduces the B.A. to meaningless and is one of the reasons for the wasteful and time-consuming emphasis on graduate work as a qualification for teaching. If the system were rightly organized, the B.A. would mean something, at least as much as the M.A. now demanded as a minimum.

A SECOND ASPECT OF BRITISH EDUCATION which seems to me to have overwhelming merits is the willingness to specialize. This is not just a question of specialization in subject; taken by itself, this sort of specialization has the dangerous potentiality to fragment learning into a series of non-communicating "cultures." It is much more importantly a question of approach to the subject. There is still lingering a popular idea in the United States that education is a survey of knowledge, not a way of thinking. This is particularly acute in my own subject of history and has been the occasion of much soul-searching in the profession in recent years. Our professional problem is summed up in our own survey courses; the historian's dilemma is about the only thing epitomized by these courses from Adam to the Atom Bomb. For the rest, they provide not much more than a crossword puzzle knowledge of history, and they can be traumatic either on the giving end or on the receiving end.

As I look back on a course I taught in another institution, I shudder. The history of Rome from its foundation to its fall, with the rise of Christianity as a side dish in three lectures, was no doubt something of a tour de force, but I quail when I think what the students who were exposed to it make of Roman history (or indeed of history as a subject). They may be able to remember a few names and a few dates or even be able to startle their compatriots with an ability to recognize a historical allusion. But as far as education goes, the whole process has almost certainly been a total loss. It has reduced historical understanding to the psychological level of a bad western (the sort in which you can spot the villain immediately because he is the only one wearing a black hat). The complex and fascinating pattern of history has been reduced to the melodrama of the "good guys vs. the bad guys."

One of the things which I found most exciting when I went to Oxford as a student was to deal in depth with my subject, to learn that history is an open and not a closed system, that even much of the so-called "factual" level is a matter of interpretation and not of memory. This sort of approach to the subject, which seems to me educationally far better, can best be taught by in-depth studies of brief periods with exposure to documents and related readings. I fear that in this country what we try to do instead is to give a smattering of factual knowledge and take this for education. This does not seem to me to approach the subject at the intellectual level of college or university work. Here, I feel, the English are plainly better off than we are; this is true even in their new universities where the students do not pursue a single subject (as they do at Oxbridge) but work under a system closer to the American majors and minors.

A third feature which I would like to point to is closely related to the second and involves the question of college education and thinking on one's own. It is a commonplace at Oxford that dons do not teach; they "take" students. As one Oxford don put it, "the term teaching should be avoided . . . it has undesirable connotations of the schoolmaster and the crammer." In the United States there is still a tendency to approach even college work as a form of indoctrination, as an endless series of facts to be learned, memorized, and spewed forth on equally endless examination papers. But by the time men are at college level, they should be able to approach their subject in a more mature manner than this. If they cannot, there is a grievous fault in their school preparation. The difference between school and college ought to be qualitative, not just quantitative; it should involve a new approach to learning, not just more work. Here, too, it seems to me that the English have achieved a more satisfactory level than we have. In Oxford tutorials, the students and the tutor are ideally, and in fact often, equals. Here, students tend to sit at the feet of the great man and mimic his words and prejudices. In short, they are avoiding thinking for themselves, and they do this because we tend to treat knowledge as a set of facts to be learned and not as a way of thinking, and because they are encouraged to do so by the very nature of the questions we ask on our examinations.

ROGER HOWELL, JR. '58 is Assistant Professor of History at Bowdoin. This article is based upon a talk which he delivered at the annual campus meeting of the Bowdoin Teachers' Club on April 24. Professor Howell was a Rhodes Scholar at St. John's College, Oxford University, England, from which he holds M.A. and D. Phil. degrees. He is the author of several articles on life at Oxford and in England which appeared in the ALUMNUS some years ago.

Professor Howell is also the author of several books which have either been recently published or are scheduled for early publication.

FINALLY, I SHOULD LIKE TO NOTE very briefly teaching technique. The Oxford tutorial system emphasizes independent, argumentative work and much writing. It is admittedly hard on the tutors and involves a heavier teaching load than is normal in this country. This may be enough to cause some to reject it; nonetheless, it does have some clear merits. The growing use of seminars in this country (instead of the dreary two lectures, one conference routine) may be a step in the right direction to get the best of both worlds. At least at Oxford the lecture system is treated with healthy scorn. I am not sure that I would agree with Bertrand Russell that lectures survive only because the modern world has failed to catch up with the medieval invention of printing, but it seems to me that the saying does contain some truth. Any honest lecturer will admit that normally his students could have spent the hour reading with greater profit.

There seem to me, then, several compelling advantages to the British system. Its frankly undemocratic basis seems sound, except that in practice this is done with a social bias and not an educational one. Its emphasis on specialization seems equally sound, as does its emphasis on thinking independently and argumentatively. So does its teaching technique, involving close personal contact, much writing, the defense of argued positions, and less reliance on the dogmatism of lectures. What I would like to see would be more students who are not afraid to disagree with their instructors because they fear bad grades or because they are too indifferent to think for themselves. Education is closely involved with interpretation and argument; but we often, I fear, put a premium instead on dogmatism and repetition.

On The Campus

Eleven Faculty Promotions

Eleven members of the faculty have received promotions. With their new grades, they are Professor of Biology James M. Moulton, Associate Professor of Psychology L. Dodge Fernald, Jr., Associate Professor of Chemistry Dana W. Mayo, Associate Professor of Mathematics Jonathan D. Lubin, Assistant Professor of Romance Languages Clifford R. Thompson, Jr., Assistant Professor of English Donald G. Adam, Assistant Professor of Economics John L. McEntaffer, Assistant Professor of English Herbert R. Coursen, Jr., Assistant Professor of Mathematics Robert W. Johnson, Assistant Professor of Mathematics Charles A. Grobe, Jr., and Assistant Professor of Sociology Walter R. Boland.

Three New Department Chairmen

In May President Coles announced the appointment of three Department Chairmen: Professor Samuel E. Kamerling in Chemistry, Professor Paul G. Darling in Economics, and Professor Alfred H. Fuchs in Psychology.

Professor Kamerling, who had previously been Chairman of the Chemistry Department, is Charles Weston Pickard Professor of Chemistry. A graduate of New York University, he joined the faculty in 1934. He is advisor to the undergraduate pre-medical students and in recent years has served as Coordinator for Bowdoin's summer programs.

Professor Darling joined the faculty in 1956. A graduate of Yale, he formerly taught at Rutgers University and at Carnegie Institute of Technology. In 1960-61 he held a Brookings Research Professorship for the study of "Inventory Fluctuations and Short Run Forecasting."

Professor Fuchs, a member of the faculty since 1962, is a graduate of Rutgers who taught previously at Ohio University, Ohio State University, and Mitchell College in Connecticut. In recent years he has been awarded several research grants from the National Science Foundation for projects involving studies of human memory.

Eight on Leave

Eight members of the faculty will be on leave during the 1965-66 academic year.

On sabbatical leave for the full year will be Professor of Philosophy Edward Pols and Associate Professor of Chemistry Gordon L. Hiebert. The former will hold a Fulbright Fellowship at the University of Florence in Italy, where he will work on a book on the philosophy of art. The latter will continue to serve as Science Supervisor for the United States Agency for International Development in India.

On sabbatical leave during the second semester only will be Professor of Government Athern P. Daggett '25, Professor of Romance Languages Eaton Leith, and Professor of Sociology Burton W. Taylor. Professor Daggett will continue his studies in international law and organization, much of the time at the Harvard University libraries. Professor Leith hopes to travel and study in France, and Professor Taylor plans to travel in Europe and perhaps study the prisons of the Scandinavian countries.

On leave of absence for the full year will be Professor of Economics James A. Storer and Associate Professor of Psychology L. Dodge Fernald, Jr. The former plans to do economic research for the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries of the Department of the Interior, and the latter will be a visiting professor at Cornell University this summer, next year, and in the summer of 1966.

Professor William C. Root, who is also Charles Weston Pickard Professor of Chemistry, will be on leave of absence during the second semester, as has been true in recent years, for the purposes of research and travel.

President Coles' Textbook

President Coles is the co-author of a newly published textbook, Physical Principles of Chemistry. He and the other co-author, Dr. Robert H. Cole of Brown University, based their book on the sophomore chemistry program which both taught at Brown. The publisher is W. H.

Department Chairmen Kamerling, Darling, and Fuchs.

Freeman and Company of San Francisco and London.

The book is distinguished from other physical chemistry textbooks by its early consideration of the structure of atoms and molecules.

President Coles received his Ph.D. in chemistry at Columbia in 1941, and Professor Cole received his Ph.D. in physics at Harvard in 1940. The two men met in 1943, when they both went to work with the wartime Underwater Explosives Research Laboratory of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts. Dr. Cole served as Research Supervisor of the project, and President Coles directed tests from a 76-foot fishing schooner converted to a floating electronics laboratory. His tests involved the underwater explosive power of depth charges, depth bombs, and torpedo warheads.

Spring Sports Roundup

The golf team successfully defended its state championship, but otherwise it was a generally frustrating spring sports season. The linksmen won two and lost three in their non-State Series matches. The baseball squad couldn't seem to lose against out-of-state opposition but couldn't seem to win in Maine, winding up with an 8-8 record. The tennis team posted a 4-5 slate and came within a match point of capturing the State Series title. Weakened by the loss of key men, the lacrosse squad finished with a 4-8 record. The track team ended with a 1-3 record in its dual meets, and the sailing squad had a satisfactory season while looking to next year's sophomores for needed additional strength.

The golf team, coached by Ed Coombs '42 and captained by Phil McDowell '65, defeated New England College 6-1 and New Hampshire 5-2, losing to American International 2-5, Williams and M.I.T. 0-7 and 2-5 respectively in a three-way match, and Lowell Tech 2-5. In the State Series the Polar Bears totaled 68 points, followed by Maine with 65, Bates with 64 and Colby with 19. Bill Wieners '67, who will be captain of next year's team, won the state intercollegiate individual crown, and Randy Baxter '65 tied for second place.

Coach Danny MacFayden's baseball team defeated Baltimore 6-1, Upsala 4-2, Amherst 15-3, Wesleyan 9-5, Northeastern 2-1, M.I.T. 10-3, Trinity 9-6, and New Hampshire 8-2. The squad lost to Loyola 8-11, Maine 2-3 and 3-7, Colby 2-9 and 0-8, Bates 1-4 and 5-7, and Springfield 3-5.

Outfielder-catcher Dick Condos '66 and shortstop Pete Pappas '67 were named to the All-Maine team as the result of their performances in State Series contests. In the six State Series games Condos had 10 hits in 22 tries for a .455 batting average, and Pappas banded out 7 hits in 23 at bats for a .304 average. For the season as a whole, Condos hit .370 and Pappas .326.

Pitcher-outfielder Bob Butkus '66, who won 4 games and lost 3 while piling up a .318 batting average, won honorable mention on the District 1 NCAA small college all-star team. Captain Ned d'Entremont '65, Bowdoin's other pitching mainstay, was credited with two victories and three defeats while rapping out 9 hits in 22 trips to the plate for a team-leading .409 average. Butkus and Condos will serve as co-captains of the 1966 team.

Outfielder Tom Zilinsky '65, a three-year letterman, was the first recipient of the newly established Francis S. Dane Baseball Trophy, which honors the memory of Francis S. Dane '96, father of Professor Nathan Dane II '37.

The tennis team, coached by Professor Dodge Fernald and captained by Steve Hecht '65, defeated Bates twice by identical scores of 7-2, split two matches with Colby by scores of 8-1 and 4-5, and split with Maine 6-3 and 4-5. The team lost matches to M.I.T. 3-6, Springfield 1-5, and Amherst 0-9. In the State Series standings, Maine led with a 5-1 record, and Bowdoin was second with 4-2. Phil Bradley '66 will be captain of next year's team.

The lacrosse squad, coached by Nels Corey '39, defeated Fairleigh Dickinson University-Madison 9-6, Nichols 10-1, New England College 23-5, and Worcester Polytech 9-4, losing to Hofstra 0-13, Stevens 6-15, Adelphi 2-14, C. W. Post 5-13, New Hampshire 6-8, Wesleyan 3-16, M.I.T. 3-10, and Tufts 3-7. The team's co-captains were Fred Bail '65 and Brian Murphy '65. Next year's co-captains will be Bill Allen '66 and Bob Mitchell '66.

The outdoor track team, coached by Frank Sabasteanski '41, defeated Vermont 85-63 and lost to Amherst 68-81, New Hampshire 63-81 and M.I.T. 60-81. Captain Alex Schulten '66, who was re-elected to the position for 1966, set a new Bowdoin hammer throw record with a heave of 202 feet, 11 inches in the New England intercollegiate championships. It was the longest collegiate throw recorded in the nation this year.

Among the other highlights of Bowdoin's track season was a new Bowdoin discus record of 155 feet, 5 inches, established by Mike McCutcheon '65. Bowdoin finished third in the State Meet. Schulten was awarded the Leslie A. Claff Track Trophy.

The sailing team, whose adviser is Professor Elroy O. LaCasce, Jr. '44, finished seventh in a field of 14 in the Boston Dinghy Club Cup races, one of the largest and most difficult regattas of the season and an event which included many large New England universities as well as South Carolina and Indiana. Skippers were Charles Witherell '65 and Commodore Sam Hartman '66, and crewmen included Morgan Grover '67 and Dean Milliken '67.

The Polar Bear sailors barely missed qualifying in the NEISA dinghy eliminations, and wound up fifth in a field of 13 in the Friis Trophy race. Representing Bowdoin in these two events were skippers Witherell, Jon Shoukimas '67, and Dick Lilly '67, and crewmen Eben Graves '67, Joel Duncklee '67, and David Farrell '67. — J.D.K.

Research Fellows

Ten members of the Class of 1965 have been appointed Undergraduate Research Fellows for the coming year. Beginning in September, each Fellow will participate, under the direction of a faculty member, in a research project in which the latter is independently interested. The purpose of the program is to engage the Fellow directly and responsibly in an attempt to extend man's knowledge in his field of interest and competence.

The list of Fellows and the subjects of their investigation is as follows: David E. Brewster of Falls Church, Va., "Social Science and Social Reform During the Period 1890-1935"; John L. Esposito of Portland, "Partial Reactions of Oxidative Adenosinetriphosphate Synthesis in Fractionated Cells"; Palma W. Hays, Jr. of East Point Ga., "Local Number Fields and Their Applications to Global Problems in Number Theory"; William G. Heath, Jr. of South Westport, Mass., "Linguistics and Twentieth Century Prosody"; Carl D. Hopkins of Rochester, N. Y., "Thin Solid Films."

Also David A. Lander of University City, Mo., "English Attitudes Towards the Protestant Cause in the Elizabethan and Early Stuart Period"; Andrew G. Loeb of Forest Hills, N. Y., "Revisions of the Maine Business Index"; John B. Morrison of Waltham, Mass., "Intermodal Transfer of Adaptation to Distorted Sensory Feedback"; Howard F. Pease of New Milford, Conn., "The Presence of 3-methoxypyridine in Cannel Coals"; and Richard W. Sharp, Jr. of Bound Brook, N. J., "Plasma Oscillations in Solids."

Library Closed for Summer

Hubbard Hall the College Library, is closed for general use this summer from June 11 to September 21, a move made necessary to enable the staff to prepare to move into the new Hawthorne-Longfellow Library in the fall. Librarian Richard Harwell says, "As much of the planning and preparation as possible will have to be done well ahead of the move. This will involve the use of the reading rooms to consolidate collections now partly in the stacks, partly under the Chapel, partly in other areas of the building difficult of access."

Campus Chest Results

Campus Chest Weekend at Bowdoin in March raised more than $2,000 for charity. Half of this amount was given to the Brunswick Area United Fund and the other half was divided among the Maine Heart Association, the Maine Cancer Society, the International Student Service, and the Elmhurst Center in Bath.

The students raised the money through a series of auctions, athletic events, dances, and a concert.

Andy Seager Wins Roosevelt Cup

Andrew J. Seager '66, the son of a missionary in Bechuanaland, South Africa, is the 1965 recipient of the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Cup. Established by Al-

Miss Jodi Hooke of Short Hills, N. J., was the 1965 Ivy Queen. A student at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Hooke '38 and the sister of Robert L. Hooke, Jr. '64. In addition, she has three Bowdoin uncles. Miss Hooke's date, shown here with her, was Harry L. Chen '67 of New Canaan, Conn.

pha Delta Phi in 1945, the Cup goes annually to "that member of the three lower classes whose vision, humanity, and courage most contribute to making Bowdoin a better college."

Seager, a high jumper on the track team, has served as Vice President of Phi Delta Psi Fraternity, as Treasurer of the Bowdoin International Club, as a Sunday School teacher, and as adviser to the Pilgrim Fellowship of the First Parish Church in Brunswick. In 1963 he was one of the Bowdoin students who visited Morehouse College in Atlanta, Ga., for a week, and during the spring vacation both this year and last year he was a member of a Project '65 team which brought information about college opportunities to qualified students in deprived areas. He is studying at Bowdoin under the African Scholarship Program of American Universities.

Computing Center Director Appointed

Myron W. Curtis '58, who is presently Research Assistant at the Wesleyan University Computer Laboratory, has been named Director of the Bowdoin Computing Center and Lecturer in Mathematics for 1965-66. He has his M.A. in mathematics from the University of California at Los Angeles and is a candidate for the Ph.D. degree at Wesleyan, where he has been working and studying since 1962.

The Computing Center, which will be moved from the Searles Science Building to Hubbard Hall when work on the new library building has been completed, includes an IBM 1620 computer and a punch-card input-output device for greater versatility and a common link with other IBM systems.

Two Grievous Losses

Within the past few weeks the College has suffered the loss of two loyal and devoted alumni. On June 24 Brigadier General Boyd W. Bartlett '17 died at the Castine Community Hospital after a long illness. A member of the Board of Trustees since 1961, he was one of only a few alumni who held five earned degrees. He taught at Bowdoin from 1927 until 1942 and at the United States Military Academy until his retirement in 1961.

On July 5 Dr. Charles S. F. Lincoln '91 died in Brunswick at the age of 95. A kindly, thoughtful, generous, vigorous, and youthful man even after he passed his 90th birthday, Doc was probably more nearly "Mr. Bowdoin Alumnus" than any other man.

The September ALUMNUS will carry accounts of the lives of both General Bartlett and Dr. Lincoln.

Wilbert Snow '07 (right) receives the first Bowdoin Distinguished Educator Award from Professor Albert R. Thayer '22 at the annual campus meeting of the Bowdoin Teachers' Club on April 22. The Award consists of a framed citation and a prize of $500.

ANDROSCOGGIN

Club President John Wheaton '58 reports that the Androscoggin Club has held a series of monthly luncheons this season, beginning in January. The speakers have been Professor Athern Daggett '25, Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason, Senior Center Director William Whiteside, News Services Director Joseph Kamin, and Professor Herbert Brown H'63. The luncheons will be resumed in the fall.

The spring dinner meeting and ladies' night was held at Steckino's Restaurant in Lewiston on Tuesday, May 18. President and Mrs. Coles were the guests of honor.

AROOSTOOK COUNTY

Retiring Club Secretary Lee Ludwig '52 reports that the Aroostook County Bowdoin Club held a spring dinner and ladies' night meeting on Thursday, May 20, at the Hotel Caribou, with 34 alumni, wives, and guests present. The special guests from the College were Director of Admissions and Mrs. Hubert Shaw '36.

Retiring President Phil Christie '36 presided. Elections were held, with the following officers named for the coming year: President, Dr. Clement Donahue '34; Secretary-Treasurer, Ferris Freme '42; and Alumni Council Member, Albert Putnam '36.

CONNECTICUT SHORE

Retiring President Hugh Mitchell '19 reports that the spring dinner meeting and ladies' night took place on Thursday, May 13, at the Longshore Country Club in Westport, when Professors Herbert Brown (English) and Jerry Brown (Religion) and their wives were special guests from the College. "I'm a conservative guy, but I would call it an outstanding success! About 80 people attended. As they arrived, everyone seemed to have a twinkle of anticipation in his eye. They milled around at the friendly pre-dinner reception and warmly welcomed all four Browns. They gave Herbie a real ovation both before and after his excellent speech, and they liked Jerry Brown, who gave us a five-minute 'curtain raiser' talk which was fitting and very well done. After the show, people stayed on, talking with the guests, for whom I heard lots of compliments. As people finally left, you could tell they had had a really good time!"

Following cocktails and dinner, there was a meeting with reports from the Secretary, Treasurer, and Committee Chairmen. Elections were held for 1965-66: President and Alumni Council Member, Paul Laidley '36; Vice Presidents, Gordon Knight '32 and James Zarbock '39; Secretary, Philip Pearson '36; Assistant Secretary, Richard Saville '44; Treasurer, Peter Mundy '53; Assistant Treasurer, Roland DiLeone '55. The Club also elected an Executive Committee, made up of James Dunlaevy '23, Hugh Mitchell '19, Gorham Scott '29, Weston Rankin '30, and William Hart '39.

The Club will hold its next meeting on Friday, October 8, at the Longshore Country Club, with President Coles as the guest of honor.

HAWAII

On a suggestion from the Alumni Office, Dave Coleman '54 of Honolulu organized an informal meeting of Bowdoin alumni and friends in Hawaii, on Monday night, May 3. The guest of honor and speaker was Geof Mason '23, Member at Large of the Alumni Council and President of the Bowdoin Club of Rhode Island, who was, with his wife, visiting their married daughter in Hawaii.

The group gathered at 6:30 p.m. at the Fort Shafter Officers' Club in Honolulu. A cocktail party was followed by dinner, and the group expressed special thanks to Bob Allen '41, who made the arrangements. Dave was elected master of ceremonies, following which there was an invocation and the presentation of a jade lei to Geof and a plumeria and orchid lei to Mrs. Mason.

Dave writes, "Eighteen men and wives were present! When you consider that there are only 14 alumni on the present Hawaiian list, with several unavailable in other parts of Hawaii, one an expectant father, and two on duty in Viet Nam, we had an extremely happy turnout! Present were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rising '30, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Allen '41, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Curtis '45, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Forman '53, Richard Goodman '53, Mr. and Mrs. David Coleman '54, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rigby '56, Lt. Charles Bridge '61, Mrs. Spencer Greason - wife of Spencer '62, who is presently in Viet Nam - Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Mason '23, and their daughter, Mrs. Barbara Northrop.

"After a sumptuous steak dinner with all the trimmings, we introduced ourselves and our wives and acquainted each other very briefly with what had happened to each of us since leaving Bowdoin. We then turned to our guest, and we were completely absorbed with his current news of the campus and immersed in nostalgia for days long since gone.

"The meeting was an informal event, so no business was conducted. After resolving that the next gathering would follow Harold Rising's return to Honolulu after three months in New England, we adjourned at 10:30 p.m., with 18 people excitedly talking about 'the next time' and individuals making informal plans for get-togethers with new or renewed Bowdoin friends. Geof and his wife left by ship for the West Coast less than 36 hours later but not before he had provided the necessary stimulus to get our group organized. He made our evening with a warm and winning talk. We appreciate his help and look forward to the possibility of starting a Bowdoin Club of Hawaii. Aloha!"

KENNEBEC VALLEY

The Kennebec Valley Bowdoin Club held a spring stag dinner meeting on Wednesday, May 19, at the Holiday Inn in Augusta. The 6:30 social hour was followed by dinner at 7:30, and about 25 alumni and guests were present.

President Tom Macomber '50 presided. Those present discussed the possibility of extending the term of officers from one year to two years, but it was the consensus that further discussion should be postponed until next fall.

Bill Arnold '51 reported for the Nominating Committee, and the following were elected officers for 1965-66: President, Roger Welch '52; Vice President, Jon Lund '51; Secretary-Treasurer, William Fraser '54; and Alumni Council Member, G. Thomas Macomber '50.

Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 and Instructor in English Herb Coursen both spoke briefly. The feature of the program was a slide presentation by Professor Thomas Riley '28, entitled "I Walk to Work." The slides and comments were well received by alumni who enjoyed seeing old campus scenes and faces as well as some new Bowdoin scenes and faces.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

The Bowdoin Club of New Hampshire held its spring stag dinner meeting on Thursday evening, May 6, at the Wayfarer Motor Inn in Bedford, a suburb of Manchester. Alumni and guests gathered for a 6:30 social hour and dinner at 7:30.

President Norman Milne '54 presided, and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Charles Howard '54; Vice President and Council Member, Dr. Frederick Waldron '39; and Secretary-Treasurer, Mayland Morse '42. Mr. Milne reported on recent Alumni Council activities and expressed thanks to Jack O'Donnell '37, who provided special refreshments for the meeting. Secretary Dutch Morse read special citations honoring Ezra Pike Rounds '20 (who is retiring after 45 years at the Phillips Exeter Academy) and Herbert Moore '48 (who has resigned as Headmaster of the Tilton School to accept a headmastership in Oklahoma).

Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 spoke briefly, bringing the latest news from the College, and then Mr. Milne introduced the principal speaker, Dr. Daniel Hanley '39, the College Physician. Dan showed marvelous color slides, with wonderful commentary, of the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo.

PORTLAND

The Bowdoin Club of Portland held its spring stag dinner meeting on Thursday, April 22, at Valle's Steak House on Brighton Avenue. About 50 alumni and guests gathered for a social hour, dinner, and an interesting program.

Retiring President Davison Osgood '53 welcomed alumni and guests and reported on some of the activities of the Club, including the fall sports night under the chairmanship of Ted Gibbons '58 and the subfreshman and Harvard sports nights under the chairmanship of Tom Sawyer '53.

Elections were held, with the following officers chosen for 1965-66: President, Richard Boyd '33; 1st Vice President, John Mitchell '50; 2nd Vice President, Charles Hildreth '53; Secretary-Treasurer, Albert Gibbons '58; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Robert Hazzard '54; and Council Member, Davison Osgood '53.

Also elected as Directors for the coming year were Herbert Bennett '50, Roland Cobb

'17, Erwin Cousins '24, Warren Eddy '14, Charles Kahill '34, Dr. Stephen Monaghan '48, Charles Ranlett '54, Tom Sawyer '53, and Eugene Waters '59.

Mr. Osgood introduced Overseer Jotham D. Pierce '39, who moderated a panel discussion on "Whither Bowdoin?". Participating were President Coles, Director of Admissions Hubert Shaw '36, Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason, Professor of Economics James Storer, and Overseer Louis Bernstein '22. Following opening remarks, the meeting continued with a long and interesting period of questions, answers, and general discussion.

The Portland Club continues to hold monthly luncheon meetings under the chairmanship of Charles Ranlett '54. Professor of Chemistry Samuel Kamerling spoke on April 7, Alumni Fund Secretary Robert Cross '45 on May 5, and Development Officer C. Warren Ring on June 2. Retiring Alumni Council Member Peter Bramhall '56 will speak on July 7, Treasurer of the College Charles Allen '34 on August 4, and Coach Frank Sabastanski '41 on September 1.

RHODE ISLAND

The Bowdoin Club of Rhode Island held its spring meeting at the Francis Farm in Rehoboth, Mass., on Thursday, May 20, when nearly 50 people — alumni, wives, children, parents, and new members of the Class of 1969 — gathered for a pleasant outing.

A 5:30 social hour was followed by a shore dinner at 7. The meal was tremendous! It included chowder, steamed clams, clam fritters, baked fish, baked potato, steamed lobsters, brown bread, several desserts, various soft drinks, and coffee. Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50, special guest from the College, declared it to be the most comprehensive shore dinner he had ever seen!

At the conclusion of the meal, Alumni Council Member Herb Hanson '43, who presided, introduced the Alumni Secretary, who spoke informally about current campus happenings. There followed an extended session of questions, answers, and general discussion, before the meeting was adjourned around 10 o'clock.

ROCHESTER

The Bowdoin Club of Rochester held its spring dinner meeting on Wednesday, May 5, at the Spring House in suburban Brighton. Present were 15 alumni, 12 wives, and the parents of George Yancey '68. Secretary-Treasurer-Elect Brian Flynn '57 reports, "Elections for the forthcoming year were held, with the following results: President, Ted Robbins '53; Secretary-Treasurer, Brian Flynn '57; and Alumni Council Representative Member, Ben Drake '29. Additional business consisted of a report on recent Alumni Council activities by Ben Drake, a unanimous vote of thanks to the outgoing president, Curt Brewer '56, for his efforts in organizing our group, and preliminary discussion by the Club of the possibilities for organizing subfreshman activities in our area.

"The highlight of the evening was an address by Professor William Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center. His talk on the Senior Program was informative and interesting to all present."

The Club will hold a fall meeting on Friday evening, October 8. The guest will be

SOUTHERN FLORIDA

Convener Virgil Pitstick '50 reports a spring dinner meeting and ladies' night on Tuesday, March 30, at the Kingsbay Yacht Club in Miami, with President Coles as the guest of honor. Thirty alumni and guests gathered for a 6:30 social hour, followed by dinner.

President Coles spoke about the student body and Bowdoin's admissions policy. He also brought the group news of faculty members and their activities in writing and research as well as teaching. He described the Senior Center and the senior program and spoke of the dedication of the Gymnasium on June 11.

Virgil reports, "The evening worked out splendidly; there seemed to be much enthusiasm about trying to have at least a yearly meeting of the group. It was suggested that perhaps we go a little north of Miami for the next meeting in order to encourage the people who live in the Fort Lauderdale, Palm Beach, and Boca Raton area to attend."

Bowdoin men interested in the Southern Florida Club, whether they are permanent residents or visitors to the area, may contact the Convener at 3800 Battersea Road, Miami.

YORK COUNTY

Secretary Cab Easton '48 reports that the spring dinner meeting and ladies' night of the York County Bowdoin Club was held on Thursday, May 13, at the Shawmut Inn in Kennebunkport. Twenty alumni, 16 wives, and four guests gathered for a social hour and dinner.

Elected officers for the coming year were President, John Roberts '36; Vice President, Laurence Staples '45; Secretary-Treasurer, Cabot Easton '48; and Alumni Council Member, Carroll Clark '21.

The Club also voted to cite Lawrence L. Page '24 for his 40 years of distinguished service to education, including 19 years as Principal of Sanford High School. Mr. Page retired at the end of the spring semester.

The guests from the College were Dean of Students and Mrs. A. LeRoy Greason and Executive Secretary and Mrs. Wolcott A. Hokanson, Jr. '50. The former described undergraduate life at the College, and the latter outlined Bowdoin's program of development and public relations and spoke about the many improvements resulting from the Capital Campaign.

HODDING CARTER, The Ballad of Catfoot Grimes and Other Verses: Doubleday and Company, New York, 1964; pp. vi and 66; $3.95.

Hodding Carter dedicates The Ballad of Catfoot Grimes, his first published collection of poems, to "whom it may concern." The title poem, and many of the smaller poems as well, are attacks on racial prejudice. Whom, we may ask, does racial prejudice concern? Hodding Carter's own answer, hammered out in numerous books as well as in the editorials he has been writing over the years in his newspapers, is that the concerned, or the ought-to-be-concerned, are first of all his own neighbors. In turning to poetry — and especially poetry written as these poems are in easily appreciated pounding rhythms and uncomplicated direct imagery — editor Carter has enlarged the number of those who may be concerned. Those of us who know not at first hand the dramatic manifestations of our national heritage of prejudice such as the Southern lynching party — which is the subject of the title poem — can and will involve ourselves imaginatively in what Carter's neighbors have known directly.

In giving us this imaginative extension of ourselves into the world of the Southerner, Carter is to be congratulated on trying to avoid leaving us with only a general feeling of guilt. The actions and attitudes of his fictional characters are presented concretely. We are not asked to regret in some vague way either the history or the present condition of the Negro in America. Attempting to take on ourselves the whole burden of sin of all mankind's hardness of heart is, as Carter shows he full well knows, the road to paralysis and further hardening of our hearts. These poems in their particularity invite us to know about Catfoot and Bee and Bee's old man and Cancy Dodd: Carter's characters are specific people and not bloodless abstractions.

Even the nameless voices in the lynch mob have faces if not names. We know the man who calls out the crude jest as they pour the gasoline on the dead Negro woman and her still living lover, whom the mob is preparing to turn into a living torch:

Don't waste it on her, can't you never learn
That a high brown gal's hot enough to burn.
We know, too, the man who turns in revolution to say, "Aw, Christ, I'm sick./Let's go home —." There is always a chance of learning to be human when we are faced with the choice of specific alternatives such as these.

The topics touched on in the shorter verses are many. While social criticism is implied in a majority of the poems, Hodding Carter shows that he has an observant eye and ear for less momentous — if not less important — things as well. Especially successful is his capturing of the rhythms of speech in his verse. Finally, his sense of Southern history and legend contributes to several of his best shorter poems.

ARTHUR H. COLE, "An Approach to the Study of Entrepreneurship," in Explorations in Enterprise, edited by H. G. J. Aitken: Harvard University Press, 1965; pp. x and 420; $9.75.

Among Bowdoin's contributions to United States intellectual life in the first half of the 20th century, none is more striking than that in the field of economic history. Starting with Guy Stevens Callender's brief tenure on the faculty just after the turn of the century, a series of outstanding Bowdoin teachers and alumni have served greatly to enrich our understanding of economic development. Arthur H. Cole '11, one of the more distinguished members of this group, was (and is) especially interested in a type of historical investigation centered on the businessman and his functions. Indeed, Cole became the leading member of a school whose research into "entrepreneurship" has given new direction to historical thinking.

The present selection is Cole's Presidential Address to the Economic History Association in 1946. In it he argues persuasively for broadening the economist's view of entrepreneurship to include innovation, management, and adjustment to external conditions and for making entrepreneurship, so defined, a major theme around which historical research can be organized. By concentrating on the decision-making process, one is able to view with better perspective the historical circumstances, both internal and external to the firm, which impel decisions and produce change.

These views were later implemented when Cole established the Research Center in Entrepreneurial History at Harvard. The present collection also contains a number of studies written along the lines envisioned by Cole, as well as a few setting forth different points of view.

Bringing these papers together in one volume (prefaced by the editor's review of accomplishments at the Research Center) serves a useful purpose in introducing students to an important and fruitful line of historical inquiry.

DANIEL LEVINE, Varieties of Reform Thought: The State Historical Society of Wisconsin, Madison, 1964; pp. xiii and 149; $3.00.

Professor Levine examines the basic philosophy of five individuals — Jane Addams, Samuel Gompers, Albert J. Beveridge, Edgar Gardner Murphy, and Robert M. La Follette — and one organization, The Civic Federation of Chicago. All of these names represent leading figures in the great wave of reform which swept the country between 1890 and 1914. They have often been grouped together and considered as parts of a single Progressive Movement.

By having the diligence to explore exhaustively all of the relevant materials and by having the insight and imagination to ask the right questions, Professor Levine has succeeded in putting an end to the notion that the Progressive Movement was a homogeneous entity. He effectively shows that the varieties within reform thought were more important and basic than the similarities. Addams and La Follette were convinced of the essential goodness of human nature; Beveridge thought that restraint was necessary to curb disorderly and destructive human impulses, and Gompers thought that all men were basically selfish; Murphy and the Civic Federation profoundly distrusted all impulses of "the masses." In their views on the state, on the economy, on power, on social change, and on many other fundamental questions, the reformers differed widely among themselves.

A thorough and brilliant examination of the philosophy of six major historical figures is certainly enough to find in one small book. But one is also tempted to ask, "Why did these reformers think as they did? What caused the differences among them?" Professor Levine does give some answers to these questions. The Civic Federation was motivated by "economic self-interest"; Jane Addams' career was profoundly influenced by the character of her father and his sudden death; Gompers' thought was marked by his upbringing in the crowded industrial sections of London and New York City and by his introduction to European liberalism while working in New York's cigar factories. These are partial answers, but much remains to be done in exploring the causes of social thought as a supplement to exploring its content. Professor Levine gives ample evidence in his book of having incorporated many of the insights of psychology, sociology, and political science. It is this kind of interdisciplinary approach which is necessary to answer the question of why people think as they do, and it is historians such as Professor Levine who are best equipped to provide this added dimension to the history of ideas.

Varieties of Reform Thought is a major contribution to American intellectual history. It is also a good lesson in how much can be accomplished by separating what is important from what is not. Professor Levine has succeeded in getting to the core of the philosophies espoused by the reformers. This little book is thus a consideration not only of the most important aspects of reform thought but also of those questions which must be answered by thinking individuals in any age.

Authors

HODDING CARTER '27, nationally known editor and author of several prose works, now turned poet, offers us another facet of his talents.

ARTHUR H. COLE '11 was for many years Professor of Business Economics and Librarian of the Baker Library at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. He is now retired.

DANIEL LEVINE is Assistant Professor of History at Bowdoin.

Reviewers

REGINALD L. HANNAFORD is Assistant Professor of English at Bowdoin.

WILLIAM D. SHIPMAN is Associate Professor of Economics at Bowdoin.

J. CLARENCE DAVIES, 3rd, a graduate of Dartmouth, after a period as Instructor in Government at Bowdoin, left the Faculty on July 1 for another position.

Notes

ARTINE ARTINIAN '31 is co-editor with two French scholars of a hitherto unknown novel by J. K. Huysmans, a major 19th century writer. Entitled Là-Haut, it was published in April by the Franco-Belgian firm Casterman. Professor Artinian discovered the original manuscript several years ago in Paris.

History at a Glance (Barron's Educational Series, Inc., Woodbury, N. Y. 95c) by ERNST C. HELMREICH, Professor of History at Bowdoin, should prove to be a valuable aid to the college or secondary school student in European History survey courses. Professor Helmreich has drawn up a chronological chart of European civilization which will help students to relate the political and cultural events of the main periods of history.

Early Songs of Uncle Sam (Bruce Humphries, Boston, $2.25) by GEORGE S. JACKSON '27 is a study of songs contained in popular collections printed in the United States from 1825 to 1850, as well as those in certain specialized collections: "Temperance Songsters," "Political Songsters," and "Infant Song-Books." We wish that at some future date Professor Jackson might publish the musical accompaniments to the songs in this valuable and interesting collection.

Chippy Chinchilla (for ages 4 to 10) by EVELYN F. REICHENBACH and ISABEL WHITTIER, illustrated by Sandra J. Truman, has recently been published at $2.50 by the Vantage Press, New York. Miss Whittier, the daughter of the late Dr. Frank N. Whittier of the Class of 1885, is well known to alumni as writer, traveler, and teacher.

Another delightful book which we recommend for alumni children and grandchildren is Dolly Moses — The Cat and the Clam Chowder by MARY ELLEN CHASE H'33, illustrated by Paul Kennedy and published at $2.95 by W. W. Norton and Company, New York.

News Of The Classes

1896 The Francis S. Dane Baseball Trophy, which honors the memory of our classmate, was awarded at Bowdoin for the first time on May 20. It went to Tom Zilinsky '65 of Dover-Foxcroft.

Presented to the College by friends and members of the Dane family, the Trophy is to be given each spring "to that member of the varsity baseball squad who, in the opinion of a committee made up of the Dean of the College, the Director of Athletics, and the Coach of Baseball, best exemplifies high qualities of character, sportsmanship, and enthusiasm for the game of baseball."

Frankie had the distinction of being the only lefthanded varsity infielder in the history of baseball at Bowdoin who played second base, shortstop, and third base.

Frankie's grandson Nathan Dane III '65 was graduated from Bowdoin in June, and a second grandson, Joseph Dane, will be a member of the Class of 1969, which enters in September. They are the sons of Nathan Dane II '37, a member of the Bowdoin faculty for some 20 years.

Charles Bellatty's address this summer is Surry Road, Ellsworth.

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
Jackson Heights, N. Y. 11372

The Ricker Classical Institute Alumni Aquilo in its spring issue carried a feature article concerning Mr. and Mrs. George Burpee. It traced his career with the New York consulting engineers firm of Coverdale and Colpitts, told of the Burpees' contributions to the affairs of the village of Bronxville, N. Y., where they have lived for many years, and concluded as follows: "In response to a request for advice for young alumni beginning their careers, Mr. Burpee said: 'The best advice I have to offer is the same advice that my wife and I have given our children. This is contained in William James' Brief Course in Psychology in the chapter on habit. If I may paraphrase it, it reads like this: no one need worry about his future in life if he will do every job that he tackles to the very best of his ability. He will then awake some day to find himself one of the competent men in his profession.'"

1905 Secretary, Ralph N. Cushing

Don Dennis has a new address at 1326 Park Row, La Jolla, Calif.

Melville Gould is retired, is a tax consultant, and has 27 grandchildren. His address is 156 Cedar Street, Bangor.

During the past winter Alton Pope served as Acting Convener for the Bowdoin Club of St. Petersburg. The Papes sailed for Europe on June 2 and expect to return home around August 1.

Paul Eames '21 and his wife, Betty, riding camels in Egypt earlier this year. Paul reports, "Getting aboard one of these beasts is something like straddling the front end of a Buick automobile, and riding one is like nothing I had ever tried before. Apparently the fore legs have one gait, while the rear ones have another. Anyway, we did it."

Boothbay Harbor

Two weeks after being named "Senior Citizen of the Year" by the Cass City (Mich.) Chamber of Commerce, Meredith Auten was honored again when Hills and Dales General Hospital officials authorized the hanging of a life-sized portrait of him in recognition of the major part that he played in the building of the Hospital, now five years old.

On June 10 the York Chamber of Commerce honored Lester Bragdon for his many years as a trial justice and attorney in that town. He was a trial justice for 35 years, serving until May 7 of this year.

Class Secretary Bill MacCormick is much too modest a man to write this note, so the Editors are writing it for — and about — him. On April 22 the Boothbay Harbor Rotary Club presented to Bill a Rotary Lifetime Service Award, "in recognition of his kind, friendly, and sincere service to mankind" and "his contribution to building a better society with his ever-willing hand extended to assist, educationally, socially, spiritually, and recreationally."

The citation which Bill received referred to him as "A Communitarian, known and remembered by his smiling face, his extended hand of fellowship, his sincere interest in the welfare of his fellow man, his willingness to participate and assist when and where needed, as well as his thoughtful evaluation of the efforts of others."

The Boothbay Register for April 29 said many other things about Bill, but he has blushed enough!

Francetown, N. H.

Class Secretary Al Gray did a fair amount of teaching this past year as a substitute in five different high schools in the Monadnock area — in French, English, Latin, and social studies.

1916 Secretary, Edward C. Hawes

For eight years Harry has been a member of the Zoning Appeal Board in Portland.

1920 Secretary, Sanford B. Cousins
23 McKeen Street
Brunswick

Fred Kileski was not able to attend our 45th in June, but he reports that he is getting better every day.

Harold Prosser is still working for the George F. Cram Company of Indianapolis, Ind. He is a competitor of Hugh Blanchard '18, whom he often sees. Harold's son, Norman, has two children. He is a lieutenant in the Navy, has his master's degree in operations research, and has recently qualified for command.

The Prossers' address is P.O. Box 622, Woodbury, N. J.

The Bowdoin Club of Brunswick and Bath has re-elected Emerson Zeitler to another term as Alumni Council Member.

1921 Secretary, Norman W. Haines
247 South Street
Reading, Mass.

Carroll Clark is the new Alumni Council Member for the York County Bowdoin Club. He has also been re-elected Governor of the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of Maine.

Don Clifford will become fully retired on December 3 of this year.

Sanger Cook retired last fall and is "taking it easy" — which means golf, traveling, writing a history of the town of Pittsfield, and "gradually becoming a sort of walking encyclopedia on local color, past and present."

Pop Hatch writes that his grandson, David D. Rust of Cohasset, Mass., has been admitted to Bowdoin. David will enter as a Freshman this fall. His father is Donald E. Rust, Jr. '35.

Harry Helson's son is Professor of Mathematics at the University of California in Berkeley, and his son's wife is a psychologist. Harry's daughter and her husband are both psychologists at the University of Connecticut. Harry has seven grandchildren (three girls and four boys) and continues to be active in teaching, writing, and research. His address is Department of Psychology, Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kan.

Woodie Hone has been elected to a fourth term as President of the Middlesex County Retired Teachers Association in New Jersey.

Stewart Kurtz retired on July 1 but has a full-time consulting job for the next year. His three sons are all married, and he and his wife have six grandsons. Stewart is still publishing papers on chemistry and expects to have a paper for the Division of Petroleum Chemistry at the American Chemical Society in September.

Paul Larrabee, who retired as Biddeford Superintendent of Schools in 1963, teaches at the University of Maine on a part-time basis. He reports having one wife, two sons, and six grandchildren.

On March 4 Gov. Milliken received an Honor Award from the United States Department of Labor at the Departmental Auditorium in Washington, D. C., in recognition of "his above average performance and outstanding dedication over the years and for his devoted efforts on behalf of the United States Employment Service in the development and implementation of methods and procedures which have simplified the budget process and strengthened the employment service operation as it affects the local office."

Webb Noyes continues to work at Colby College on a half-time basis. In addition, he is Consultant Librarian for the Thayer Hospital Medical Staff Library. His address is 313 Main Street, Waterville.

Jock St. Clair will retire on October 1 of this year.

1922 Secretary, Albert R. Thayer
40 Longfellow Avenue
Brunswick

John Bachulus has been elected Vice President of the Bowdoin Club of Brunswick and Bath.

On July 1 Widgery Thomas was succeeded as President of the Canal National Bank by his son, Widgery Thomas, Jr. '47.

12 Sparwell Lane
Brunswick

Jim Dunlaevy, who has a son in the Class of 1968 at Bowdoin, is not looking forward to retirement in 1966. Jim's address is Cat Rock Road, Cos Cob, Conn.

Late in April Geof Mason wrote, "On Monday, May 3, a group of 16 Bowdoin people, alumni and wives, convened by Dave Coleman '54, are to gather at the Cannon Club in Honolulu, Hawaii. According to Dave, this is the first Bowdoin meeting in the Islands, unless there may have been some impromptu gathering during the war. I shall do my best to bring as much news of the College as possible to the group. Sally and I are visiting our daughter, whose husband is doing a year's research in oceanography at the University of Hawaii."

In June Walter Whitney retired as Professor of English at the University of Maine.

209 Rosedale Heights Drive
Toronto 7, Canada

On May 30 Miss Louise Gulick, the daughter of the Halsey Gulicks, was married to 2nd Lt. W. Davis Van Winkle of Summit, N. J. She is a graduate of Middlebury College and is employed by the Geological Survey in Washington, D. C. He is also a graduate of Middlebury and is stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., with the Army Corps of Engineers.

Larry Page's new address is 104 River Road, R.F.D. 1, Westbrook.

In May Doug Young reported, "I'm still playing nursemaid, housekeeper, gardener, and salesman after six weeks. Russ is still in bed with sciatica, although it has let up some this week. Otherwise we are healthy and happy. Appetites are good, and we continually find causes for laughter. What more do we need?" The Youngs live on Middle Road Turnpike, Woodbury, Conn.

1925 Secretary, William H. Gulliver, Jr.
30 Federal Street
Boston, Mass.

A Boston Herald story for May 24 says, in part, "Harry F. Eastman of Fryeburg is credited with saving the famed 'Doughnut Tree' from a burial in the town dump. The 200-year-old elm was sawed off several years ago just above the curiously shaped limb which made the 'doughnut.'"

"In a town meeting last March, citizens voted to have the remaining 15-foot bole cut down and buried. Voters felt the tree was rotting and not worth preserving. But the tree surgeons who performed the operation Saturday found little rot.

"Eastman said he plans to chemically preserve a section of the tree and put it on exhibition at his nursery."

Charlie Hildreth has been elected Chairman of the Board of The Emery-Waterhouse Company in Portland, of which he had been President since 1937. He is now President of Edwards and Walker Company, which was purchased recently by Emery-Waterhouse.

The Manger Hay-Adams Hotel
16th at H Street, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Earl Cook, whose sister, Miss Irene J. Cook, died on May 7.

Betty and Ken MacLean have three children. Bruce (18) will be a sophomore at the University of Washington, Sylvia (16) wants to study languages and get into the Foreign Service, and Paul (14) wants to be a scientist. Betty is a full-time case worker for the Washington State Department of Public Welfare and has a child welfare case load. Ken himself, after a mild heart attack in August of 1963, spent all of 1964 in a chemistry laboratory, doing research to take sulfate pulp mill waste turps, remove the odor, and then separate out the useful products. He and the maintenance man built a production plant, and Ken trained four operators (it is a 24-hour, seven-day-a-week operation) and is now project engineering some changes.

Ken's position is with the Westport Chemical Company in Longview, Wash., where his address is 2825 Maple Street.

In June Harold and Anne Stubbs had two children graduate from college — Jonathan from the University of Massachusetts and Marcia from Franklin College. During the spring the parents took a two-month tour of Italy, France, Switzerland, Austria, Germany, and Holland, returning by way of London. Their address is Box 163, Dover, Mass.

George Wood has four grandchildren — his daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Collins, in California has two boys, and his son, George C. Wood, in Boston has two girls. George himself has always spent summers in Maine and is looking forward to living there permanently.

1927 Secretary, George O. Cutter
618 Overhill Road
Birmingham, Mich.

The Hodding Carters have given $10,000 to Tulane University to establish a library fund in memory of their youngest son, Thomas H. Carter. Their contribution matches a similar amount given to Tulane by an anonymous donor for use by the Howard-Tilton Memorial Library. The total of $20,000 has established the Thomas Hennen Carter Memorial Fund, the largest single endowment in the Tulane library system.

Thomas was a freshman at Tulane when he died on April 27, 1964.

On April 13 Hodding inaugurated the Carlos McClatchy Memorial Lecture Series at Stanford University in California when he spoke on "The Tale of Two Cities." In his talk he compared the attitudes and traditions concerning race relations in Greenville, Miss. (his town), and McComb, Miss.

On May 15 Don Webber gave the centennial address, "A Century of Preparation," as part of the 100th anniversary observance of the Congregational Church of Presque Isle.

1928 Secretary, William D. Alexander
Middlesex School
Concord, Mass.

Maurice Graves spent his customary winter vacation in Guadalajara, Mexico, with golf and photography as his primary interests.

Dick Thayer's middle daughter, Joan, will enter Centenary College for Women in New Jersey in the fall.

Frank Walch's wife, Phyllis, was selected Brunswick's first Mother of the Year in May by the Knights of Columbus. The Walches have three children — Stephen, who will be a junior at the University of Maine in the fall; Dennis, who will be a senior at Brunswick High School; and Martha, who will be a sophomore at Brunswick High.

1929 Secretary, H. LeBrec Micoeau
c/o General Motors Corporation
1775 Broadway
New York, N. Y.

In the fall Ralph Edwards will become Professor of English at California State College, California, Pa.

Brewster Page has been re-elected Secretary-Treasurer of the Eastern Slopes Airport Authority, which is charged with the operation and maintenance of the Fryeburg Airport. He is an Oxford County Commissioner.

Phil Smith has been elected Treasurer of the Massachusetts Bankers Association.

175 Pleasantview Avenue
Longmeadow 6, Mass.

Phil Blodgett wrote in May, "My brother Allen '21, who has now been retired for a year, was out for a visit the past two weeks and is visiting friends in California before returning to Chicago, where he maintains the family homestead, although now a widower. Sisters Bee and Louise, the twins (Wheaton '28), are both planning trips to Europe this summer. Bee is conducting her ninth tour for the Schilling Travel Agency of Minneapolis.

"Our daughter Judy Benson has a son and a daughter, so we are grandparents. Our second daughter, Martha, is at home, working half days and attending the University of Washington evening sessions, where she hopes eventually to get a degree and become a teacher."

Phil, who continues to be Librarian of the Everett (Wash.) Public Library, picked the winner of the Kentucky Derby, Lucky Debonair, and in the process got a good deal of publicity in the local press.

Vaughn Clay has been promoted from Assistant Vice President to Vice President and General Manager of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation. He has his headquarters in New York City. Vaughn has been with Dunlop since 1930 and has served in both sales and production positions.

Carter Lee continues to be a member of the staff of the Attorney General of Massachusetts as an Assistant Attorney General.

Early in June Edmund Lord wrote, "First grandchild, Sean Geoffrey O'Sullivan, was born in New York City on Christmas Eve, 1964. Just returned from a visit to our elder daughter, Frederica (Mrs. Nigel D.) Rogers, who has moved from Munich to London, where her husband is a concert tenor and she is in television. Side trip to Gerald Durrell's Zoo on Isle of Jersey — fascinating."

Art Orne, an Assistant Comptroller in the Treasurer's Department of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, has been put on special assignment in the Foreign and Banking Division, pending transfer to the International Department as Senior Financial Representative in Germany.

Art joined Du Pont in 1935 and became an Assistant Comptroller in 1955.

In May Vance Williams received a certificate in recognition of 15 years of accident-free driving for the Brunswick Post Office.

1931 Secretary, Rev. Albert E. Jenkins
1301 Eastridge Drive
Whittier, Calif.

In May Dwight Andrews wrote, "Ran into Dave Perkins, who wanted to sell his Belmont house. Being in the real estate business, I offered the services of my office, and we found him a buyer. Dave spends all the time he can at his place in Maine. He has a son at Harvard Medical School and a married daughter."

Dwight's address is 17 Brown Street, Cambridge 38, Mass.

"From Victor Hugo to Jean Cocteau," an exhibition of 174 portraits of French writers of the 19th and 20th centuries, is on exhibit at the Art Gallery of the State University College, New Paltz, N. Y., from May 28 to August 6. The works are from the collection of Artine Artinian. They are in many media, including oils, watercolor, pen, and charcoal, and they represent a wide range of styles, such as realistic painting on porcelain, political caricature for periodical magazines, cartoons, and self-portraits.

Artine is co-editor with two French scholars of a hitherto unknown novel by J. K. Huysmans, a major 19th century writer. Entitled Là-Haut, it was published in April by the Franco-Belgian firm Casterman. Artine discovered the original manuscript several years ago in Paris.

Blanchard Bates had two daughters married in 1964. Leila was married to Professor Cevat Erder on September 2, and they are living in Ankara, Turkey. Barbara was married on October 30 to Frederick W. Marshall, Jr., and they are living in Boston.

Elias Thomas writes, "It would be appreciated if any member of 1931 who has ideas for the 35th Reunion would confer with me at 21 Orchard Street, Portland."

1932 Secretary, Harland E. Blanchard
195 Washington Street

From 1937 to 1944 Mr. Merriam taught modern languages at Wilbraham Academy in Massachusetts, and during the next three years he was at St. Paul's School in New Hampshire. In 1947 he joined the faculty at Phillips Academy, where in 1962 he became Chairman of the Spanish Department. During World War II he spent four months as a civilian studying Japanese at the U. S. Naval Language Training School in Boulder, Colo. He did graduate work at Middlebury College in the summer of 1944 and at the National University of Mexico in the summer of 1947. A former Treasurer, Vice President, and President of the New England Modern Language Association, he was a member of the New England Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish.

Mr. Merriam is survived by his wife, Mrs. Evangeline Forti Vardavoulis Merriam, whom he married on June 15, 1955, in Rockland; a daughter, Ann of Andover; a stepdaughter, Iris Vardavoulis of Andover; a stepson, Ion Vardavoulis of Andover; his mother, Mrs. Parker Merriam of Rockland; a brother, Paul G. Merriam of Rockland; and two sisters, Mrs. Richard Thomas of Camden and Mrs. Charles Gross of Arcadia, Calif. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Kappa Sigma Fraternities.

JAMES PREBLE HEPBURN '38

Dr. James P. Hepburn, Chief of Anesthesiology at the Lowell (Mass.) General Hospital, died at his home in Milton, Mass., on May 5, 1965. Born on May 19, 1916, in Boston, he prepared for college at Bordentown Military Institute in New Jersey and following his graduation from Bowdoin entered Tufts Medical School, from which he received his M.D. degree in 1942. After his internship and residency, he served in the Army Medical Corps for two years, from 1944 to 1946, being discharged as a captain. He practiced general medicine and surgery in Milton for four years and was then for two years a resident in anesthesiology at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. He was Chief Anesthesiologist at the Milton Hospital before becoming Chief of Anesthesiology at Lowell General.

A Diplomate of the American Board of Anesthesiologists, Dr. Hepburn was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Benevolent Society, the American College of Anesthesiologists, the American, Massachusetts, and New England Societies of Anesthesiologists, and the American, Massachusetts, and Norfolk County Medical Societies. He was also a member of the Milton-Hoosic Club and the First Congregational Church in Milton. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ruth Bartelt Hepburn, whom he married on November 6, 1937; a son, J. Peter Hepburn '62 of Hanover, Mass.; a daughter, Miss Sarah E. Hepburn of Milton; two brothers, Dr. Nelson T. Hepburn '41 of Norwood, Mass., and Johnston S. Hepburn of Deerfield, Mass.; his mother, Mrs. James J. Hepburn of Deerfield; and two granddaughters. His fraternity was Psi Upsilon.

WELLS SEYMOUR WETHERELL '38

Wells S. Wetherell, Executive Vice President for Sales with A & W Root Beer Company, died on April 10, 1965, in Pacific Palisades, Calif. Born on March 5, 1917, in Hartford, Conn., he prepared for college at Central High School in Omaha, Neb., and following his graduation from Bowdoin joined Consolidated Mills, one of the largest flour milling organizations in the Middle West. He was later for three years a sales representative for a structural steel firm. During World War II he served for three years in the Navy as a lieutenant, winning the Silver Star as a PT boat commander in the Pacific. In 1946 he became an industrial engineer with Trans-World Airlines in Kansas City, Mo., and in 1947 he joined the Fairmont Foods Company in Nebraska. During the Korean War he returned to active duty in the Navy as a lieutenant commander and in October of 1951 rejoined Fairmont as Ice Cream Merchandising Manager.

In 1958 Mr. Wetherell joined A & W Root Beer Company, with which he was successively Regional Manager for the Southeastern United States, a sales promotion field consultant, Vice President of A & W Development Corporation, and Executive Vice President for Sales. One of his first contributions was a complete sales training program for drive-in car hostesses. He also conceived and carried out the idea of a model drive-in for franchise selling and was responsible for The A & W News Dispenser, his company's first all-customer publication. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elinor Williams Wetherell, whom he married on October 28, 1942, in New York City; a daughter, Carol; his mother, Mrs. Edith Wetherell of Manchester, Conn.; and a sister, Mrs. Geraldine Sterling, also of Manchester. His fraternity was Psi Upsilon.

JOSEPH GREGORY WADE '57

Joseph G. Wade died on March 3, 1965, in Beverly, Mass., after a long illness. Born on March 11, 1936, in Salem, Mass., he prepared for college at Salem Classical High School. At Bowdoin he majored in government, was Chaplain of Sigma Nu Fraternity, was a member of the Newman Club, and played interfraternity athletics. After his graduation in June of 1957 he entered the Marine Corps, in which he served as a Lance Corporal with the Second Division at Camp Lejeune, N. C. Following his return to civilian status in September of 1959, he was employed as a technical writer at Bomac, Inc., in Beverly, Mass., and later as a writer of group insurance contracts at the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company while attending the Evening Division of Boston College Law School.

During the academic year 1963-64 Mr. Wade taught Latin and English at the Altmar-Parish-Williamstown Central School in Parish, N. Y. He is survived by his father, Patrick H. Wade of Danvers, Mass.; a sister, Mrs. J. Lyell Sanders, Jr. of Wayland, Mass., and a brother, Dr. Philip B. Wade of Quaker Hill, Conn.

ROLAND LEE MCKAY Medical 1908

Dr. Roland L. McKay, who had practiced medicine in Augusta for more than half a century, died at his home there on May 25, 1965. Born on September 8, 1884, in Vassalboro, he prepared for college at Brunswick High School, attended Bowdoin for two years, and was graduated from the Medical School of Maine at Bowdoin in 1908. He interned at St. Barnabas Hospital in Portland and the Augusta State Hospital, practiced for a year in Princeton, and then, in 1910, entered the general practice of medicine in Augusta. During World War I he served as a first lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps. He was a Kennebec County Medical Examiner from 1924 to 1949 and was Chief of Staff at the Augusta General Hospital for ten years. A member of the Selective Service Appeals Board from 1941 to 1943 and again from 1951 to 1955, he was President of the Maine Medico-Legal Society in 1944 and served as Chairman of the State Board of Registration of Medicine from 1946 to 1949.

Dr. McKay was Chairman of the State of Maine Advisory Committee on Procurement and Assignment of Doctors, Dentists, and Veterinarians for some years, including the period from 1943 to 1946. He had also served as a Councilor of the Maine Medical Association, as a member of the War Manpower Commission, and as Medical Examining Officer for the National Guard in 1942. He was a member of several Masonic bodies and the American Legion. Surviving are two sons, Murray H. McKay of Dunbarton, N. H., and Roland McKay of Phoenix, Ariz.; seven grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren. His fraternity was Kappa Sigma.

A Point of Departure

AT COLLEGES, like at all human institutions, the tasks of preservation, restoration, and innovation seem endless. At a college like Bowdoin, which has a precious tradition of excellence of many years standing, the tasks seem exceedingly difficult at times. What at the College should be preserved or restored? What new ideas should be introduced? These are questions that are never treated lightly by serious-minded men.

Appropriately, all three are subjects for discussion in this issue. In a forthright manner, DeLaney Kiphuth states why Bowdoin should preserve its long-standing policy of "athletics for all." Similarly, Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason Jr. points out the need of revitalizing certain aspects of the fraternity system if it is to be restored to its former importance. Examples of innovation include the Senior Center and the new summer programs in mathematics and music.

No one segment of the College—alumni, faculty, administration, or students—has all the solutions, and no aspect of the institution—either new or long standing—should be above discussion. A free and honorable exchange of ideas is always needed. —E.B.

THE COLLEGE

Publish or Perish?

FOR SOME years, many a small college has boasted of its "teaching faculty." This phrase gained its popularity about the same time that some larger universities were being accused of following a policy of "publish or perish" in promoting faculty. Many people—no doubt encouraged by the lack of scholarly activity on some campuses that claimed teaching faculties—concluded that good teaching and research must be incompatible at the undergraduate level.

In his latest report to the Governing Boards, President James S. Coles takes a few swipes at this tired thinking. "Creative writing, creative art, creative music or creative research does not preclude good teaching," he writes. "On the contrary, incompetence in research and scholarly study is often accompanied by incompetence in the classroom."

A man has to have "an interest in undergraduates and competence in teaching" to remain on the Bowdoin faculty. If he expects to occupy one of the "limited and precious positions with continuing tenure," he must make additional, valuable contributions to the College and her students.

Recognition of scholarly productivity as one avenue to promotion is not intended to exclude the professor who evidences a strong institutional commitment through service to the College "on faculty committees or in faculty administrative positions; [or] in some cases, outstanding leadership on the Faculty or in education."

Concludes the President: "American education said good-bye to Mr. Chips a generation ago, and the college 'don' has been replaced by a modern generation of able and alert young teacher-scholars."

The Good Life

THE cost-of-living is higher in Brunswick than in Boston or New York, according to John A. Doig '65.

Doig, who spent a large part of his senior year gathering data for an honors thesis, says the typical Brunswick family spends $6,113 for all goods and services. In New York, the average is $5,617, while in Boston it is $6,003.

The sharpest differences come in housing costs, largely because of the longer winters. The average for rent, heat, utilities, house furnishings and household operations in Brunswick amounts to $1,863, as opposed to $1,145 in New York and $1,689 in Boston.

A summary of Doig's work appeared in the June issue of Maine Business Indicators, which is published by The Center for Economic Research at the College.

Senior Center, Aged 1

AS closely as any new-born baby has ever been, the Senior Center Program was carefully nurtured and observed during its first year.

Prudence dictated as much, for the College had staked its reputation as one of the nation's leading centers of learning on an academic program that some educators saw as the most exciting innovation in undergraduate learning since Haverford's Honors Plan. Others, with equal sincerity, were highly skeptical.

Educated people seldom speak of either total success or failure, so the guarded references to the program in the Reports of the President, Dean of the College, and Director of the Senior Center to the Governing Boards in June hardly came as a surprise.

All three pointed out problems that had arisen: occupying the Center before it was completed; taxing teaching loads brought on by the seminars; the almost endless stream of visitors.

But the College pursued the program with vigor. During the year there were 56 lectures, 12 concerts, 48 receptions for guests ranging from Linus Pauling to Michael Harrington, 82 formal dinners, and 25 semester-long seminars.

Prophesies that the Center would divorce seniors from the rest of the College or would drastically weaken the fraternity system were not fulfilled.

Instead, the program was enthusiastically received by the 167 seniors who willingly and graciously accepted the intrusions of visitors in exchange for the distinction of being the first class to reside in the Center. Even undergraduates became convinced of the program's worth and almost all were looking forward to the time when they would be participants.

Seeing higher education's great task as instilling a "better understanding of the demands our society must make on our educated leaders," Senior Center Director William B. Whiteside wrote in his report: "Thanks to the Senior Center, thanks even more to the courage which Bowdoin demonstrated in undertaking so bold an experiment, this College is better prepared and better motivated to carry out this task than at any time in its recent history."

Harmonic Ambassadors

IN mid-July the College's famed augmented double quartet, the Meddiebempsters, left from McGuire AFB, N. J., to begin an eight week tour entertaining U. S. servicemen in the European Command.

Although it was the first European trip sponsored by the USO for current members of the Meddiebempsters, the tour marked the ninth troop entertainment mission for the Meddies since their first in 1948.

In Honorable Chairs

THE prestige of the academic chair goes back to the pre-Renaissance, when lords and other dignitaries (including professors) sat in chairs, and commoners were relegated to benches.

Today most chairs are endowed and reserved for the best scholars at a college or university. Being named to one is a great distinction.

Two men were so honored at Bowdoin this summer, when President Coles announced the appointments of Prof. Dan E. Christie '37 as Wing Professor of Mathematics and Prof. John C. Donovan as DeAlva Stanwood Alexander Professor of Government.

Their appointments leave only three of the College's 16 endowed, named professorships vacant of active teachers (including one permanently reserved for a visiting scholar, yet to be named for 1965-66).

Dr. Christie, 49, was graduated summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa. He returned to the College in 1942 after taking a master's and Ph.D. at Princeton and putting in a year as a Henry Fellow at St. John's College, Cambridge University.

Three years ago he was one of the architects of a proposal that got the College a $37,500 grant—first of its type—from the Research Corp.

Dr. Christie had argued that the usual composition of a department at a small college—one specialist in each area—put Bowdoin at a disadvantage in competing against large universities for top-flight mathematicians. His formula: concentrate in fewer areas and hire more men of related professional interests. With the Research Corp. money the department hired two algebraists to fill one vacancy, subsequently added two more on its own. This fall the department has added still another with the help of an additional grant of nearly $12,000 from the Research Corp.

Dr. Christie is the fourth professor to hold the Wing Professorship, endowed in 1906 by Col. Isaac Wing, Class of 1856.

The appointment of Dr. Donovan, 45, to an endowed chair came less than six months after he resigned as the nation's first full-time Manpower Administrator to accept an appointment as a full Professor of Government at the College last February.

Before joining the Department of Labor in 1962, he was an administrative assistant to Sen. Edmund S. Muskie H'57 of Maine. He was a special assistant to Undersecretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz and was named Executive Assistant to Mr. Wirtz when the latter was appointed Secretary of Labor in September, 1962. He was appointed Manpower Administrator in March, 1964.

Dr. Donovan was graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Bates College in 1942. He served in the Navy during World War II, took his graduate degrees at Harvard, and in 1949 returned to his alma mater, where he taught for 10 years. In June he was elected to the Bates Board of Trustees.

Dr. Donovan is the second member of the faculty to hold the Alexander Professorship. It was established in 1926 through the bequest of Mrs. Anne Bliss Alexander, widow of the Hon. DeAlva Standwood Alexander, Class of 1870 and President of the Board of Overseers from 1919 until his death in 1925.

Doc Succumbs at 95

"My love for Bowdoin, and my interest in its sons, past, present, and future, whenever and wherever our trails may cross, will continue to tick until my clock stops. Until then I remain Charlie or Charles to the old boys, 'Doc' to the younger generation. Ave Atque Vale." —C.S.F.L., 1952

HE was a man of deep-seated convictions, possessed of a salty wit, with a twinkle in his eye and a prodigious memory for names, faces, and events. A modern man—his countless friends many years his junior kept him young—he was imbued with the classic virtues of courage and loyalty.

Dr. Charles Stuart Fessenden Lincoln '91, who earned his unofficial titles of "Mr. Bowdoin Alumnus" and the "Grand Old Man of Psi Upsilon" in an almost limitless variety of ways, died in Brunswick on July 5 at 95.

Better known as Doc, he was the College's third oldest alumnus and probably knew more Bowdoin men than any other. He had not missed a Commencement in years (and was the oldest present at the June exercises) and seldom missed a national convention of Psi Upsilon Fraternity.

The product of an age whose social concern has been debunked by historians, Doc left Brunswick (and a medical practice that had been in the family two generations) and spent 25 years as a medical missionary of the Episcopal Church in Shanghai.

He returned to Brunswick in 1925, served as the College's Acting Physician for two years, and then retired to a life devoted to Bowdoin, Psi Upsilon, and St. Paul's Church.

Doc was the great-grandson of a foundling Overseer of the College, the grandson of another, and the son of a third, but his love for Bowdoin and her men was more than in-born. Because it was, he has left behind a man's greatest legacy—untold friends who loved him in return.

Brick Bartlett, 1897-1965

"Bowdoin College has lost one of its finest alumni and one of the ablest and most devoted members of its Governing Boards. He was a scholar in the broadest sense, and his innate wisdom and wide experience made him an invaluable counselor and committee chairman." —JAMES S. COLES

WHEN the news of Dr. Lincoln's passing came, the College was still mourning the death of Brig. Gen. Boyd W. Bartlett '17.

A brilliant man of highly diverse interests—he majored in classics at Bowdoin, science at West Point, civil engineering at M.I.T., and finally took two graduate degrees in physics at Columbia—"Brick" Bartlett was incisive in his judgments, able to bring out the best in those who worked with him or were his students; and if he demanded much of others, it was never more than he demanded of himself. He learned to fly at 43 because, while a Professor of Physics at the College, he was given the responsibility of organizing and administering the Civilian Pilot Training Program that was instituted here shortly before the outbreak of World War II.

Brick was not a professional soldier in any conventional sense—perhaps, in a less turbulent time of history, he would have felt more at home in the world of books and laboratories—but he fully appreciated the vital role of the military in the twentieth century and served his nation with distinction. He was, more than anyone else, the father of nuclear physics at West Point, where he taught for 19 years.

In 1949 Bowdoin awarded him an honorary doctor of science degree. In 1952 he was elected to the Board of Overseers and in 1961 to the Board of Trustees, of which he was a member at the time of his death.

New Department Chairman

DR. Edward J. Geary, a member of the Cornell University faculty for the past two years, has been named Professor of Romance Languages and Chairman of the Department.

As Department Chairman, he succeeds Prof. Eaton Leith, who has retired as Chairman but is continuing as Professor of Romance Languages.

Dr. Geary taught at Harvard University from 1953 to 1963 and rose from Instructor to Associate Professor. In 1960 Harvard awarded him an honorary master's degree.

He is a native of Lewiston and a 1942 graduate of the University of Maine, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He took an M.A. from Columbia University in 1948 and a Ph.D. from Columbia in 1953. In 1949-50 he was a Fulbright Scholar in Paris.

Other Arrivals

OTHERS who arrived at the College this month to begin teaching or administrative duties included:

James G. Carnathan '59, M.S., Brown University; Ph.D. candidate at Brown; Instructor in Psychology.

Irving D. Fisher, A.B., M.A., Columbia University; Visiting Lecturer in Government.

James E. Fisher Jr. '62, M.A., Harvard University; Ph.D. candidate, Harvard; Instructor in English.

A. Myrick Freeman III, A.B., Cornell; M.A., University of Washington; Ph.D. candidate, Washington; Assistant Professor of Economics.

Richard J. McGee, B.S.Ed., University of Maine; Assistant Coach of Football.

Barry M. Mitchell, B.A., M.A., University of Toronto; Ph.D., Brown; Assistant Professor of Mathematics.

Billy W. Reed, B.S., Memphis State University; M.A., University of Michigan; Ph.D. candidate, Michigan; Instructor in Speech.

Burton Rubin, B.A., New York University; M.A. and Russian Institute Certificate, Columbia; Ph.D. candidate, Columbia; Assistant Professor of Russian.

John E. Sheats, B.S., Duke; Ph.D. candidate, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Assistant Professor of Chemistry.

David C. Van Hoy, A.B., Washington State University; M.S.L.S., Western Reserve; Library Cataloguer.

Robert L. Volz, A.B., Marquette University; M.A. in L.S., University of Wisconsin; Special Collections Librarian.

Returning to the faculty after a two-year absence during which he supervised the development of educational programs for African nations is Dr. John C. Rensenbrink, Assistant Professor of Government.

Summer Commencement

BOWDOIN'S alumni body expanded by 12 on Aug. 8, when summer commencement exercises were conducted in the Chapel.

Speaking to the graduates, all of whom received master of arts degrees for successfully completing the College's graduate institute in mathematics, was Dr. Albert W. Tucker, Albert Baldwin Dod Professor of Mathematics at Princeton and one of the institute's faculty.

The exercises marked the end of an active summer at Bowdoin of National Science Foundation-sponsored institutes in mathematics, marine biology, and chemistry for some 140 secondary school teachers from across the country.

The addition of the new graduates raises the number who have earned master's degrees at the College to 74.

More Math

WHILE the high school teachers were busily engaged in their studies on the campus, two other highly sophisticated programs in mathematics were going on.

One of them, sponsored by a $72,630 grant from the National Science Foundation and under the direction of Dr. Dan E. Christie, Wing Professor of Mathematics, attracted some 70 graduate and post-doctoral students for a seminar in homological algebra. Included among those who lectured in this extremely abstract discipline were Dr. Ernest Snapper of Dartmouth College and Dr. Peter Freyd, Professor of Mathematics at the University of Pennsylvania—two of the best homological algebraists in the nation.

The College was also the site of a seminar sponsored by the Mathematical Association of America for 30 college and university professors. Topics included the theory of rings, linear analysis, matrix groups, collections systems, and other aspects of modern algebra.

Music, Music, Music

SINCE the Greeks first discovered the relationship of music to mathematics, a bond has existed between the two. Hence, it was only logical (if not planned) for the College to sponsor its first music school at a time when more mathematicians than ever before were on the campus.

Operating under the formidable title of Collegium Musicum, the school was a great success. It provided both the average listener and music lover a rich assortment of concerts to attend. During July there were eight performed either by the Aeolian Chamber Players, who formed part of the faculty, or by their students. One, an all Bach program, featured Michael Rabin as guest violinist. Another seven concerts were scheduled for August, including the 1965 Contemporary Music Festival Aug. 18, 20, and 21, when three works never before performed were on the program.

In all, 30 young musicians of high school and college age—including Arthur Fiedler's daughter, Johanna—enrolled in the school, which was under the direction of Prof. Robert K. Beckwith, Chairman of the Music Department.

COMPARED with the past few summers, the campus has been relatively free of the noise from jack-hammers, bull-dozers, and other assorted equipment used by the building trades.

In early July, the bookstore moved into the southeast section of the Moulton Union addition. The new location is 3,500 square feet in area—more than five times the size of the old quarters—and enables the store to stock some 2,500 titles, compared with about 600 formerly.

The rest of the Union was still undergoing expansion and renovation in August, but Director Donovan D. Lancaster '27 was confident he would be open for business by the start of the fall semester, on Sept. 20.

The College's collection of about 300,000 volumes was scheduled to be moved from Hubbard Hall into the Nathaniel Hawthorne-Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Library by school's opening, but the portion of the Library that will house Bowdoin's administrative offices is not expected to be ready for occupancy before late fall or early winter.

Renovation of the Maine Ends, also expected to be finished by semester's opening, has been on schedule. Work was re-routed, if not delayed, in June. Seems that a pigeon thought one of the fourth floor rooms would make a good nesting place. Workmen concentrated elsewhere until the eggs hatched and the young flew the nest.

SPORTS

More of the Same?

DURING the season, he alternately feels like a goldfish which has just run into a school of barracuda or someone just named sole heir of Jean Paul Getty's money.

But the small college football coach also derives a joy from working with young men that few other jobs can offer.

In July, the Polar Bears' new head coach, Pete Kostacopoulos, issued invitations to 48 to return for early practice.

He expects to have seven starters back from 1964's squad, which won four and lost three. Finding replacements for quarterback Bob Harrington, tight-end Steve Ingram, guard Tom Zilinsky, and halfback Billy Matthews will be the first order of business.

Maurice Viens, a 21-year-old junior who stands 5'11", 180 lbs., appears to have the best chance to take over from Harrington, one of the best quarterbacks at Bowdoin in m.n. years. Two juniors will vie for Ingram's old spot: Paul Newman, 6', 185 lbs.; and Bob McKeagney, 6'11", 190. Tom Allen, a 6', 180-lb. junior may provide the answer at halfback.

Finding a lineman to replace Zilinsky will be Kosty's biggest problem. "We'll have to scramble," he admits, meaning that almost everybody will be given a try.

First-stringers from the 1964 team who are expected back are halfback Paul Soule and center Dave Stocking, co-captains; split-end Jim MacAllen; tackles Alan Ayer and Wayne Burton; guard Jimmy Day; and fullback Bruce Alemian. All are seniors.

Offensively, Kosty hopes to serve up more of the same: a wing-T with flip-flop line and split-end. Says the one-time University of Maine footballer, "There's no sense changing a formation that has helped to produce 11 wins in 15 games over the past two seasons."

Sweet Revenge

ALL-America hammer thrower Alex Schulten '66, who finished second in both the NCAA college and university division championships in June, somewhat squared accounts during the Maine AAU Track and Field Championships at the College in July.

Letting fly with tosses of 191 ft., 7-3/4 in. and 194 ft., 10 in., he won the AAU hammer throw and Olympic developmental hammer, respectively. In so doing, he reestablished his dominance over Wayne Pangborn of Bates, who won the college division hammer at Long Beach, Calif. The victim of a bad day, Pangborn could do no better than a second place 162 ft., 7 in. in the AAU hammer.

Boston University's John Fiore was expected to compete in the Olympic contest but did not appear, thus depriving Schulten of the chance to toss against the only athlete to better him in the university division.

The university championships at Berkley, Calif., June 18-19 found Schulten at almost top form. One of his throws reached 198 ft., 7 1/2 in., but Fiore bested him with a toss of 200 ft., 10 in.

Meantime, Schulten's record-setting toss of 202 ft., 11 in. in the New England Intercollegiate Championships this spring still stands as the longest college throw in the nation this year. It and his California performances were more than enough to land him All-America honors for the second straight year.

by THOMAS P. COFFEY

I CAN vividly recall my first impression of the Senior Center as I carried in my belongings for the start of another school year. The tower stood against a brilliant blue sky—certainly a substantial and dramatic change from my fraternity house and dormitory accommodations. I was struck by the spaciousness of the suites and the expansive view of forest and ocean. It was not, however, until my routine became established and the aura of newness began to abate that I had the chance to look at my environment and begin the formulation of some opinion of it.

The Center provides a fine example of what can be done with dormitory architecture. The college dormitory has long presented a problem in design and function, and here a new and promising solution has emerged. Instead of the usual institutional type of living space with its endless corridors and impersonal atmosphere, the Center provides a type of community living combined with the privacy of one's own apartment-type suite.

There is an intimate connection between the academic (with the seminar program) and the social, as both functions are carried on within the same environment, thus contributing to an integrated whole.

If there is a unifying principle present on the campus, I would say it is provided by the abundance of trees and the planned use of landscaping techniques. These natural forms provide a continuity to the campus, so that in approaching the Center, one is led gradually to it by a meandering pathway through tall and graceful pines. There is no abrupt cut-off here; the trees have been left as much as possible, softening the outlines of the buildings and adding a natural scale to man's building achievements.

In describing the actual contribution of the Center in terms of design and its relation to function, the key word to use is "simplicity." This is the hallmark of the actual physical plant. The exterior rises clean and smooth with no emphasis on decoration or nonessential elements. The interior stresses simplicity through the use of white or neutral-colored walls in combination with the natural warmth of wood and furnishings.

THE tower rises up in a graded curve, somewhat like the organic growth of the trees which are so important a part of the campus. This organic analogy, I believe, represents the purpose of an educational institution: the continual striving for and increase of knowledge, both in general and on a personal level. The tower is capped off with limestone molded to the contours of the building. The capstone, however, does not cut the soaring effect of the tower but appears to be floating—almost suspended in mid air—and gives a feeling of lightness and a soaring quality to the structure.

Yet, a balance is maintained between stability and the soaring quality of the tower structure. The use of brick for the exterior covering and the rather thick members between the vertical rows of windows give a sense of stability and security. Thus, although the tower has the soaring quality of a great tree, it also embodies the stability and solidness inherent in the trunk of a tree.

The director's residence and dining building add to the sense of stability. Here, the horizontal is stressed with the elongated, overhanging roof finished off with limestone panels. The dining building with its main lounge is, to my mind, the masterpiece of the entire complex. Here, the reinforced concrete beams are exposed and allowed to extend beyond the confines of the walls. On the inside, reinforced concrete columns extend upward to the height of two stories, creating an atmosphere of spaciousness. The furnishings are given the task of providing intimacy and privacy. An interesting feature, especially in the stairwell leading to the second floor balcony lounges, is that the imprints of the wooden forms used in pouring the concrete were allowed to remain. They provide a texture and variety to the wall space.

Many features of design inside the tower are worth noting. First, the central part is used as a duct for all utilities. This provides greater freedom in the design of the outer walls and allows the greater use of open space, especially in the corner suites. Thus, the darkest part of the building is made to serve a useful purpose, providing the pathways for the essential utilities and conveniences of modern life.

The suites represent a well-conceived plan for suitable living arrangements. The single study-bedrooms provide a sense of privacy yet are so spacious that one does not feel cramped or hemmed in. The corner living rooms serve as common meeting rooms for roommates, friends, and guests. Here, the walls are almost completely done away with, and the beauty of the Maine countryside is fully open to view.

In combination, the study-bedroom and living room is a harmonious living arrangement that provides relief from the tension of sharing a single room with one or more occupants. Then, too, the living rooms are a place to meet and talk in an informal atmosphere with friends and faculty. They help to accomplish the primary aim of the entire Center program, the free growth and interchange of ideas and knowledge.

Furnishings in the center are well-fitted to their function. To break the monotony of the white stucco walls in the suites, simple yet warm furnishings are stressed. The furniture is geometric and easily cared for—a necessity in student living quarters. One might say the furnishings are comfortable but, at the same time, give the impression of streamlined efficiency and concentrated study effort. Within the lounges, the furniture is of a more luxurious, non-functional design, since these are areas for relaxation and enjoyment of informal gatherings. The seminar rooms have furniture of a more practical nature, indicating that their function is to provide an area in which concentrated thought and more formal activities pervade.

JUST how does the Center harmonize with the rest of the Bowdoin campus? There has been much criticism of the complex, which has been called everything from "Spike's Peak" to the "Tower of Babel." Critics seem to think that it is too radical a departure from the rest of the College buildings. I disagree, for variety has long been the theme of Bowdoin's architecture. There is everything from a Pazzi Chapel motif of the Walker Art Museum to the colonial simplicity of Massachusetts Hall. The Georgian style of the Moulton Union can be contrasted with the almost English Neo-Gothic of Hubbard Hall. There is no hard rule that unifies the campus such as at Colby College. There is a variety and alternation of architectural forms that make a walk across the campus an exciting study in various styles and periods. Thus, the high-rise Center tower is just another addition to a well-established tradition of experimenting with different and often interesting architectural forms.

IF there is a unifying principle present on the campus, I would say it is provided by the abundance of trees and the planned use of landscaping techniques. These natural forms provide a continuity to the campus, so that in approaching the Center, one is led gradually to it by a meandering pathway through tall and graceful pines. There is no abrupt cut-off here; the trees have been left as much as possible, softening the outlines of the buildings and adding a natural scale to man's building achievements.

The bricks used as a surface covering give a final touch to the Center's contact with the rest of the campus. Materials used for the exterior of the other campus buildings are, with the exception of the Chapel and Memorial Hall, primarily red bricks. The use of such a medium in the Center complex helps to tie it in gracefully with the campus as a whole, yet allows the Center to maintain its individuality. As the bricks mellow with age, there will be a constantly changing vista of color and imaginary patterns, thus adding to the visual excitement. One other important aspect is that the bricks give a warmth and human scale which would be difficult to achieve using either marble slabs or bare concrete. The bricks also give a warmth to the courtyard and lobby which extends a hearty welcome to visitor and dweller alike.

That the Center conforms to many of the criteria of the modern school is a noteworthy accomplishment when one considers the context in which it had to be built: a college dependent upon money donated by an alumni body which, some would claim, was anxious to preserve the "traditions" of Alma Mater. In such a situation a radical solution to the problem of providing a new concept to academic life, especially in regard to design, could prove dangerous and, at the least, difficult. However, the architect was able to create a functionally viable and energetic structure without, at the same time, creating a source of constant friction and criticism. I think that for the most part what controversy there was over the Center's design has just about faded. The emphasis now is placed on the successful completion of the academic objectives of the Center.

All of this is not to say that I do not find anything wrong with the Center, for there are certain areas which could be improved. For example, although there is an interpenetration of space and form, I feel that there is a need for more space open to the air. Balconies or terraces could well meet this need. My suggestion would be that the roof of the dining hall could perhaps be utilized as a broad open terrace. Here is a large area which would provide an ideal place for an open-air dance. Some might object, arguing that the added expense would not be justified because of the length of the winter season. However, with the advent of warm weather everyone senses a new spirit of freedom and wants to rush out into the sunlight and fresh air. The roof terrace would provide privacy and an ample area in which to relax, study, or socialize.

ONE other aspect that sometimes causes me to pause is the occasional sense of heaviness given by the massive brick walls between the fenestrations of the tower. I cannot help feeling that even though simplicity is evident these could have been somewhat lighter and added more to the soaring quality of the structure. As it is, I occasionally get the feeling that the building is a little ponderous and sacrifices just a little too much to the objective of stability. This, of course, is a feature that cannot be changed, but it is worth pointing out as a personal observation.

The elegant simplicity of the Center remains predominant in my mind, however, and overcomes most of my objections. It allows the physical environment to be flexible and easily adaptable to innovation. This is particularly important in the context of the senior year program, in which there will be undoubtedly much experimentation and change over the years. The architecture provides the necessary environment for growth and change. The challenge before the College is to carry out an academic program to take advantage of it and to form a viable and energetic whole, a community of knowledge, growth, and change.

Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason Jr. answers some questions about the current problems and future prospects of fraternities at Bowdoin College*

FRATERNITIES, like sex, religion and politics, are a topic of endless, sometimes pointless discussion. Yet the dialogue must continue if any understanding is to be reached on what, if any, positive role the fraternity system at Bowdoin College and colleges like it can perform, not only today but in the future.

The following questions, submitted by the editors to Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason Jr. are hardly all-inclusive—but it is hoped that they will serve to continue the search for creative, imaginative solutions by alumni, faculty, and students.

For the past several years, few aspects of college life have undergone more scrutiny than the fraternity system. Much of this discussion seems to overlook the fact that fraternity systems differ from college to college. How would you define the system as it exists at Bowdoin?

Perhaps this question ought to be answered on a note of caution: it would be unlikely, indeed, to find the Bowdoin fraternity system the only perfect system in the world. Like all systems, it has problems. The houses inevitably fall short of their ideals, the programs have a way of lagging behind the needs of the times, and, most wearisome for older generations, the fraternities are filled with youth!

But the Bowdoin system has several distinctive and, as I see it, desirable characteristics. Early pledging, in spite of some confusion and misunderstanding, does spread talent fairly evenly, and this assures interesting competition among the houses throughout the year. The fraternity presidents have pledged themselves to see that each freshman receives at least one bid, and thus no student is denied the opportunity, if he wants it, of experiencing fraternity life. Through action of the Faculty and Governing Boards, the few fraternities in which discriminatory practices remained have been required to take the steps necessary to free themselves from such practices.

Because all fraternity members except seniors dine at their houses and a number of upperclassmen reside there, opportunities for friendships and understanding to grow are plentiful. Lest the relatively small size of the fraternity become restrictive, the broader experiences of the Senior Center await the student in his final year.

Granted that the Bowdoin system may have some distinctive features, is it free of whatever prompted Williams to act and Amherst to deliberate? In fact, what really is the basic issue?

No, I am sure that the Bowdoin system is not entirely free from what prompted critics of fraternities at Amherst and Williams to speak up. The basic issue is simply whether or not fraternities today are an anachronism. At the time of their founding, roughly in the middle of the last century, they met several needs. They fed students who would, in some instances, have been left on their own to work out dining arrangements in their college towns. They provided, through their rituals and their hazing practices, some kind of satisfaction for college boys frequently younger than today's students. Finally, through literary and other academic exercises, they met educational needs which the narrow curriculum of that day would not answer.

Today, colleges are prepared to house and feed students, and the varied curriculum and extensive libraries of the colleges no longer require fraternities to supplement them. Hazing, even modified to psychological hazing, is disappearing (although not fast enough), and the rhetoric of the rit-

"It is the policy of Bowdoin College that each fraternity on the campus should be completely free to choose its members from among all the students who have been admitted to the College, without restriction as to race, creed, or color. It is also the policy of the College to permit early pledging and initiation of freshmen.

"It is not consistent with the high ideals of good faith, honesty and straightforwardness, which a fraternity should cherish, for a national fraternity to influence or force its local chapter to evade, flout, or obstruct in any way the policies of the institution where it is located.

"The College expects any national fraternity which cannot in complete good faith permit its Bowdoin chapter to abide by these policies to withdraw its affiliation. The College hopes that such withdrawal will be found unnecessary."
—Resolution of the Governing Boards, 1962

uals seems to convey less to each college generation. The result is that a group of young men are living together with no larger bond or mutual purpose than resolving the problems of their own day to day living. Under such conditions, time has a way of flapping loose and not always being used very wisely. It is not surprising, therefore, to find serious people questioning whether fraternities are really relevant to the purposes of a liberal arts college like Bowdoin.

What other kinds of criticism do you hear about fraternities and to what extent do you think the criticisms are deserved?

For one thing, the national aspect of fraternities is receiving increasing criticism. Students may feel that belonging to a national lends prestige to a house during rushing, and they may also like the idea of a free room at other chapter houses during their travels, but they question whether the money sent to the national office during the year is really used to advantage. One critic, I know, keeps promising a study on the funds which leave the Bowdoin campus annually for the national coffers. He estimates that several thousands are paid out, only a small portion of which returns as scholarship money. National officers do visit and advise the chapters annually, but the truth is that the caliber of these men is very uneven.

Another complaint, and this one is often expressed by alumni and national officers, is that students have lost respect for the ritual and ideals of the fraternity. In a sense the charge is true, for much of the language of the ritual is outdated, at least in the rhetorical form in which it appears, and evokes no real response in the students today. Today's essentially informal generation also sees little in the formal ceremonies of the fraternities. But without getting into the debate over absolute and relative value, it can be said that such personal values as integrity and compassion remain and are probably intensified in today's students. I personally feel that fraternities would be well advised to find other symbolic forms and to explore new purposes which would give their values expression.

Conformity is a vice for which fraternities are blamed, but I suspect the critics are unduly hard. Students of college age are almost instinctively conformists in their urgent desire to be accepted by their peers, although what they conform to may seldom carry the blessings of adults. The critics are on firmer ground when, as too often happens, the conformity is to an indifferent attitude toward studies. Insofar as a fraternity is simply an escape from the classroom, it is responsible for encouraging such conformity. Insofar as a fraternity in its own programs gives expression to values akin to those of the classroom, then a fraternity can be both a change from the lecture hall and a complement to it.

As for the usual charges of excessive drinking and wild partying, there is much in them that is true, but hardly on the superhuman scale some would have us believe. Further, such excesses are not peculiar to fraternity men; they seem to characterize many youths—today and in the past. Brunswick, like Oxford, Wittenberg, Rome, and Athens, has at times played host to young men learning what moderation is.

Speaking for myself, I am most impatient with fraternities when it comes to their programs for indoctrinating freshmen. I question whether many upperclassmen really know what they are indoctrinating freshmen into. Further, I am unhappy about the way in which this indoctrination takes place. Because the purposes of the fraternity are vaguely grasped, the "orientation programs" which have evolved seem to embrace a great deal of "make work" at a time when freshmen can ill afford it. The spirit of the programs, too, seems to carry an extraneous element left over from hazing—namely, a tone of humbling the freshman and keeping him in his place. Some boys may require such treatment, but most do not, and any faculty member treating students in such a spirit would soon find himself in trouble. I do not question at all that there are many good things that upperclassmen can introduce to freshmen, but just what they are and how the introduction ought to take place still need to be defined.

From the week before the opening of College and continuing until Alumni Day, October 23, nearly the entire student body will be involved in the annual rites of autumn—rushing, orientation, and initiation. In view of the criticisms levied against fraternities, how can the College justify these rites?

There are probably two answers to this question. One is fairly cynical. It states that the fraternities are here, and that's that. They are so interwoven with the history of the College that their removal would tear the fabric apart. Even if they could be torn out and tossed into the Androscoggin, the College would have a difficult time finding ways to feed 750 underclassmen and house about 300. Hence the annual rites of autumn.

The other answer recognizes that in spite of some aimlessness and some special problems, the fraternities fill several desirable roles. More important than housing and feeding students is the experience they provide in self-government and all of the responsibility which that entails. But such government is possible only when men are living together with considerable independence in groups large enough to allow some diversity and yet small enough to be comprehensible. I think the fraternities meet these criteria, and I think their student officers have on occasion shown considerable courage and tact in dealing with their membership. A number of other students fill other roles in the operation of the houses, and the result is a great deal of practical learning about the daily affairs of men.

I think the social and recreational role of the fraternities ought not to be underestimated. Whether in interfraternity competition or in informal activities about the house, a very necessary release from the rigors of the curriculum can and ought to be found.

In the development and continuation of the Bowdoin Plan, the houses have provided their members with the opportunity of knowing a foreign student and his concerns; and, by providing room and board for the foreign student, they have enabled him to study in America.

In spite of my reservations about orientation, I feel that some desirable ends are achieved. The summer reading program, whereby three or four books assigned to all entering freshmen are discussed at the fraternities with faculty advisers and upperclassmen, serves as a reminder that fraternity and academic concerns need not be entirely separate. A few houses have gone further, and during the weeks of orientation they have had upperclassmen discuss with freshmen, to whom psychology, sociology, and philosophy are often unknown fields, what new subjects lie ahead at Bowdoin. Faculty, too, have been invited to the fraternities to talk about the College and its history. In the course of the year, two or three houses have sponsored lectures or discussions.

Through the Big Brother program, a freshman is assured that at least one experienced and sympathetic upperclassman will be readily available. By meetings of freshmen with the various committees of the house, new men become aware of the kinds of effort necessary to keep a fraternity going. Ultimately, they do feel a part of the group, and this basic need is certainly more readily satisfied by membership in the fraternity than by being part of the class as a whole. As Bowdoin classes have increased in size, this need has grown stronger. Hence, again, the annual rites of autumn.

How does the undergraduate look upon his fraternity experience as compared with the undergraduate of forty or fifty years ago, during the so-called Golden Age of national fraternities?

I can only speculate about the attitude of students toward their fraternities forty years or so ago, but I suspect that "fraternity" had more literal meaning to students then and that they took quite seriously the bond which joined them in a brotherhood for life. Today the student is more inclined to see his fraternity as a four-year experience which, although he values it, he will probably put aside after graduation.

Do you think the Senior Center is in any way responsible for this changing attitude?

Not at all. It was underway long before the new Senior Center was thought of. In fact, the Senior Center is in part, I think, a response to this change. That is, the seniors were reaching a point where the fraternity experience had ceased to be a challenge. By moving the seniors on to another kind of experience, the College has placed responsibility on juniors, who seem to welcome it, who fulfill it quite well, and who seem to benefit from the challenge. The fraternities, too, I feel will also benefit from this new leadership.

Your last answer implies some concern on the part of the College toward fraternities. Does Bowdoin feel an obligation toward fraternities, and, if it does, how is that obligation being realized?

I believe that a sense of responsibility for the Bowdoin fraternities has been shown by the College throughout its recent history. The sponsoring of the Symposium on Undergraduate Environment in 1962 was certainly evidence that the College felt a curriculum could not exist in a vacuum. The question was really what kind of environment best complemented the curriculum and met the social needs of Bowdoin students. The insights of that Symposium suggested that the right environment lay for underclass-

"It [is] apparent that an institution which maintains a fraternity system as part of its activities and overall program is responsible under the Civil Rights Act requirements for assuring that discrimination is not practiced by the fraternities in the system."

—Francis Keppel, U.S. Commissioner of Education, 1965

men within the potential of the fraternity system. The obligation felt by the College has simply been to help the fraternities realize that potential.

Whether each action taken or encouraged by the College was a help or a hindrance is, of course, debatable, but the intent has always been to strengthen the fraternity's role in enabling Bowdoin as a residential, liberal arts college to fulfill its purpose. To that end the fraternities have been required to open their membership to all students who have merited admission to Bowdoin, regardless of race or religion. Further, they have been encouraged to see that every Bowdoin student receives at least one opportunity, if he wishes it, to join a fraternity. During the period of transition to a larger college, the fraternities have suffered a temporary loss in members because seniors are at the Senior Center and the lower classes have not all expanded. To help fraternities through this crisis, last year a total of almost $20,000 was given to the houses where empty beds or vacant dining chairs made a balanced budget impossible. Similar assistance will be available this year. In other instances, loans at low rates have been made to assist in expansion and, in one case, the acquisition of a new house closer to the campus. Lest the temptation be overwhelming for stronger houses to pledge enormous freshmen delegations at the expense of weaker houses, the fraternities were encouraged to adopt for the period of transition a quota system, and this they have done to the benefit of the fraternities as a whole.

To counsel freshmen and sophomores and to help with fraternity affairs, more faculty have been urged to serve as advisers. As a result, only one fraternity last year had as few as two advisers. Over the last few years, members of the Faculty Committee on Student Life have met with orientation chairmen from the houses to seek new ways of introducing freshmen to their fraternities. Unfortunately, the old habits die slowly. When I complained to a national secretary, he told me that he was discouraged on that score too. He added, "Despite the fact that all the educational leadership in the nation has come from New England, I find other sections of the country outstripping the New England Schools in the fraternity area in terms of mature practices and pre-initiation."

More profitable, perhaps, will be the series of talks held last year among the fraternity presidents, President Coles, and the Deans. We discussed not only the social responsibilities of the houses but also a great deal of the Amherst report to see what criticisms of Amherst fraternities were relevant to Bowdoin fraternities and what steps should be taken to answer them. Each fraternity has been supplied with copies of the report and invited to form committees to carry the discussion further.

The commitment of the College has been clearly demonstrated.

As a final question, then, what do you think is the future of fraternities at Bowdoin?

I can only say that the answer is really up to the fraternities themselves. Given their necessary independence, they pretty much control their own fate. They are being offered help by the College, but they also stand in need of help, advice, and understanding from alumni. Although their facilities suffer in comparison with those of the Senior Center and the renovated Ends, this problem is hardly insurmountable. M.I.T., I recently read, has set up a special category in its alumni fund for an account from which fraternities may borrow at low interest and for long terms. The donors to this college fund receive the regular tax deductions. There are undoubtedly other solutions too. Improvement of living conditions in the increasingly dated fraternity buildings is not the problem.

The problem is, I think, to find a really significant role for fraternities to play in today's college. They cannot be simply dining halls, dormitories, or social clubs. For reasons I have already explained, they cannot fill the roles they once filled for earlier generations of students. They can prosper, though, and it is my belief that they will if they discover ways to complement the formal curriculum and the general objectives of the College and perhaps serve them directly, too. Does this sound like the Senior Center? In a sense, it does. But I do not envision twelve small Senior Centers. Rather, I would like to see applied to the fraternities and their problems the kind of imagination which led to the creation of the Senior Center and its program. The challenge for the fraternities is to discover significant and rewarding ways for students to live together—ways that are right for today's students at a college with Bowdoin's history and its promise for the future.

The Case for Amateur Athletics

by DELANEY KIPHUTH

A FEW years ago I served on a National Collegiate Athletic Association athletic committee to study recruitment and financial aid practices of American colleges. On this committee a fellow member in the course of our deliberations expressed a deep skepticism about the claimed absence of athletic scholarships in many institutions in the Northeast. He was even more confused when I finally convinced him that, although some athletes do receive financial assistance, this assistance is based on need.

"DeLaney," he said, "this means that you may pay a boy on the third team more than a boy on the first team." When I agreed to this, he shot back, "Why that's not only undemocratic, it's un-American!" He was lost in wonder at how any degree of group morale could be maintained in such a situation and was anxious to learn how, if a boy got no financial assistance, we could be sure that he would even appear at game time on Saturday.

Unfortunately, all too many, like my colleague, view any attempt to preserve amateurism in American athletics as an attempt at de-emphasis of athletics, and by this they scornfully mean that colleges like Bowdoin and Yale do not care about this area of college life. Is this a valid contention?

Recent team records and Professor Louis Hatch's A History of Bowdoin College indicate that Bowdoin is proud of and cares about the quality of its teams and in no way de-emphasizes in this regard. Who can think of Jack Magee not striving with his athletes for the highest quality performance possible?

Likewise, no de-emphasis is revealed in the area of participation. Last fall I took a list of the top ten Associated Press poll football teams for one week and checked the number of intercollegiate teams the ten universities represented on the list supported. The low figure was seven and the high nine. At Bowdoin there are fifteen intercollegiate sports with squash about to be added and others perhaps on the way.

WHAT an institution cares about is frequently revealed in what areas its funds are spent. Not one of the ten institutions in the AP poll — big time athletic powers all — spend institutional funds on athletics. All support is derived from gate receipts and their programs are expanded or restricted on the basis of these receipts. Here the entire program is routinely budgeted out of college funds. Certainly, there is no de-emphasis in this critical area. On the contrary, an enthusiasm and conviction about the values of sport for the college community are strongly indicated.

But such a phrase as "athletic de-emphasis," which enjoys such wide currency when applied to Bowdoin or Yale, must have some validity. I think it can be found in our efforts to de-emphasize—indeed eliminate—those forces which undercut, prostitute, and compromise the educational and recreational objectives with which the beginnings of athletics in American colleges are associated. These are the forces that make a mockery of all we hold true. They are forces out of which have grown the athletic scholarship, the athletic dormitory, high pressure recruiting, and double standards for admission and academic performance for the so-called student-athlete as opposed to the student.

This is a deplorable situation and it behooves a college like Bowdoin to strengthen the weapons it possesses to combat these forces. What are these weapons?

First, there is the healthy and most fortunate situation of living among a group of institutions in Maine, Massachusetts, and Connecticut with whom the College enjoys traditional rivalries and among whom there are reasonably comparable standards. Each member gets its fair share of wins. It is almost impossible to maintain standards in the face of long periods of defeat.

Then, Bowdoin's history of interest and achievement in the areas of physical training and athletics helps immeasurably in keeping her on a sane and safe course. The first outdoor gymnasium at any college in the nation was established at Harvard in 1825 by Charles Follen, a follower of the Jahn School of Physical Training in Germany. Less than two years later another trainee of the Jahn School, John Neal, started a similar gymnasium at Bowdoin.

A great figure in American physical education, Dudley Allen Sargent, was director of the gymnasium here from 1869 to 1875, during which time he earned his undergraduate degree. Later he took his M.D. at Yale where he directed our gymnasium. Eventually he carried on his career at Harvard where he instituted an effective and sensible system of developmental exercise and established himself as one of the great figures in American physical education.

The tradition of a sane approach to exercise and games thus became deeply rooted here. It has shown vigor and strength in the present with the development of a program of "athletics for all," with the construction of fine facilities such as the new gymnasium, and with the budgeting of athletics as a regularly constituted department. This budgeting regards expense in athletics as an educational cost.

But an educational cost implies an educational return to the participant. What is educational about sports and physical training?

To realize that our educational institutions have a serious responsibility to keep their undergraduates physically fit is merely to know that 50 percent of all young Americans called for the draft in the Korean Conflict were unable to meet draft physical standards.

Surely the debilitating and physically softening effects of the mechanization of American life are related to the early onset and prevalence of cardiac problems in this country. The medical profession warns us of the need to exercise in order to offset the absence of movement and physical work in our daily lives. Habits of regular exercise must be established at school and college for the preservation of good health.

Yale University

DeLaney Kiphuth has been Director of Athletics at Yale University since 1954 and Director of the Payne Whitney Gymnasium since 1959. He has also been a Lecturer in History since 1958.

Graduated from Yale in 1941, he played three years of varsity football as an undergraduate. Following a tour with the Army Air Force during World War II, he returned to Yale and took a master's degree in history in 1947.

In 1948 he rejoined the faculty of the Hotchkiss School, where he had taught briefly after graduating from Yale, as an instructor in history and swimming coach. From 1948 through 1952 his teams were undefeated in secondary school competition, losing only to the Yale freshmen. In 1951 his team won the New England Interscholastic Championships.

Having a Kiphuth speak at the dedication of a Bowdoin athletic building may develop into a tradition. Robert J. H. "Bob" Kiphuth, DeLaney's father and Yale's famous retired swimming coach, spoke at the dedication of Curtis Pool in 1928. This article is based on remarks at the dedication of the College's new gymnasium in June.

My predecessor at Yale, Dean Clarence Mendell, wrote in an article in the Yale Alumni Magazine:

No one has yet suggested how mind and soul can function entirely divorced from their humble carrier. . . . The intellectual may think more generally valuable thoughts, and the spiritual man conceive more generally useful revelations, if supported by a normally healthy and sanely controlled physical machine through which to work. . . . Does it not follow, therefore, that our ideal of education should be the best developed combination of all three functions, in fact, the sound mind (and soul) in the sound body?

Where medieval continental universities were gatherings of scholars in almost exclusive pursuit of intellectual matters, English and American colleges have assumed the duty of preparing promising young men to serve their generation in public affairs.

Dean Mendell concludes:

But, to do this, they must also try to turn out graduates with bodies competent to meet the rigors of the life thus indicated.

The flesh may well be the servant of the spirit and the physical side of the whole man the tool of its spiritual and intellectual side, but none the less it is the duty of the college to give each graduate of the college as efficient a servant and as effective a tool as it possibly can.

A program that provides the maximum opportunity for participation of the entire community in sports and physical training is needed to attain these ends. Bowdoin's program has attained this goal and of this achievement it can be truly proud.

At this point one may justifiably ask, "If the basic educational objectives of sport can be met by an intramural and physical training program do we need intercollegiate athletics?"

Surely if we believe in a program of "athletics for all" we must not neglect the student who enjoys a higher degree of intensity in his participation than these activities provide. Offering him a chance for intercollegiate competition is comparable to offering honors course opportunities to the gifted scientist or classicist.

Then, too, there are valuable lessons to be learned from intensive athletic competition. To single out a few:

In the striving for team excellence

the interests of the individual must be given a secondary position to the interests of the group. For sound educational reasons a student's individual talents in his curricular work are developed to the maximum. Team sports where winning is important present the opportunity to contribute one's best to the interests of the group, to approach the Greek ideal of being judged by how well one serves the community. Surely this has value in later life.

In intensive competition teammates and opponents alike are measured by how truly they possess and demonstrate the qualities of the sportsman with all the fine attributes of character that this word implies. Whether a man has money or not, has been to an exclusive prep school or an unknown high school, owns a car or not, is a fraternity man or not; on the athletic field, reduced to a common uniform, he must stand on his own and be judged not by superficial social qualities but by his inner strength. This is indeed a chastening experience.

NO ONE can be a parent, teacher, or counselor to young people of this or any other day without being aware of their capacity for questioning the rules of the society in which they find themselves. Bad rules, it is argued, just do not apply. Yet some day later on rules of society will have to be accepted just because they exist. The well-trained athlete learns to accept rules and to achieve ambitions and aspiring goals within the framework of those rules in the making of which he has had no responsibility whatsoever.

In this day when entering classes at college are more and more meticulously selected and each year are told they are abler and brighter than their predecessors, there is an understandable tendency for students to have a high opinion of themselves. In this atmosphere it is easy to overlook or forget the value of a hard and demanding apprenticeship. The promising sophomore football team candidate finds it hard to believe the coach who maintains that he needs more training before he assumes the responsibility of making the first team. Indeed, many are prepared to drop out of the sport in which first team rank is not quickly forthcoming. When such a boy is put into a game he often makes the critical error of the inexperienced player. If he has character and understanding, he will go back to the practice field to get ready for the next chance and realize from a dramatic lesson that more is needed than just talent to be a success.

The athlete must learn to marshal all his resources and concentrate them on the best possible performance in a prescribed period of application. The moment in which this must be done is determined by a schedule which he does not make and which he cannot alter. What is more, where victory is at a premium the athlete is confronted with the need to do his best when under great emotional stress that frequently can distract him. Is not this comparable to the big sale, the critical operation, the demanding moment in course for the businessman, doctor, or lawyer?

Finally, is it not valuable in this sophisticated age to learn that enthusiasm for and belief in the potential of one's own group can capture victories and attain ends that the experts testify are unattainable? Is not the team today, as it achieves more by naïve enthusiasm and devotion than expert opinion says it can, akin to the law firm, the business organization, or the medical group of tomorrow?

I HASTEN to state that I realize that athletic participation is not the only area in which these lessons can be and are learned. I submit, however, that they can be learned dramatically well by young men in athletics and for this reason they are worth supporting. Essential to this end the activity must be taught by a thoughtful coach, be an adjunct to the main effort—not the primary activity in the institution—be participated in from choice not obligation, and above all must be fun.

Recreation, developmental exercise, intramural games, and intercollegiate competition all have something to give to a community. Bowdoin's new gymnasium is effectively designed to serve these ends. I congratulate you on this achievement.

Talk of the Alumni

Kudos for the Dean

NEXT to presidents, deans are the best all-purpose people on a college campus. Their speaking engagements run from football rallies to faculty colloquia, from alumni banquets to college convocations. And if, unlike presidents, they do not have to worry about finances, there are always fraternities.

During his 18 years as Dean of the College and 39 years on the faculty, Dean Nathaniel C. Kendrick, Frank Munsey Professor of History, has handled his assignments with extraordinary skill.

A third generation college professor, (his grandfather was the first Professor of Greek at the University of Rochester and his father taught there for 49 years) he probably inherited some of his abilities. But his art of dealing with students is distinctly his.

DEAN KENDRICK
Extraordinarily Skillful

In discipling a student, few can rival the Dean's ability to get the student to tell all—and then set a punishment which, more often than not, is harsher than the Dean would have imposed. "Being up before the Dean was an experience," recalls one alumnus. "He just sat there and waited until the silence became so maddening that you told him what he wanted to find out."

One of his favorite tactics has been to gaze out a window in his first floor office in Massachusetts Hall. According to one story (probably apocryphal), a student once became so unnerved that he got up, walked out, and peered back at the Dean through the open window.

It has been his fairness that has won him the respect of countless students over the years. "You knew that if he called you in what you had done was serious, and you felt ashamed for having let him down," says a former student.

In recognition of the many ways he has improved the College, the Alumni Council will present him its third annual Alumni Award for Faculty and Staff at the Alumni Day Luncheon on Saturday, Oct. 23. He and Mrs. Kendrick will be further honored at a reception in Alumni House after the football game.

Alumni Day

SPEAKING as we were of Alumni Day, we would be remiss if we did not report that the Alumni Council has planned its usual full and varied program.

From 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. in Alumni House will be the first session of the Sixth Annual Reunion Seminar for chairmen and committee members of the classes planning reunions at the 1966 Commencement Exercises. This session, a general one, will be followed at 10:30 by meetings of the individual class reunion committees.

Alumni Council President George T. Davidson Jr. '38 will preside at the Alumni Day Luncheon, starting at 11:30 a.m. in Sargent Gymnasium. Alumni, their families, and guests are invited, but reservations must be made in advance. No exceptions, warns President Davidson.

The Polar Bears will tangle with Colby College's Mules for the 77th time in the history of the two schools at 1:30 p.m. on the Whittier Field gridiron.

Other sporting events on Saturday are a varsity soccer game with Colby at 10 a.m. on Pickard Field and a cross-country meet with Colby on the Brunswick Golf Course, starting at 11.

5th Planning Conference

THE fifth annual summer planning conference was held at the College by the Directors of the Alumni Fund and the Officers of the Alumni Council on Aug. 6 and 7. They participated in work sessions for the most part, but did find time to attend a performance of South Pacific by the Brunswick Summer Theater in Pickard Theater.

Fund Chairman Morris A. Densmore '46; Vice Chairman J. Philip Smith '29; Directors Lewis V. Vafiades '42, Gordon C. Knight '32, and L. Robert Porteous Jr. '46; and Secretary Robert M. Cross '45 appointed new Class Agents where necessary and set this year's goals at $275,000 and 60 percent participation.

Council Vice President John F. Reed '37, Secretary Peter C. Barnard

'50, and Treasurer Glenn R. McIntire '25 were joined by Member-at-Large Richard A. Wiley '49, who was invited to substitute for President George T. Davidson Jr. '38 because the latter could not be present. They reviewed President Davidson's preliminary plans for the year, paying particular attention to the work of the Council's 14 committees, including two new committees on fraternities and alumni-faculty liaison. They also discussed arrangements for the Fifth Campus Career Conference (scheduled for Feb. 21) and the Council's Mid-winter Meeting (Feb. 17-19).

During their final joint session, Directors and Officers reviewed their individual plans. They agreed on the program and details for the Combined Fall Conference of the Council and Fund, to be at the College on Thursday through Saturday, Nov. 4-6.

The Fund: a Record

NOW that the last penny has been counted, a record that was predicted hopefully at Commencement is a reality.

During his year as Chairman of the Alumni Fund, Lewis V. Vafiades '42, led the alumni to a dollar record of $249,161.37, exceeding the previous mark of $241,843, which was established in 1963.

The final participation figure for the 1964-65 Fund was an even 50 percent. Six classes—the highest number in history—achieved 100 percent participation. With their Class Agents, they are: Ralph Cushing and 1905; John Leydon and 1907, Joseph Davis and 1908, Sewall Webster and 1910 (for the 11th consecutive year), Charles Oxnard and 1911, and Herbert Bryant and 1912. Paul Niven and 1916 missed perfection by only one donor.

A complete report will be carried in the November ALUMNUS.

Alumni at Oakes Center

AS it has done every summer since 1958, the College again sponsored a series of public lectures and concerts at its Oakes Center in Bar Harbor.

Under the direction of Albert R. Thayer '22, McCann Professor of Oral Communication, the Center offered five lectures, a concert by the Brunswick Chamber Singers, and a special program open only to Bowdoin alumni and their families, at which Paul G. Favour Jr. '36 presented an illustrated lecture, "Acadia: Crown Jewel of Costal Maine." Approximately 70 attended. Thomas E. Weil '28 former Foreign Service Officer, spoke on "The United States and Communist China" in July. Other alumni who were scheduled to speak in August were Dr. Leonard W. Cronkhite '41, Director of the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, "The Psychology of Space Travel," and Allen H. Morgan '46, Executive Vice President of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, "The Conservation Challenge of All Time."

Sons of Bowdoin

FORTY-EIGHT of the 76 sons of Bowdoin alumni who applied for admission to the Class of 1969 were admitted, and 42 enrolled, according to the Admissions Office. The 42:

Retirement No. 2

TWO issues short of his twentieth year, Prof. Eaton Leith of the Department of Romance Languages has retired as editor of "Books with a Bowdoin Flavor."

During his tenure, he painstakingly sought out alumni and faculty to review several hundred of the books written by or about Bowdoin people and cheerfully accepted the praise and criticism that inevitably goes with such a position. By any standard, he brought to the job a great deal of sympathy and conscientious effort.

His announcement was the second of its type this year. In March, he announced his intention to retire as Chairman of the Department, a position he held for nine years.

Professor Leith will continue his teaching at Bowdoin, as he has done since 1936. During the spring semester he will be on sabbatical leave—much of which, appropriately enough, he will spend reading books.

BOOKS

WITH A BOWDOIN FLAVOR

LOUIS COXE, The Last Hero and Other Poems: Vanderbilt University Press, 1965; $4.

Mr. Coxe's fifth book of poetry is comprised of 44 lyric poems, a long narrative, and seven translations from Baudelaire, Apollinaire, Prévert, and Queneau. Some of the poems were first printed in Poetry, The New Yorker, The Atlantic Monthly, and Yale Review.

Mr. Coxe is Pierce Professor of English at Bowdoin.

LEONARD GILLEY '51, Lawyer Nead and Other Poems: Werb Publications, 1965; 50 cents.

Sketches in poetry of an odd lot of characters ranging from Embalmer Edwards to Simple Abner, the Village Idiot, are found in this volume of 20 poems.

Mr. Gilley, who has an M.A. in The Writing Seminars, Johns Hopkins University, is currently a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Denver.

E. J. MCCLUSKEY '51, Introduction to the Theory of Switching Circuits: McGraw-Hill, 1965.

This study provides broad coverage of the fundamental concepts of switching circuit theory, presenting the theory in a manner which illustrates its applicability to a wide range of devices.

Mr. McCluskey is Professor of Electrical Engineering and Director of the Computer Center at Princeton.

DONALD D. DENNIS '51, Simplifying Work in Small Public Libraries: Drexel Institute of Technology, 1965; $2.50.

This manual is the result of an 18-month study financed by the Council on Library Resources Inc. In addition to discussing aspects of small library management, it contains three appendixes: "Cataloging Costs in Small Public Libraries," "Book Preparation Costs," and "Library Buying Guide."

Mr. Dennis is the Librarian at Cedar Crest College.

MARY ELLEN CHASE H'33, A Journey to Boston: W. W. Norton & Co. Inc., 1965; $3.95.

In her latest novel, Miss Chase turns her attentions to the Polish families found throughout the upper Connecticut River Valley and describes many of their admirable qualities when two women are linked by a common tragedy.

Marion Lineaweaver, Barbara Bradley, Dionis Coffin Riggs, and ROBERT T. HYDE '39, Martha's Vineyard: Richard R. Smith, 1965; $3.50.

Martha's Vineyard is a collection of poems set against the backdrop of the sea and the island. Mr. Hyde has contributed ten poems, of which nine have never before appeared and the tenth, Autumnal, was first published in the Bowdoin Quill.

Mr. Hyde teaches English at Martha's Vineyard Regional High School.

BURLEIGH CUSHING RODICK '12, Appomattox: The Last Campaign: Philosophical Library Inc., 1965; $6.

An account not only of the last of the great Civil War battles but also of the negotiations that followed.

Mr. Rodick, for many years on the faculties of Wagner and Brooklyn colleges, lives in New York and devotes most of his time to writing.

OLIN S. PETTINGILL JR. '30, editor, The Bird Watcher's America: McGraw-Hill, 1965; $7.50.

A collection of essays by 44 naturalists, this book takes one on a bird watcher's tour of 46 different areas of North America. It is not a conventional guide book, nor is it intended to be all inclusive.

All of the essays are heretofore unpublished. Among the authors are Herbert Krause, Fred Bodsworth, Allan D. Cruickshank, Roger Tory Peterson, Alexander Spunt Jr., and George Miksch Sutton.

Mr. Pettingill is Director of the Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell University, contributing editor to Audubon Magazine, and author of the Oxford guides to bird finding.

Shepard B. Clough, General Editor; Nina G. Garsoian; David L. Hicks; DAVID J. BRANDENBURG '43; Peter Gay; Otto Pflanze; and Stanley G. Payne, A History of the Western World: D. C. Heath and Co., 1964; $10.50 hardbound. Also available in two paperback editions.

A text covering the history of western civilization from its earliest times to the present in 1,303 pages, it contains a long list of advanced readings and a detailed index.

Mr. Brandenburg is a Professor of History at The American University.

James Shirley, The Cardinal, edited by CHARLES R. FORKER '51: Indiana University Press, 1964; $6.

Number 56 in the Indiana University Humanities Series, this edition of what many believe to be the last of the Elizabethan tragedies of revenge, is intended for scholarly and serious students of drama. Mr. Forker's work is based on an extensively revised doctoral dissertation that he wrote at Harvard.

Mr. Forker is a member of the faculty at Indiana University.

Notes

PETER ANASTAS '59 is the author of "One October at the Gateway" in the Spring, 1965, issue of Niobe. A second story, "A Confluence of Things," will appear in the Fall, 1965 issue.

MARK POWER '59 has a short story, "Graves" in New Directions 18, a yearly anthology.

ALUMNI CLUBS

ALBANY

President Lewis Welch '54 reports a successful meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Albany on Friday, May 7, at Schrafft's Restaurant. Alumni and wives gathered for a 6:30 p.m. social hour and 7:30 dinner, and the guest of honor was Dean Nathaniel Kendrick.

The Club re-elected Mr. Welch President, Clifford Bourgeois '46 Vice President and John Manning '33 Council Member. Frank A. Paul Jr. '55, 7 Heather Lane, Ballston Lake, N. Y., was elected Secretary-Treasurer to replace Edward Born '57, who has returned to the College as Editor of the ALUMNUS.

President Welch reports, "We enjoyed Nat's visit tremendously and realized a good turnout for the affair. The dinner meeting was preceded by a reception which allowed the several Bowdoin sub-freshmen and their parents from the area to meet the Dean."

ANDROSCOGGIN

The Club's spring dinner and ladies night was on May 18. President and Mrs. Coles were the guests of honor.

As a result of annual elections, the following are the new officers: President, G. Curtis Webber '55; Vice President, Charles H. Abbott '57; Secretary-Treasurer, James J. Sacco '55; and Alumni Council Member, Shepard Lee '47. Elected Directors were Robert Schonland '21, E. Shepley Paul II '19, and Robert W. Clifford '59.

The officers will soon announce detailed plans for the coming year. An important feature will be the monthly luncheon meetings, on second Tuesdays at noon, at Stecino's Restaurant, Middle St., Lewiston.

BOSTON

The Club had as its speakers at monthly luncheon meetings last spring Prof. James Moulton of the Biology Department; Edward Logue of the Boston Redevelopment Authority; Winthrop Walker '36, Member-at-Large of the Alumni Council; and Prof. Herbert Coursen Jr. of the English Dept.

The Club sponsored its annual "Bowdoin Night at the Pops" on May 13.

In the spring the officers voted to establish a Bowdoin Club of Boston Scholarship. The initial grant of $250, for use during the 1965-66 academic year, is to be assigned to a deserving upperclassman from the area served by the Club.

Plans for the current year have been formulated. Interested alumni should write Secretary Dean Ridlon '57, State Street Bank & Trust, 53 State St., Boston.

BOWDOIN TEACHERS'

The Club held its annual campus meeting on April 24, with almost 120 alumni, undergraduates, and members of the faculty and staff present.

Speakers during the day-long affair were Associate Director of Admissions Robert Mellow; Paul Hazelton '42, Chairman of the Department of Education; Hubert Shaw '36, Director of Admissions; Prof. Albert R. Thayer '22, Faculty Representative Member of the Alumni Council; Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason Jr.; Prof. Roger Howell '58 of the History Department; and Dr. Maurice Taylor, Visiting Professor of Physics on the Tallman Foundation.

Wilbert Snow '07, Professor of English Emeritus at Wesleyan University, was presented the first Distinguished Bowdoin Educator Award.

Bowdoin educators in the State of Maine will be invited to attend the fall dinner meeting on Thursday evening, Oct. 7, at the Cumberland Club. It will be held in conjunction with the annual state conference of the Maine Teachers' Association. The speaker will be Prof. Herbert Brown H'63, author of Sills of Bowdoin and Chairman of the Maine State Department of Education.

BRUNSWICK

The annual spring dinner and ladies' night was held on May 5 at the College.

During dessert, the Bowdoin Bachelors sang. President George Erswell '47 presented a surprise birthday cake to Secretary-Treasurer Pete Fortin '37, who was celebrating his 50th birthday that very day.

The following were elected officers for the coming year: President, John Caldwell '47; Vice President, Dr. John Bachulus '22; Secretary-Treasurer, Norman Duggan '44; and Alumni Council Member, Emerson Zeitler '20. Elford Stover Jr. '58 and Douglas Morton '55 continue for another year as Directors. Five more were elected for two-year terms: Frederick Drake '34, Dr. Bertrand Dionne '37, Elden Barbour '12, Sanford Cousins '20, and Nathan Watson '35.

The door prize, a Bowdoin armchair, was won by Dr. Jacob Smith '31 of Bath.

BUFFALO

Prof. William Whiteside was the guest of the Club at its annual spring dinner and ladies' night on May 6.

Convener George Phillips Jr. '54 reports that the following attended: Mr. and Mrs. David Dean '52, John Rex '62, Mr. and Mrs. C. Russell Kelleran Jr. '52, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sherrerd Jr. '52, Patrick O'Brien '62, Mr. and Mrs. J. Morgan Heusler '46, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Showalter Jr. '48, and George Craighead '25.

CAPE COD

Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 was guest speaker at the Club's spring dinner meeting on May 21. He brought the latest news of the campus and answered many questions.

Present in addition to the speaker were President Brian Connor '27 and Mrs. Connor, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Reed '23, the Clifford Parchers '23, the Fuller Marshalls '47, and Vice President Ted Brodie '52.

CENTRAL NEW YORK

Club Secretary Edward Hildreth '18 reports that 20 alumni and wives gathered for the spring dinner and ladies' night on May 7. Special guest was Prof. William Whiteside, who talked about the Senior Center.

The Club also met on Aug. 13 and had Prof. and Mrs. William Shipman as guests.

CHICAGO

Club President Dick Means '44 reports, "Our Chicago group had a fine meeting with Professor Bill and Alison Shipman on June 24 at my home. Some 20 alumni and wives were present, principally from the North Shores, with the exception of Howie Vogel and his wife, who traveled by two different trains from the far south side to Lake Bluff, which is 35 miles north of Chicago. . . .

"Bill Shipman handled the meeting very well and raised some interesting points for discussion regarding future curriculum requirements. When he asked for comments and suggestions, he got plenty! He also gave us some very interesting comments on the Senior Center and its favorable effects on the campus."

CLEVELAND

Swimming Coach Charles Butt was guest of the Club at its spring dinner and ladies' night on May 13.

President Cal Vanderbeek '49 reports, "Charlie's slides of the 1964 Olympic Games were excellent!"

CONNECTICUT

The annual meeting and ladies' night was attended by 75 alumni, parents, sub-freshmen, and guests on May 7.

Secretary Robert Smith '60 reports, "President Ralph Keirstead '26 introduced Dr. John Cartland Jr. '39, President of the Alumni Council, who, in turn, presented Prof. Wilbert Snow '07, the winner of the first Distinguished Bowdoin Educator Award.

"President Coles, the principal speaker, reported on the state of the College, and Dr. Charles Barbour '33, an Overseer of the College, presented a check for more than $500 to President Coles, to be added to the principal of the Connecticut Scholarship Fund.

"The following officers were elected: President, Stanwood Fish '22; Vice President, Welles Standish II '51; Secretary-Treasurer, Robert Smith '60; Luncheon Chairman, Robert T. Spencer '60; Alumni Council Member, Charles Scoville '52; and Alternate Council Member, Dr. John Shoukimas '38. William Daley '58 is the new Chairman of the Prospective Students Committee. Daniel Pettengill '37, Dr. Thomas Donovan '44, H. Newman Marsh '45, Robert Spencer '60, and Jerome Gracey '55 were elected Directors."

Monthly luncheons will continue. The group will meet at the University Club on the third Thursday of every month, starting Oct. 21. Interested alumni are invited to contact Luncheon Chairman Robert Spencer '60, 172 Natchaug Drive, Glastonbury, Conn.

KNOX-LINCOLN-WALDO

The Club held its late spring dinner meeting and ladies' night on Wednesday, June 23, at the Thorndike Hotel in Rockland. Twenty-six alumni and guests were present, including special guests from Brunswick, Executive Secretary and Mrs. Wolcott A. Hokanson Jr. '50.

President Rex Garrett '36 presided and introduced the speaker. Mr. Hokanson spoke informally and brought the latest news from the campus.

LONG ISLAND

Executive Secretary Wolcott Hokanson Jr. '50 was guest of the Club at its spring dinner meeting on May 6. About 15 alumni were present, and there was a lively discussion and exchange of questions before and after the guest's informal report on the College.

New officers were elected. They are: President, Daniel Dayton '49; 1st Vice President, Russ Longyear '57; 2nd Vice President, Bob Bassinette '44; Secretary, Bill Barney '43; and Treasurer, James Fawcett '58. Retiring President Jack Craig '41 was elected Alumni Council Member, and John Papacosma '58 is his alternate. Members of the Executive Committee are Pete Curran '46, Tom Sheehy '41, Mort Trachtenberg '39, Tom Howard '39, and Hal Oshry '40.

NEW JERSEY

Prof. and Mrs. Herbert Brown H'63 were guests at the spring dinner meeting on May 14.

Secretary George Bacon '15 reports, "Everyone enjoyed the evening, especially Herbie's inspiring report on the College."

New officers were elected. They are: President, Arthur Hamblen '48; Vice President, Joseph Woods '47; Secretary, George Bacon '15; Treasurer, Ernest Fifield '11; Alumni Council Member, Peter Grant '48.

PENOBSCOT

The Club had two successful meetings during the past year. Prof. Nathan Dane II '37 was guest at the fall dinner meeting, and Director of Admissions Hubert Shaw '36 spoke at the spring meeting.

PHILADELPHIA

President John Hovey '55 welcomed nearly 90 alumni and guests and introduced visitors from the College at the annual dinner and ladies' night on Feb. 6.

Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50 spoke on recent alumni events on campus, and Prof. Athern Daggett '25 talked about his experiences conducting one of the first Senior Seminars. President Coles, the principal speaker, brought the Club up to date on current happenings and plans at the College.

John Church '54, Glee Club Concert Coordinator, reports, "On March 30, the Club sponsored the Glee Club at the William Penn Charter School, in suburban Germantown. The auditorium was nearly filled and the reaction of the audience was extremely favorable.

"We did not charge admission but rather sent a letter to alumni and friends requesting contributions. We received enough money to just about break even.

"The concert was a great success largely as the result of a lot of work by Al Baker '51, Dave Crowell '49, Rus Crowell '55, Ron Golz '56, John Malcolm '54, and Roy Knight '50."

The Club held a number of monthly luncheons throughout the spring and the practice will be continued this year. Starting on Oct. 6, the group will meet at noon on the first Wednesday of every month through May (except April), at the Yale Club. Interested alumni should contact Luncheon Chairman John Malcolm Jr. '54, Bell Telephone Co., Public Relations Dept., 1 Parkway, Philadelphia 2.

PITTSBURGH

Assistant Treasurer Glenn McIntire '25 was the guest of the Club at the winter stag meeting on Dec. 9.

Retiring President John Succop '45 introduced Mr. McIntire, who brought the group up to date on campus news. Elections were held, with the following results: President, Fritz Kleibacker '31; Secretary-Treasurer, Les Leonetti '57; and Fred Willey '17, Alumni Council Member.

On Jan. 16 the Club held an informal evening meeting, at which Football Coach Peter Kostacopoulos was guest. He showed film highlights of Bowdoin's successful 1964 season as the Club entertained Pittsburgh area high school students and secondary school guidance counselors.

The Club sponsored another informal meeting on March 23, when Basketball Coach Ray Bicknell was the guest from the College. Interested sub-freshmen were invited.

SEATTLE

Despite its distance from Maine, the Club remains active. Basketball Coach Ray Bicknell spoke at an informal dinner meeting on March 16.

Alumni in the area are invited to keep in touch with M. Chandler Redman '34, Convener and Council Member, 2418 Smith Tower, Seattle, Wash. 98104.

SPRINGFIELD

The Club sponsored a successful Glee Club concert on March 26.

On April 30, the Club entertained as its special guests the Bowdoin Bachelors. Approximately 20 alumni and wives attended the social hour and dinner. After singing a number of songs, three of the Bachelors spoke informally and answered questions: Ted Davis '67 commented on undergraduate social life; Dick Fontaine '65 reported on the Senior Center program, and Ed Leydon '66 talked about Bowdoin fraternities.

VERMONT

Prof. Robert Beckwith was the guest of the Club at its spring dinner and ladies' meeting on May 1 in Burlington.

Convener Bob Peakes '36 reports, "Present were Dexter and Jill Morris '62, Bob and Peg Peakes '36, Malcolm Daggett '29, Sumner and Julia McIntire '33, Douglas Stewart '57, Ralph and Mary Kidd '43, Donald and Betty Richter '56, and, of course, Professor Beckwith.

"Professor Beckwith's informal yet incisive, cogent remarks were so well received that, when he concluded, he was made an honorary member of the Bowdoin Club of Vermont and forthwith presented with a personal membership card, duly certified by the Convener."

WASHINGTON

The Club's annual spring dinner and ladies' night was on April 27. "Over 70 attended," Secretary Jay Carson '53 reports, "and Toastmaster Robert Hale '10 and President Coles were in fine form.

"The following were elected officers for the coming year: President, Raymond Jensen '48; Vice President, Prescott Pardoe '51; Secretary, Jay Carson '53; Treasurer, Peter Smith '60; Program Chairman, Burton Tower '30, and Alumni Council Member, Edwin Stetson '41."

Secretary Carson further reports: "We had a wonderful Bowdoin Family Day on June 26!

"Ed Stetson deserves the finest accolades for planning and executing this affair. The lobsters and clams were prepared and served in the accustomed Maine tradition."

The Club will continue its monthly luncheon meetings at the Sphinx Club on the first Tuesday of each month.

WESTERN MAINE

The Club held two dinner meetings during the past season.

Prof. Alton Gustafson was guest speaker on Dec. 1. Approximately 30 alumni attended the meeting in Farmington.

Dean Nathaniel Kendrick was the speaker at the spring dinner meeting on May 14. Club members gathered for a 6:30 social hour and 7:30 dinner at Madison's Restaurant in Rumford, where the proprietor is Ralph Sterns '29.

WORCESTER

Club Secretary Cloyd Small '20 writes, "Forty-one alumni and guests attended the annual dinner meeting and ladies' night on May 6.

"Dr. Chester Brown '35, President and Council Member, introduced Dean Nathaniel Kendrick, guest of honor. The Dean gave a talk about the College and answered many questions."

'95

One of the scholarships established by the late Hoyt Moore and Mrs. Moore has been awarded to Barry J. Sanford '69 of Bar Harbor.

Joe Roberts represented the Class at Commencement. Also in June, on the occasion of the anniversary of the 1921 flood in Pueblo, Colo., his heroic exploits were the subject of a long and interesting feature story in the Pueblo Star-Journal. Joe and a friend were responsible for the rescue of several people during the flood.

JASPER J. STAHL
Waldoboro

We deeply regret that since we last wrote, other friends, comrades, and classmates have "joined the innumerable caravan which moves into that mysterious realm." On May 10, Nick Carter (Charles F.) died at his home in Cambria, Calif. Then on June 25 Dr. Clarence L. Scamman passed away. The Class was represented by Thomas D. Ginn at services for "Scam" on June 28. His death leaves your scribe the last surviving Zeta Psi member of the Class of 1909 at Bowdoin.

Those gathering at Commencement this year were Bob Pennell, Col. Stanley, Carl Stone, and Albert Moulton. Your scribe should have been there but he was faced by a conflict of appointments. It was on Bowdoin's Commencement Day that he was chosen Alumnus of the Year at his prep school, a famous New England Academy (est. 1801). This involved acceptance of a Revere Bowl and a speech at a Commencement Dinner. Incidentally Bob Pennell at near 80 was there for the graduation of his son, William, who graduated near the top of his class and received a Phi Beta Kappa appointment; some record for both father and son, marred only by the fact that history was not repeating itself.

A memorial service was held on May 24 for our classmate, Justice Burton. The announcement read as follows:

"A meeting of the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the Supreme Court Building on Monday, May 24, 1965, at eleven o'clock in the morning, is called to take appropriate action in the memory of the late Justice Burton. At 12:30 in the afternoon the resolution adopted at this meeting will be presented to the Court, and the Attorney General will address the Court.

"Justice Burton was appointed to the Court by Mr. Truman and it was anticipated that the ex-President would be in attendance."

Ernest Pottle's grandson, Martin, was graduated from Norwich University and commissioned a second lieutenant in the ROTC on June 13.

Many men of 1909 will recall Mildred Rich, wife of "Bud" Rich. She died in Portland on June 29.

Carl Stone, along with Newman, one of our few remaining peripatetics, has recently given some time to exploring the woods of northeastern areas of Maine on foot.

We have a letter written by our old classmate, Anand Sidoba Hiwale, and loaned by Paul Newman. The letter is dated May 3, 1911. We shall say a bit in the next number of the Alumnus about the life and work of Hiwale in India. This will be all for now, unless the living loosen up and furnish us a word or two about themselves.

CHARLES S. F. LINCOLN '91

Dr. Charles Stuart Fessenden Lincoln, "Mr. Bowdoin Alumnus" to many generations of alumni, died on July 5, 1965, in Brunswick at the age of 95. Born in that town on Aug. 13, 1869, he prepared for college at the local high school and following his graduation from Bowdoin studied at the Hospital College of Medicine in Louisville, Ky., from which he received his M.D. degree in 1894. He interned at the Salem (Mass.) Hospital and then practiced in Louisville from 1895 until 1898, when he became a medical missionary of the Episcopal Church in Shanghai, China. There he practiced and also taught in the Medical Department of St. John's College until 1924, when he returned to this country. He served as Bowdoin's College Physician from 1925 until 1927, when he officially retired. Since that time he had lived in Brunswick from May until early November and in Florida during the winter months, except for this past year.

Dr. Lincoln, always an active man, played softball with the Kids and the Kubs in St. Petersburg, Fla., where every player must be at least 75 years old. He was Senior Warden of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Brunswick for a number of years and served as President of the Pejepscot Historical Society, of which he was a founding member. He was for many years Convener and Alumni Council Member for the St. Petersburg Bowdoin Club and in 1940 was the recipient of the Alumni Service Award, the highest honor which alumni can bestow upon a fellow alumnus. Eight years earlier, in 1932, he had received from the College an honorary master of science degree, the citation for which said, in part, "... for 25 years medical missionary at St. John's College, Shanghai, where his work was marked by quiet heroism and intense devotion; since his return to this country gladly serving his college in emergency as College Physician and in the Department of Biology; known from Maine to California as a loyal Psi U; devoted churchman in whose creed and life there has never seemed to be any conflict between science and religion."

Until 1941 Dr. Lincoln served as Class Agent for 1891 in the Alumni Fund, and for many years, until 1952, he edited the class notes section of the ALUMNUS. It was his custom every year to attend the national convention of Psi Upsilon, and in 1962 that fraternity awarded him a citation for his "deep and continued devotion" to its ideals. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. George T. Johnson of Fayetteville, Ark., and Mrs. Clair Wilcox of Swarthmore, Pa.; a son, John D. Lincoln '29 of Hingham, Mass.; a nephew, John L. Baxter '16 of Topsham; three nieces, Mrs. Allen E. Morrell of Brunswick, Mrs. Alonzo B. Holmes of Topsham, and Mrs. Sarah B. Langley of Brunswick; and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

SETH G. HALEY '07

Seth Gurney Haley, who for many years was Superintendent of Schools in West Haven, Conn., died in New Haven, Conn., on June 24, 1965. Born on Sept. 26, 1881, in Portsmouth, N. H., he prepared for college at Thornton Academy in Saco and following his graduation from Bowdoin cum laude spent a year with the International Banking Corp. in London, England. From 1908 until 1915 he was Principal of the Collinsville (Conn.) High School. After a year as Principal of the high school in East Hartford, Conn., a year as Principal of Monson (Mass.) Academy, and another year in France during World War I with the American Expeditionary Force in Y.M.C.A. work, he became Principal of West Haven (Conn.) High School. In 1933 he was named Superintendent of Schools in West Haven.

In 1952 West Haven named a school in honor of Mr. Haley. In November of 1961, upon the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary, he and Mrs. Haley were the guests of honor at a testimonial dinner attended by more than 600 people. He had served as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Congregational Church in West Haven and as Vice President of the New Haven Council of Boy Scouts, was for some years a Director of the West Haven

Library, and was active in the West Haven Area Community Chest for many years. He was also a member of numerous educational organizations and had held office in several of them. From 1940 to 1947 he was Chairman of the West Haven branch of the American Red Cross. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Hill Haley, whom he married on Dec. 21, 1911, in Collinsville, Conn.; and two brothers, Herbert E. Haley of Bradenton, Fla., and Ralph Haley of Phoenix, Ariz. His fraternity was Zeta Psi.

One of Mr. Haley's former pupils wrote of him a year ago, "The important thing about this man is the impact of his personality and character upon his students. By his own example he was able to impart in their minds and hearts some ideas as to what the finer things in life are and a desire to be like him. As a teacher he was one of those rare individuals who make their pupils feel that it is desirable and pleasurable to have more knowledge and culture. He could bat your ears off, but no one ever carried a grudge. I don't know of any other teacher who for so many years carried the love and respect of his pupils over into their later lives and his also."

CLARENCE L. SCAMMAN '09

Dr. Clarence Linwood Scamman, who was for many years Director of the Division of Public Health of the Commonwealth Fund in New York City, died on June 25, 1965, in Brookline, Mass. Born on June 7, 1888, in St. Albans, he prepared for college at Fairfield High School and was graduated from Bowdoin as a member of the Class of 1909. In 1912 he received his M.D. degree from the Medical School of Maine and in 1947 earned a master of public health degree from the Harvard University-Massachusetts Institute of Technology School of Public Health. After practicing medicine in East Millinocket for four years, he served during World War I as a captain in the Army Medical Corps and the Army Ambulance Section. After the war he returned to East Millinocket to practice until 1921, then spent a year at the Harvard-Technology School of Public Health, and in June of 1922 became Deputy Superintendent of Health in Rhode Island. From 1926 until 1931 he was Deputy Commissioner with the Massachusetts State Department of Health.

Dr. Scamman joined the Division of Public Health of the Commonwealth Fund in 1931 and served as its Director until 1949, when he became Medical Director of the Massachusetts Division of the American Cancer Society. Before his retirement in 1958, he served as President of the Massachusetts Health Association. He was a Fellow of the American Public Health Association and the American Medical Association and a member of the American Epidemiological Society.

In recent years, Dr. Scamman and his wife, the former Flora A. Gradie, whom he married in Bangor on June 12, 1917, had spent winters in St. Petersburg, Fla., and summers in the Maine town of Surry. In addition to Mrs. Scamman, survivors include a son, Richard E. Scamman of Brandon, Vt.; a daughter, Mrs. Joanne S. Thompson of Newington, Conn.; and six grandchildren. He was a member of Zeta Psi Fraternity.

RAYMOND H. LARRABEE '16

Raymond Horace Larrabee, a retired educator and businessman, died suddenly on June 10, 1965, at his home in Bridgton. Born in that town on July 25, 1893, he prepared for college at the local high school and following his graduation from Bowdoin taught school in Virginia and was associated with his father in business before serving for two years as a sergeant in the Army during World War I. After the war he was for a year in the export business in New York City, taught school in Bridgton, was associated with an electrical appliance firm in Portland, was in business in Florida from 1929 to 1933, and then for seven years was manager for Davis and Co., grocers, in Bridgton. For some time he conducted his own business, Larrabee's Maytag Store, also in Bridgton, and worked at the state liquor store there. He retired in 1957.

Mr. Larrabee was a member of the Masons and the American Legion. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mildred Arey Larrabee, whom he married on May 25, 1918, in Bridgton; a brother, William H. Larrabee of Bridgton; and two sisters, Mrs. Mildred Cockburn of Bridgton and Miss Francina Larrabee of Augusta. His fraternity was Chi Psi.

BOYD W. BARTLETT '17

Brigadier General Boyd Wheeler Bartlett, a Trustee of the College since 1961 and a former member of the faculty at both Bowdoin and the United States Military Academy, died on June 24, 1965, in Castine after a long illness. Born on June 20, 1897, in Castine, he prepared for college at the local high school and was graduated from Bowdoin summa cum laude. He then entered the Military Academy at West Point, where he ranked third in a class that included Generals Gruenther, Twining, McAuliffe, and Wedemeyer. He was graduated from West Point with a B.S. degree in 1919 and was commissioned in the Corps of Engineers. After a tour of duty that included a survey of French, German, and Italian battlefields, he received a B.S. degree in civil engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1921.

Becoming a civilian in 1922, General Bartlett was for five years a physicist and group supervisor with the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York. In 1926 he received an M.S. degree in physics from Columbia University and the next year joined the Bowdoin faculty as Assistant Professor of Physics. He became a full professor in 1931 and a year later was awarded his fifth earned degree — a Ph.D. in physics from Columbia. In 1934-35, while on sabbatical leave, he did research in atomic physics at the University of Munich in Germany. At the beginning of World War II he was Coordinator of the Civilian Pilot Training Program at the College, before returning to active duty with the Army as a major in 1942. During the next 19 years, until his retirement in 1961, he taught at the Military Academy, where he served as a member of the Academic Board and as Chairman of the Athletic Board and Admissions Committee. From 1957 until 1961 he was Chairman of the Department of Electrical Engineering.

General Bartlett's pioneering work in initiating the study of nuclear physics at the Academy resulted in the installation of a nuclear laboratory that included a student-built cyclotron, a sub-critical nuclear reactor, and associated instrumentation for experiments in the observations and effects of nuclear radiation. Upon his retirement he was awarded an Oak Leaf cluster for the Legion of Merit, which he had earned in 1946. Three years later Bowdoin conferred upon him an honorary doctor of science degree. He was elected to the Board of Overseers in 1952 and to the Board of Trustees in 1961.

A Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a former Vice Chairman of the Middle Atlantic Section of the American Society for Engineering Education, General Bartlett was a member of the American Physical Society and the American Association of Physics Teachers. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Allen Bartlett, whom he married in Peabody, Mass., on July 3, 1920; a brother, Frederick S. Bartlett of Radnor, Pa.; a nephew, Thomas S. V. Bartlett '45 of Chicago, Ill.; and a niece, Mrs. Raymond Miller of Strafford-Wayne, Pa. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and Phi Beta Kappa.

FRANK J. HARRIS '24

Frank Joseph Harris died on June 8, 1965, in Lewiston after a long illness. Born on Nov. 21, 1898, in Durham, he prepared for college at Lisbon Falls High School and attended Bowdoin for part of his freshman year. For several years he was manager of the Lisbon Falls Grain Store and then for 18 years was a salesman for the J. B. Ham Co. in Auburn. After serving as manager of the General Mills Grain Store in Auburn, he was a timekeeper at the South Portland Shipyard during World War II. After the war he was a salesman for various concerns and was for nine years employed by the Bates College Maintenance Department before his retirement in September of 1964 because of ill health.

Mr. Harris was a member of the Calvary Methodist Church in Lewiston, an honorary member of the Lisbon Falls Lobster Club, and a Mason and member of the Shrine for many years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Miriam Marston Harris, whom he married on July 18, 1931; two sons, Franklin J. Harris Jr. of Dighton, Mass., and Paul R. Harris of Lewiston; and one sister, Mrs. Douglas Taylor of Lisbon Falls. His fraternity was Delta Upsilon.
